it row higher and higher until it reached and neshled in the Ark of God. The ministry wave a step towards a true state of intel-lectuality ; for all knowledge that deserves the mane, under the touch of Jesns, was but the understanding and declaration of the Word of God—the Word of. God as it came to us proclaiming near as a physical being, subject to death, and Christ as the author of immort-lity. To preach Christ aright, he said, was not merely to kell of the, great secrifice once made for sim—the knowledge of this was but the boginning it was to make Christ all in all for the soul; to preach this as the author and finisher of the believer's faith, and the pattern of a Christian's life. To leave Christ out of the publit, was to dry up the springs of the believer's joy and hope. As "the stewards of the mysteries of God," they were to bear the Gospiel seef among the most degraded and out-cast of earth, not doubting that where the Lord directed it would find a l dymmt. If was under this husbandry that the wilderness and the desert were yet to "biosson as the rose." In the "manisons of the rich this Word would give that peace which gold could not purchase, whitt to be poor it presented a vision of future blessed-ness, such as the dreams of avarice had never paintod. The last point considered was, How this Ministry was to be performed 4. One of the heid-index that its Founder had fallen a martyr to his principles. The ministry of his hereids, therefore, should be feithful and fearlies. The con-viction of this truth gave us the secret of Paul's wonder-ful fidelity and tenrilessness - under sill his truths and diffi-culties. The Lord had been the only Judge to whom Paul bowed, at upon him alone he depended for aid; and it was the conviction in the ministers of to-day that could make them faithful to the people committed to their pastoral charge. And why need the minister be troubled at the prove of the world; if he had the smiles of Unit? Luther had left us a hereic, example of this homorable fidelity. He had proceeded in the performance of whits to be hisduty regardless of the opposition of dwils or me.

of what he felt to be nightly regardless of the opposition of devils or mer. It must not be overlooked, however, that the language of Christianity was the language of love. The preacher dwelt elequently upon this feature of the ministerial office, and urged with great. force that a departure from this rule of how was a departure from the spirit of the Gospel, which he sold stood as the noblest monument of this love and tenderness ever given to guilty man. Original Poetry.

The stanzas which follow were written by a girl, only fifteen years old, whose education, from want of means and opportunity, has been very limited as yet. She lives at Ralston, Lycoming county, Pa. For the mest part, juvenile poetry is only prose run mad, but here we have reason as well as rhyme and rythm. The young writer evidently has poetical expression as well as postical feeling, and we take leave to advise her not to write too much. It would be friendly in her neighbors to lend her proper books to road, so as to give her knowledge and judgment. By and bye, we doubt not, she will have a name-provided she is judiciously instructed now :

Longing for Heaven.

[For The Press.] The scent of the early roses Came through the open door; And the jessamine flowers at the window Threw shadows on the floor.

Our little one sat on the earpet, And hummed a childish tune Lost in the dreamy stillness Of an afternoon in June. She sat within the doorway, And lifted her fine blue eyes

To the distant hazy mountains And the brilliant summer skies ; .

And she watched the white clouds floating. Like the wings of angel kind, Across the wide vnult's azure, And sighed to be left behind.

She watched them fleeing onward, She knew not where nor whence, And her little heart's wild longing Grew childishly intense ;

And she wished for their forms so airy, That she might not longer wait, But upward fly and onward, Till she reached the golden gate--

For she thought that beyond the mountain, Where the white clouds seemed to melt, Was the Beautiful Gate of the city, Where the good "Our Father " dwelt.

And she watched till the baby-wishes Made the pretty blue eyes weep, Till, with golden head on the doorsill, The little one fell asleep.

The shadows grew long and longer, As the sun sank toward the west, And still she lay in the doorway, In calm and quiet rest.

Then we lifted the darling gently, That her sleep we might not break, But we wept when we saw, as we ruised her, That she never more would wake.

 The prodigious demand of the last month, during which more than a hundred thousand articles of clothing (besides other supplies) have been issued by the Commission to 'the sick and wounded, in the army of the Potomac alone, (and probably a much larger amount to the Western and other Departments,) has roduced our stock, and although 686 cases have been received at the Washington depot since April 23d, the demand is much greater than the supply.
 A special regard to the specified list in this advertisement is besonght on the part of those sending supplies. To this is to be added a new and unexpicted want—that of cast off outer clothing—coats_pantalons, reaks; te clothe soldiers who have lost ors fouled their uniforms as to be unable to leave the hespitals on shere without fresh clothing.
