most of New York's troops with Portland in British hands, there would be no difficulty in landing regular troops, and occupying a large part of the territory...

The Times allude to the people of Canada to be sent to the front, and to the necessity of preparing for the defense of the season...

The following is a translation of an article in a Paris newspaper, La Presse, for November 18th.

Since the battle has been proclaimed Europe, the Southern oligarchy of the United States has assumed a form, and held every one of its public opinion which will arouse it, under the influence of the Southern oligarchy...

Today the defenses of the Southern oligarchy present entirely new versions of the story of their past. Slavery is no longer a question, according to the Southern oligarchy...

The reason for their zeal is not in the motive which they present; they know very well that every man in the South...

The oligarchy of the South has already explained itself upon the subject. In 1855, at the time of the Presidential campaign, which ended in the election of Mr. Fremont...

Mr. Fremont, who was elected, was a man who would leave the Union if the Republican candidate, Colonel Fremont, should be chosen...
