In ninety days more of this mailed, armed, encamped, and entrenched peace, the nations of the world will, I fear, be justified in saying to us, "You have no more right to shut up the cotton fields of the world by a vain and fruitless endeavor to reconquer the territory now in robellion, than China and Jappan had to wall themselves in." And in the eyes of international law, in the eyes of the world, and I fear in the eyes of impartial history, too, they will stand justified in breaking our blockade, in giving to the rebels means and munitions of war, and accomplishing what England desired when, with boastful hyporrisy, she added £20,000,000 sterling to her national debt in order to lodge free black communities near to us, and to excite agitation in our midst.

In ninety days—for, sir, let me say here that already complaints come, not from the men, for their country, but from officers, in the neighborhood of the Charleston and Savannah railroad, that their men are engaged in digging trenches and performing the drudgery of unskilled laborers, while other men of darker complexion are roaming listlessly about unemployed, though anxious to give such proof of their devotion to our cause. We must learn that one of the first laws of war requires a belligerent to cut off all the resources of his enemy. Save life, [especially save the lives of your own men, but cut off all the resources of their resources. We are too generous to deprive them of them. We are, as I have said, pluying policemen to protect them. But, sir, in less than ninety days—to come back to the point of time—we shall be advancing in the month of April, when our Northern men will begin to feel the effect of the heat in the neighborhood of Ship Island and the mouths of the army, and the government of that period of minety days, I say that it is not a double but a New York, for the purpose of securing a more effi-cient organization. Stuart, of Philadelphia, chairman of the Commission, was the next speaker, and dwelt earnestly upon the important duties which this organization must perform. Having visited the camps around Washington, he had come back with an awakened sense of the magnitude of necessities which were opened before him. From the tower of the Smithsonian Institute the gaze of the spectator rests only on the innumerable camps with which every hill and valley is covered, and this is but a part of the great field in which the Commission is called to labor. With the navy, the whole number of men now in the service of our Government in its endeavors to put down rebellion, will reach very nearly 760,000. The influence which may be exerted upon this vest multitude is almost incalculable. It extends to the battle field, and even beyond that, into eternity itself. It is a question also, whether we will have these men come back to us degenerate and degraded or under the impulse of Christian purposes

The chief centre of its ontward observance in this city has been at the Noonday Prayer Meoling, Sansom street, below Ninth, where the meetings during this week have been held from 12 M. to 1 P. M., instead of the usual hour. The meetings, in consequence of this special interest awakened by general announcements from the pulpits, have been very largely attended, and prosecuted with commendable harmony and unwonted spirit. In addition to these, union meetings for prayer have also been held every afternoon in various churches throughout the city. At the Noonday Meeting yesterday, the special subject of prayer was "The Word of God; that it may be received with increased faith, reverence, and love; that its assailants may be collightened and brought into the way of truth; that the power of the Divine Spirit may attend its private study and circulation throughout the world." In the afternoon, at 3½ o'clock, there was a union meeting held in the Rev. Dr. Taylor's church, Teuth and Filbert streets, for the same object. The concluding afternoon intenting of the series will be held this (Saturday) afternoon in the Church of the Epiphany (Episcopal), corner of Pretacnth and Chestnut streets, to be presided over by The Teverbana Mathousian and humane conduct.
