ADDRESS OF THE REV. MB. CHAMBERS. 15,990 Mr. Chambers said be was opposed to wars from principle, and that he was becoming more so every day. He ciple, and that he was becoming more so every day. He was not merely opposed to this war, but to all wars, and, if he should live to be a hundred years old, he would continue to throw his influence against wars to the end. Yet, that our Union might be restored and preserved, was the ordent prayer of his heart. He hoped that these efforts to Christianize the soldiers would not be abated corres to Christianize the soldiers would not be abated when the war was over, for God knew there was room for a work of this kind, and it ought to be followed up. He spoke of the work now going on, in his own church, in making parments for the wounded. The lattice of his congregation, it appears, are zealously engaged two alternoons in each week in this way; and on Sunday morting and afternoon there had been collections taken in his church for the wounded soldiers, in which he had notified the largest proportion of large, arges that had noticed the largest proportion of bank notes that he had wer seen in a church collection. ADDRESS OF GEORGE H. STUART, ESQ. Mr. Stuart said we were living in eventful times. We sear the sound of war in almost every southern and south-western breeze that reaches the city of Brotherly Love; but above the sound of the cannon the Christian could hear 37,761 but above the sound of the cannon the Christian could has the voice of Him + ho rides on the white wind and directs the storm, proclaiming to the nations, "Be still, and know that I am God?" He saw above the smoke of battle a glorious future for America. He believed that, under God, we would succeed in putting down this unnatural rebelliou, and that right speedily. In the language of Wesley, he believed that "God was with us In this context." Mr. Stuart spoke eloquently of the dreadful ravages of Mr. Stuart spoke eloquently of the droadful varages of this war, the losses it was causing in life and limb. But this was a small thing compared with the fact that thousands of these men were dying "without God and without hope!" He said he was speaking in bohalf of over seven hundred thousand souls acting in different departments of the great Federal army, and it was one of the most inviting and successful fields of labor that he had ever engaged in.

He had visited the camps on the Potomac, and now at Yorkt wu, and he had never found men so willing, and even anxious, to receive religious reading. He had, in company with several gentlemen, visited as many as thirty-tvo thousand soldiers in a single day, distributing books to them, and talking to them from the tops of omnibuses, the foot of flagstaffs, and other pisces, and with scarcely an exception the men had received their 92,823 with scarcely an exception the men had received their tracts and words with respect, and in many cases with 12,592 At the close of Mr. Stuart's remarks, the usual collection was taken up, after which a doxology was sung, and the congregation was dismissed with a benediction by the Rev. Mr. Chambers. GOUGH'S LECTURE ON SATURDAY EVENING. The neat church edifice was well filled, and the liberal collection at the close showed that this movement (which is conducted under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association of this city) is growing in favor with the public. P. B. Simons, Esq., being announced to the audience, stated on behalf of the Army Committee that for nine months a committee, appealned by the Young Man's Christian Association of this city, had been endeavoring to minister in the most practical way to the spiritual welfare of our soldiers in the tented field. In the accomplishment of this work they had distributed gratuitously over two million pages of printed matter in the form of tracts and interesting religious books, togother with a large number of Testaments. During this time thirty-four meetings had been held in various churches in this city for the purpose of obtaining the requisite means to carry on this work. In addition to their labors of this character, they had also recently commenced supplying the soldiers' hospitals here with milk (an article of health and comfort which is not provided by the Government) and were now furnishing eight hundred quarts a week to these establishments. Mr. Simons described some of the scenes he had witnessed in visiting the hospitals, stating that, while taking the wounded sufferers by the hand, he had felt like kneeling at their bedside and thanking them with his whole heart for what they had done for him, in going in his stead, and in the stead of his children, to brave the wounds and scars, and even death itself, in order to protect our homes and country. He thought that, under the circumstances, the most that we who are at home, amid peaceful surroundings, could possibly do for these men was little, indeed, compared with what they have volunteered to do for us and our children.

The first speaker of the evening was the Rey. John Allen, pastor of the church. He said he saw that his name had been put down in the advertisement for a speech, although he had come unprepared to make one. This, however, ought to make no difference, as he held that every man should be willing and able at all times to say a word in behalf of a good cause. He thought also that every man present should be willing and able to offer a prayer in his heart for the interest of this cause. Prayer, he said, involved a few innortant items; one of these was faith in the appropriateness of the thing asked for. This, he thought, was an appropriate cause—the affording of spiritual food for the minds of our soldiers. Then, again, prayer demanded a sincere heart, and a willingness to assist in procuring the answer to it. We must pray, not as hypocrites, but with homest hearts. Practically, those soldiers wore, as hall been said, suffering in our stead, and we ought at least be willing to empty our purses in their behalf. When man was benefited God was glorified, and, in fact, the only way in which God could be glorified was by benefiting man MERCHANTS' HOTEL-Fourth st., below Arch. The next speaker was the Rev. John Chambers. With an evident purpose, which some may and some may not have understood, he commenced by saying that he had no spology at all to offer to-night, farther than to say that he was suffering from a severe cold, as he evidently was from his hoarseness.

We were, he said, in the midst of a terrific war. Camp life was the most exposed of all lives. There were a hundred evil influences in all our regiments to one good influence; in all probability, there were in them a hundred unconverted men to one converted man. There are a thousand reasons why men should pray sincerely for God to heaten that cloth at this unnatural war. [Responses of Amen! Amen! all over the house ] If God had ever put a thought into the minds of men, He had unquestionably put the thought of giving the Bible to our soldiers into the minds of men, He had unquestionably put the thought of giving the Bible to our soldiers into the minds of they some mengaged in this movement.

He saw the development of noble Christianity also in the efforts now being made by kind-hearted men and women to supply the suffering in our hospitals with articles of health and comfort, and it was a significant fact that among our wounded soldiers in the West, the Sisters of Charity of the Catholic Church were making an impression upon the minds of those suffering men by their untiring acts of kindness, which could never be effaced.
