aid, he had written as an account of his visit to Manus. sas, intended for his own private family. And when the idea was first presented to his mind to give it in public, he felt that it was necessary to array it in company dress; but thinking that this might not strengthen, but rather impair the strict truthfulness of it, he preferred and had concluded to read the narrative in its original, The Doctor then proceeded to narrate in tolerably full. though not tedious, detail, his visit to the famous battle-ground of Manassas.

The semi-circular five-miles fortifications in that vi cinity, he said, on approaching, looked very formidable though, upon closer inspection, this estimate was not sustained. The lecturer, however, saw none of the "Quaker guns" so much talked about; still, he did not doub that there had been some wooden guns employed by the rebels, in order to mislead us. His own hypothesis was, that the rebeis had been amply prepared to fight last fall, and continued so until the condition of the roads became such as to prevent a forward movement of the Federal army, when they gradually withdrew a large part of their

In a conversation with a gentleman residing on the prot, he had been told that the army, during the early part of the winter, at Manassas, had numbered about ety-one thousand men, but that as many as fifty-sever thousand of these had been away at one time, on furlough. He knew that these facts would be variously re ceived by the friends and critics of General McClellan. The lecturer's approuncement that he himself was a "friend" was received with appleume. He gave some graphic and harrowing accounts of what he saw on the battle-field, and adduced the most inconnestable proof of the Parbarity and inhumanity of our enemy. He say a number of bodies of Union soldiers that had not been buried, which were headless and foot-less, these extremities having, there was reason to believe, been removed for the purpose of manufacturing trinkets, of various kind . from the bones, for the gratification of the rebels. The carcasses were not distinguishable f.om those of a dog, or any other animal, exepling by the fragments of clothing.

It appeared pretty conclusive to the lecturer that our disaster at Bull Run was an unfortunate accident, and that, with better management and a knowledge of our true position, it need not have occurred. His intercourse with the contrabands, as related by the lecturer, was interesting. He thought there was good reason for believing that the blacks in the Border States were much better prepared for freedom and taking care of themselves than they received credit for. His own experience was, that they were excoedingly cautious, thoughtful, considerate, and reticent in expressing themselves in the presence of those with much more like white people than was usually supposed His descript on of the trophy-hunting, by himself an l party, was in general very similar in its details to those which have been repeatedly published in the newspapers since the evacuation of that rebel stronghold. Interesting Course of Lectures by Professor Leidy.

At the request of the trustees of the University o

Pennsylvania, Joseph Leidy, M. D., Professor of Ana-tomy in that institution, has consented to deliver a course f twelve lectures in the amphith atre of the University, on the subjects of General Natural History, Comparative Anatomy, and Physiology, for the instruction of the students in the various departments of the institution, and our citize. s generally who may feel inclined to attend them. The lectures (the introductory to hich was given on yesterday week) will be given regularly hereafter at 1.20 P. M. on Tuesday of each week s audience yesterday was quite large; and among the evidently-interested lesteners present we noticed a number of well-known physicians, some of our les druggists, gentlemen eminent in the various fields of science, and a sprinkling of ladies. The lecture was devoted, in a measure, to a resumé of the previous one, which the development of all vegetable and ani-al life was traced with scientific minuteness and accuracy to the organic cell. The illustrations by Profespor Leidy, of the now well-established fact, that all organized bodies, whether in the vegetable or animal kingdom, tural parentage, were exceedingly interesting, and were presented in a form at once intelligible and attractive to all. The specialities designated at the commencement of s lecture yesterday, to be made the subject of inquiry and illustration, were the following: Shell, (including the hard covering of the various custacia;) chitine for the hard skin of insects;) hone, cartilage, connective tissue, elastic tissue, muscular tissue, nervous tissue

E Not more than half of there divisions, however, were taken up before the hour allotted for the lecture had expired, and the remainder will, therefore, we presume, be considered at the next. Professor Leidy's high reputa-tion as a man of science bids fair to be not only fully stained, but augmented by this interesting course of mid-day studies. His diagrams, specimens of living and dead vegetable substances, dissected parts of animals. and preserved organs of the human body, used in demon-strating to his audience the tacts embodied in his explanations, are admirably adapted to instruct effecti style of presenting scientific subjects, we may also state, is excellent, and we hope that all who can do so without inconvenience to themselves, will avail themselves of the valuable and fascinating information afforded in this

The concouncement that the Rev. H. W. Bellows would deliver a "Conversational Lecture" at Concert Hall last ovening, narrating what he saw in a visit to Manassas, within three days after its evacuation, attracted a highly respectable, though not very numerous, audience to that icoality at the appointed hour.

Ha oponed with an anecdote illustrating the fact that in this ago current subjects lose their interest almost as quickly as they fird it, a practical proof of which he saw in the comparatively little curiosity now evinced on the part of the public to hear this lecture. The latter, he said, he had written as an account of his visit to Manas-AMERICAN HOTEL-Chestnut st., above Fifth. Wm B Tucker, Baltimore

H. BOLLEs has cured two flousand Chronic and Acute cases within less than three years in Philadelphia, all of which cases had resisted the treatment of the most eminent medical men.

Please take notice that Prof. B. does not advertise any certificates of cures, except those cured in this city. any certificates of cures, except those cured in this city.

Prof. B. has established himself for life in this city, and his success in treating the sick is a sufficient guarantee that he claims nothing but scientific facts in his discovery in the use of Electricity as a reliable therapeutic agent.

N. B.—It will be well for the diseased to recollect that Prof. B. has given a word of caution in his panishlet to guard them against trusting their health in the hands of those in this city claiming to treat diseases according to his discovery. This caution may seem severe on those using Electricity at hazard, but it is the severity of truth and designed for the good of humanity.
