Said Forge is most conveniently located for business, ad-joining it e Reading Railroad, and so connected therewith that locomotives can take away and deliver cars of iron, coal, and other freight, without cost for hauling. Shutes run outside the building, by which coal, scrap iron, &c., can be dumpen close to each furnace, without extra cost for hauling or labor. This Forge is capable of accounting the heaviest over, having forged and fluished the main shatts of the "Adriatic," (believed to be the largest ever mace.) besides complete sets of forgings for mum-runs atenniships for Government and others. The city of Read-ing presents peculiar advantages for the successful opera-tion of such a torge. It is within 58 mil-s of Philadelphia, connected there with by the Reading Bailroad, and the Schulkill (160 on) canal, 125 miles by rail direct from New York, 135 from Baitimore, 54 from Harrisburg, and 34 from the Schulkill coal rezion, whence the best an-thracite coal can be phaced at the furnace doors for about $2.26 per ton. Reading is situated in one of the finest agricultural district of Pennsylvania, has a population of 25,000, and is noted for its general word y othe susters, iron of every description can be precured by the forge at the lowest prices.
