The Trip from Baltimore - Reception at the Depot and Refreshment Saloons. &c. dec.,

[Special Report for The Press.] BIOGRAPHICAL. The papers having long teemed with the sufferings, in a rebel prison, of this distinguished fellow-citizen of Irish birth, we do not propose to enlarge upon his late miseries of sour bread and salt horse, nor upon the necessity of wearing the same shirt for indefinite weeks, with the thermemeter at 100. It is sufficient that he with the inermenter at 100. It is sumicient that he arrived here yesterday, about noon, after brillian receptions in Washington and Battimore, and we now proceed to give a few items as to his origin and antecedents. His name was originally O'Corcoran. His first accestor, famed in story, was a Oolonel O'Cor-oran, spoken of in Hardiman's Irish Minstrelsy as having bravely aided in the defence of Limerick, nearly having pravely suded in the defence of Limerick, nearly two hundred years ago, against the English troops of william the Third. For this he obtained a grand public reception in his native county of Sligo, and peacefully returned to his home, in Carrowkeel, a village of that district. Here the hero of our article was born, in 1829, and is now, therefore, thirtycle was born, in 1829, and is now, therefore, thirtythree years of age. His father was a retired half-pay officer of the British army, and had dropped the profix of "O" before his name. Young Michael Corcoran passed his early years in country pursuits, and, in 1849, at the age of twenty, emigrated to this country, in search of the fortune which he has now successfully found. He had received a plain English education, which his natural talent and energy had enabled him considerably to improve. For several years he worked for wages in dif-ferent establishments, till finally he became proprietor of a bar-room in Prince street, New York, which his attractive manners soon rendered a favorite resort of ward politicians. His recent politics were those of a Douglas Demograt; but, during the Fremont and Bu-obsnen campaign, he voted for the latter, and obtained. on his accession to the Presidency, a position in the re-gistry department of the New York Post Office—congistry department of the New York Post Office—con-sizing, at the same time, to conduct his bar-room.

Some years previously he had entered the 69th Regi-ment New York State Militia as a private, and soon rose to a captaincy. While in that position he served in what was known as the "Quarantine War," on Staten Island, and in the report of the inspector general was complimented as among the most meritorious, if not the Beet, of the officers in the let division. Being finally elected colonel, he was fer the first time brought promi-mently before the public for refusing to parade his Irish regiment in honor of the boy Prince of Wales, two years ago, who represented a Government which had systematically oppressed his countrymen. For this inbordination he was court martialed by General San subordination he was court martialed by General San ford, and proceedings remained in abeyance until the rebellion broke out. The 69th was anxious to take the field, but naturally hesitated while its leader suffered a nominal stigma. The Colonel thereupon wrote his men to volunteer for the flag, and that their first allegiance was the to the Government. This letter was published, and the Governor of New York at once quashed all promactions and reinstated him. His subsequent history is ceedings, and reinstated him. His subsequent history is well known, as well as the devotion of his soldiers to-wards him. His power of governing men is great. He had in his command some of the most unruly spirits in the army, but by a quiet and friendly firmness uni-formly enforced strict discipline. His late promotion to a brigadier generalabip has not been idly bestowed.

There is no leader to whose standard the Irish population will more enthusiastically rally.

Previous to departure, a mulatto man entered the car, and enthusiastically shook the hand of the General. He announced himself as an escaped elave from Virginia, who had reached a land where he was honestly paid for his labor, and had no fear of his wife and children being sold from him. He wished to see the General as one of that army who had aided him in achieving freedom, and thanked him warmly for his kind reception of one so

The General left Baltimore smid the loud cheers of a crowd of Irishmen, and frequently on the route was called upon to how to assemblages at the different stations, at Eiton be was greeted by Hon. V. C. Gilpin, mayor of Wilmington, with Messrs. John O'Neal and J. J. Purcell, as a deputation of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick in that city. On reaching there an immense crowd of both sexes vigorously cheered him, waving both hats and handkerchiefs. He responded by a short address, stating that he intended immediately returning to his duties at this trying moment, and that he considered all men should be ready to offer up their lives and their last dollar in our country's cause. There should be a determina-tion to crush this unboly rebellion at once [applause], and he was glad to see the whole population fully awake to the necessity.

HIS ARRIVAL IN THIS CITY—THE BALTIMORE DEPOT: An immense crowd of people, of all ages, sexes, and condition, were congregative if the Baltimore depot, Broad and Prime and the Baltimore depot, Broad and Prime and the arrival of the train which was a fring to them the Irish-American hero, whom they had learned to homor for his heroic deeds and patriotic fertitude. The military soon made their appearance, the bands struck up lively airs, and a general good feeling reparaled.

THE MILITARY.

The 116th Regiment, under command of Colonel Heenan, turned out is large numbers; they were the regulation uniform, light-bine pantaloous and dark-bine dress coats, and presented a very fine appearance. The Scott Legion, Colonel Tippen commanding, also turned out a large number of men. They also were the regulation uniform, and looked exceedingly well. The Zouaves d'Afrique, Colonel Collis commanding, in their red trowsers and turbans, attracted much attention. They were out in full force, and were quite a feature in the process.

CIVIC SOCIETIES.

The Fenian Brotherhood, of which General Corcoran was formerly president, turned out quite a large number. They were dressed principally in black clothes, and wore a green badge with Fenian Brotherhood printed on it in gill letters. The officers of the institution wore red, while and blue resettes, bordered with green ribbon. The Brian-Borothme United Irish Legion turned out a large number of men, who were designated by white badges, with the words "Welcome to General Corcoran Brian Borothme United Irish Legion." They presented a very fine appearance.

The Pike and Hurling Company attracted considerable attention. They were their new uniform, which conattention. They were their new uniform, which consists of dark pantaloons with a green flaunel shirt and a fancy beit with the name of their society placed up in it. The other Litch societies were well represented, and, in fact, the whole made a very fine display.

In fact, the whole made a very fine display.

THE ABRIVAL.

About a quarter before one o'clock the engine bell was heard ringing in the distance, and a rush was made by a portion of the crowd to the rear entrance to the depot. The train soon made its appearance around the curve. As the care entered the depot a crowd, who had gathered upon the platform, immediately surrounded the ecr. As General Corcoran emerged from the car there was long, lond, and continued cheering until he entered the barouche which was in waiting for bim. Captains Dressler and Kirker, and Lieutenant Coanelly, of the old 60th Begiment, accompanied him.

When all the arrangements were completed, and everything was in readiness outside, the barouche emerged from a yard belonging to the depot, and the procession then moved forward in the following order:

High Constables, mounted.

Beserve Corpe of Police.

116th Regiment, P. V., Colonel Heenan.

Scott Legion, Colonel Tippen.

Zu uaves D'afrique, Colonel Collis.

The greatest enthusiasm was manifested along Washington street by the immense crowd who lined the sidewalls, and as rie procession passed along cheer after theer was given, this the procession helted at the Befreshment Salcons.

Military salutes were fired at the corner of Tenth and Eleventh streets and Washington avenue.

The Moyamensing hose carriage, decorated with a large immrican flag, was stationed at the corner of Eighth treet, and the bells rang a marry peal of welcome as the received passed that point.

The houses along the avenue displayed a large number street, and the bells rang a merry peal of welcome as the procession passed that point.

The bouses along the aroune displayed a large number of flags, and, in several instances, the green flag of Erin was entwined with the stars and stripes. Numerous young ladies stationed themselves at the windows, and past. The procession arrived at the Cooper Shop Yolunteer Refreshment. Seloon shortly before two o'clock. Here, every preparation had been made by the committee to receive the gallant general and his triends. The greets drove up to the door of the saloon, where the greets were received. The immense tables in the saloons were well supplied with eatables, and were handsomely decreated with flowers and flags. The place presented an unnumally flux appearance. A number of the ladies statched to the saloon rendered great sid in entertaining the party. As soon as all had got inside, the haspishities of the saloon were tendered to General Corcoran, and his friends. by Dr. Andrew Nebinger, who made the following remarks:

SPEECH OF DR. NEBINGER.

GREEAL: In behalf of the Gooper Shop Volunteer Refreshment Scioun, I extend to you a most cordial and heartfelt welcome to our hospitalities. It may not be inapprepriate, tir, on this occasion, for me to refer to a period, some sixteen or seventeen months ago, when our beloved country was blessed with peace and prosperity. True, sir, it may be said that at that time the deep motterings of discontent were heard, and threats to break up the glorious fabric of our national Union were openly made. Sir, notwithstanding that these threats were constantly repeated and the mutterings of treason became more loud and deep, yet we of the loyal North did not for one single moment entertain a thought that they would amount to anything or that there threats and discontents would ever be put SPEECH OF DR. NEBINGER. or that there threats and discontents would over be put into practical operation. But, sir, we based our condu-sions upon our own featy and loyalty. Unfortunately for us, we reckoned wrongly, and the strife came upon us. Sixteen months or more ago a loyal band of sixty men assembled at Fort sumpter were assaulted by eight thousand chivalrous Southerners. Eight thousand men pointing their guns at the flag of the nation, let fly the missites of war, until finally the valiant little band of the fort was forced to succumb and down came—I will not say in disgrace—the glorious sters and stripes. That act fired the hearts of the people of the North, and from that eventful period to the present moment there has been but one acclaim, and that is not for the subjugation, but for the reduction to obedience of our disloys brethren. Six, about the period to which I refer, sixteen months ago, when the war notes were sounded, and our Frasident called for 75,000 men to guard the capital and protect the Union, we, in Philadelphia, in common with our fellow-countrymen of the loyal States, instantly obeyed the call, and our great Commonwealths of the North seemed determined to cutvie each other in willingness to serve the country. Permit me to say that on that occasion the eyes of Philadelphia were turned to New York, and there we observed the result of your labors and influence in rating a regiment, which, by the glory of its deeds, will live in our memories as long as life remains. We traced the career of that organization from New York to Washington, and from Washington to the gory battle field of Buil Run. The sad recital of the news of that battle brought gloom and desoration.—I may almost say terror—to every one of us. Stiff, sir, there was one bright spot upon that battle-scene, and that was the glorious and megalificent charge, which really won the day—[applause]—the valiant charge of the glorious 69th of New York, headed by Ool. Michael Gorcoran. [Cheers.] Sir, the war has brought pain and desclation to almost every househeld; wives have become widows, children have become fatherless; but in the providence of Ged we trustingly expect a return for this outflowing of blood in the co for us, we reckeded wrongly, and the strife came upon us. Sixteen months or more ago a loyal band of sixty men assembled at Fort Sumpter were assantied by eight thousand men pointing their guns at the flag of the nation, let fig the fort was forced to succumb and down came—I will not say in disgrace—the glorious sters and stripes. That act fired the hearts of the people of the North, and from that or exhuling price to the present moment, there has been but one accidate, and at that is not for the subjugation, but for the reduction to obscience of our dialogs brethren. Sir, about the period to which I refer, sixteen mouths ago, when the war notes were sounded, and our President called for 75,000 men to guard the capital and protect the Union, we, in Philadelphia, in common with of the North seemed determined to outvie each other in yobeyed the call, and our great Commonwealths of the North seemed determined to outvie each other in willingness to serve the country. REPLY OF GENERAL CORCORAN.

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN OF THE GOOPER SHOP SALLONE: Permit me to thank you most sincerely for this kind reception, and for the very eloquent and flattering terms in which you have been pleased to address me I must beg to be excused from making what might be termed a speech, and will merely make what you might call as coliter's remark. I have said a great deal since I have felt myself under the protection of my own flag. I have a great deal to say, and I take this occasion to add my own humble graittude to the well deserved thanks of the nation for what you, ladies and gentlemen, have done to refresh and assist our soldiers as they pass said repass threugh your city. When, in my captivity, I read an account of the reception of my own regiment at your hands, and felt that they had been well taken care of by the ladies of your committee, I said, "God bless your committee, the 60th has yet some friends," and that reflection cheered me. ne, I sm not prepared to say anything on this occasion I am not prepared to say anything on this occasion, but I will remark, however, that I have come among it you as a laborer in the field and ready to take the field, and as my friend, the Doctor, has said, I am determined not to sheath my aword until every vestige of the rebellion is ended. [Applause.] I am glad the country is alive, at last, to the importance of this crisis; I am rejolced to see the outpouring of freemen, by the usands, to the defence of our institutions, and I am equally proud that amongst those thousands my countrymen are reckoned; and I am also proud in the belief that they will be further represented, and that the last call of the President will be as heartily responded to by every I rishman as was the first. My friends, you have my most profound thanks for the kindness you exhibit towards myself. [Loud and long-continued cheering]

profound thanks for the Rindness you exists myself. [Loud and long-continued cheering]

PASSAGE OVER THE ROUTH.

After this briet speech the whole party partook of refreshments. Some time was spent in examining the saloon, and over an hour was consumed before the procession, after leaving the refreshment saloon, passed over the route specified in yesterday's Press. Rumerous private dwellings and places of business along the route were tastefully decorated with flags and other insignia. The Franklin Engine Company, Southwark Hose Company, and Hibernia Steam Engine had their carriages tastefully ornamented and in position along Third street, and greated the heroic chieftain with a merry peal of welcome. A banner, with the following sentence "Gead mills talthe," the favorite Iriah motto of welcome, was stretched across Third street by the Hibernis Steam Fire Engine Company. The Franklin Engine Company was covered with the American flag, and had a banner with the following inscription: Welcome Home, General Corroran.

St. Packal Church, Third and Pine streets, also greated and had a banner with the following inscription: Welcome Home, General Corcoran.

St. Peter's Church, Third and Pine streets, also greeted him with a peal of welcome. All along the route from the Refreshment Saloon flags and handkerchiefs were waved in every direction, cannon fired, and every symptom of joy manifested by the enthusiastic thong, that lined the sidewalks to catch a glimpse of him whose story is familiar in every American household, and who has endeared himself to the people of this great Republic by his gallant conduct at the Battle of Bull Run, and his heroic endurance during his imprisonment in the vile and loathsome prisons in the land of rebellion.

ATTHE DISPLAY BY EVANS & HASSALL. ATTRACTIVE DISPLAY BY EVANS & HASSALL.

Among the many buildings which were tastefully ornamented, that of Mesers. Evans & Hassall deserves more than a passing netice. In anticipation of the 'arrival o' the distinguished soldier. Mesers. Evans & Hassall, the large military furnishers, No. 418 Arch street, with characteristic good taste and liberality, presented one of the most animated and patriotic exhibitions witnessed at any one noint along the entire route. An immerse that fig. most animated and patriotic exhibitions witnessed at any one point along the entire route. An immense blue flag floated from the lofty staff which surmounts their handsome edifice, and from roof to paye the colors of the Union were intertwined with fine effect, whilst from every window of the entire front handsome silk flags were waved by the operatives of the establishment in welcome of the gallant General Corcoran. The display was greeted by the procession with a succession of cheers from beginning to end, and the sids on horse, and the city fathers in their carriages, gave it a cordial recognition. General Corcoran himself expressed his approval by bowing repeatedly, as he passed, to the young ladies who were waving the stars and stripes from the windows of the building.

ARRIVAL AT INDEPENDENCE HALL. ARRIVAL AT INDEPENDENCE HALL.

ARRIVAL AT INDEPENDENCE HALL.

Knowing that the General would be formally received at Independence Hall the crowd at this point was immense. From Fifth to Sixth street, on Chestnut, nothing was visible but a solid mass of people, and it was with the greatest difficulty that the carriages could make their way to the front of the hall. Notwithstanding the admirable police arrangements, yet it was a herculean task to keep the crowd back. The people were fairly wild, and thout after shout rent the air. After considerable difficulty the carriage containing the General was brought up is front of Independence Hall, and was escorted within by the committee. An attempt was then made by the outsiders to rush through the police guard, and also gain access to the hall. Some mounted the windows and attempted to get through, but all were frustrated and compelled to remain on the outside, where they amused themselves by continual cheering. The Hay or was inside the hall awaiting the arrival of Gen. Geroaran. The latter was introduced in a few remarks by Mr. Dickson, president of the committee. He was received by his Honor the Mayor in the following speech:

SPERCH OF MAYOR HENRY.

As the official representative of the city of Philadelphia, I tender to you, General, its hospitality, and in the name of its whole community, who have numbered with earnest sympathy the weary and prolonged hours of your honorable captivity, I welcome you with heart-feit congratulations. Let the enthusiasm which manifests itself on every side give assurance of the solicitude that has watched over your adversity, and of the esteem and confidence feit by a grateful people. [Applause]

Within a few eventful months to hall has winnessed the sorrowing over the bier of one and another of the nation's martyrs, as the revered dust of Grebie, Baker, Smith, Ellet, and other noble dead, passed to an honored rest. [Loud applause] To-day it is thronged with those who have come with giad greeting for the livirg, and who rejoice at your deliversnce from the indignities and sufferings heaped upon you by the malice of traitors.

Could the statemen and chieftales whose effigies agraround these wall: give utterance to the patriot seal which of old inspired their councils and wietleds their swords, what rich blearings women they invoke upon your head can upon of our land! [Oheers and applause]

Kow solemnly and earnestly would they adjure us, in this hour of our nation's peril, to forego every motive of creed, party prejudice, or self, and deficate every energy that God has given, every power of industry and wealth, every breath and pulse of life, to the enly object worthy of a freeman's care, the honor and safeguard of our country.

Sir, it has been yours to yield a bright example of self-devotion and of constancy—it has been yours to endure the dire privations and hardships of war. Heaven grant that it may be yours to lead victorious troops in the spread of our country.

he spent some time in refreshing himself. He was by this time completely exhausted, and almost unable to stand. Notwithstanding this, in answer to the loud cries of those assembled on the outside of the hotel, he made his appearance on the frent balcony. Here he was introduced to the populace by Mr. Ginnode, one of the committee of Conncils. The General spoke as follows:

SPEECH AT THE CONTINENTAL.

Outlines of Philadbephia: Permit me to thank you for this manifestation of regard and esteem, and the vary kind manner in which you have received me to-day. But I trust there is not one amongst this vast assemblage, or one amongst the tens of thousands who lined the attests to-day, who imagines that I am vain enough to helive that you, my fellow-countrymen, have turned out to-day for any child the contract of the country that surrounded General Corcovant, I thought I recognized again that great unstained, unchecked fountain of enthusiasm that lies at the base of the Irish nature, that for seven hundred long years of suffering has enabled them to keep the old flag flying, in the live that you, my fellow-country means have turned out to-day for any chief purpose than to signally mark your devotion to the glorious institutions under which we live, and for which you believe I have suffered.

You believe that in my efforts to shield the Government of the country that has been to the United States in her prosperity a false friend, in her adversity a slipry for. The first place for man to d them. They will be very grossly disappointed, however, if you of the North will determine that they shall not have one foot of Northern soil, nor even one foot of Southern soil, except under the protection of our glorious flag.

I have entered into this fight for the maintenance and support of the Constitution and laws of the United States, and I am going in so fight again. [Great cheering] I am going in again to support the duly constituted authorities in their firm determination to prosecute this war with renewed energy and vigor; to restore again the laws under the Constitution, with no infringement upon that sacred instrument, except such as are essentially necessary for us as a people. I am in favor of the President of the United States [cheerl, for the time being, exercising the fullest authority, and if even that authority is slightly exceeded, because he sees it necessary. I will not say one word to him until the war is over, and then will put the patch back again. [Laughter and applause]

Olitzens, it would be at least presumptanous for me to dictate to you what course you should pursue in the present emergencies. There is not a man present, here, there is not a man in this city, may be induced to—[flower is not man in this city, may be induced to—[flower is not in the man in job for us that Mr. Lincoln was elected, and we precipitated the traitors to act before they were as ready as they wanted to be.

Gentlemen, I desire to address myself again to my countrymen. I have one word more for them, and that is, not to allow a petry melics, or anything you may have suffered at the hands of indiviluals, frem time to time, either here or in any other State, to interfere with the sacred duty and obligation you ove to the flag. Let the politicisms, who have been using us long enough, stay at home, if they will, but let us go and fight the battles of the nation, and when we come home a grateful nation will extend to us smificient to meet all our wants. [Applause.] I have always been a Democrat. [Applause.] I was going to say that I am still one; but I will not allow any politics to interfere with the discharge of my duty. [Great applause.] I take the Know nothing by the hand as a brother, if he carries the musket or a sword alongside of me in this contest. I do not care where the man comes from or what may be his shade of politics, whether he is a Bepublican, an Abolitionist, or something else (for I scarcely know what strifter you have got into during the last thirteen months)—[laughter]—it is a perfect matter of indifference to me I only want to say that I know no man but as he discharges his duty to that flag; and, as I said in Baltimore, men were never called upon in this world to perform so sacred a duty as you are, my countrymen, not only for your ewn sake, but for the whole country, with its coming generations of men.

Here in the North you are doubly happy. I can see it in your faces to clay, but the poor, dedued, misguided white people of the Scuthern States are ground down under the blackest despetism that ever ruled over a people. We owe it to them, to ourselves, and to posterity, that we shall go to their rescue, that we shall have this country continue as we found it when we took our oath of allegiance—one united republic, inseparable and eternal. eterns!.
Genticmen, I would like to withdraw, but I cannot without paying a tribute of respect to the men who suffered with me, men from this city—one in partiprison was that of a patriot and a soldier. I allude to John K. Murphy [cheers], of the 29th Pennsylvania Volunteers. [Three cheers were here given for Col. Murphy.] He reflects credit upon your city, and we elected him to a new office. He is president of the Anti-Cotton Wearing Association—[laughter]—and pleages himself that cotton shall be king no longer. We are going to establish a society, and I think it will be a large one, and the members are bound to wear nothing but Irish linen. [Great laughter]

1 know that in the vast crowd of Irish friends before me there are many of the Fenian Brotherhood, and my hear: leaped to day when I saw the green badge upon their breasts. Many an anxious night I spent thinking of how poor, devoted, self-serificing John O'Mahoney and the Fenian Brotherhood were getting along. I have only to say that I have been a member of the Brotherhood from its foundation. I am one of those who believe that Ireland's opportunity will come if we make it; and I agree with one of the most talented, most chistianlike, and I think I may say most respected men in this country, Archbishop Hughes, of New York, [cheere.] when he said that be knew from good authority that Irishman here were perfecting themselves in the higher branches of military education. Now, I think after we have secured this country, paid our devoted allegiance to it, fought and bled for it, and, as I hope, tone of thousands of my countrymen will yet be left to make the opportunity for Ireland. [Oheers]

Gentlemen, one of Ireland's noblest sons is here. He came from New York to Washington to meet me. [A voloc; "O'Gorman."] Precisely, O'Gorman.—a man ready, willing, and able to strike the blow in '48, if others had done just as he did—a man who stood by my side and fought my battle when I refused to do homase to "that boy." [Great cheering, and ories of "bully for you."] One word more and I have done. I never can address any body of, men whom I think are going to be soldiers without thinking of the 69th. They will be here in a fe

Mr. O'GOLDIAN came forward, and was received with the cheers of the assemblage. He said:

FELLOW CITIZENS OF PHILADELPHIA: If General Cor-coran, in his inture career as a soldier, executes as com-plete surprises upon the Southern toe as he has executed upon me, his friend, all I can say is that the Southerners will soon find themselves in a very difficult place, as I do now.

AN IRISH REGIMENT TO BE RAISED IN PHILADEL-PHIA.

Last evening a committee of prominent citizens waited on General Corcoran, and requested of him that one ragiment of his Irish Brigade might come from Philadelphia. The General replied that this was his with, and he would gladly accept of a regiment from this city.

The committee immediately telegraphed to Governor Cutin relative to this matter, and a satisfactory reply was received during the course of the evening. Arrangements will at once be made for specifly raising this regiment. It is thought that the desired number can be raised in one week. DEPARTURE OF GEN. CORCORAN. MEDICINAL. WEDICINAL.

ONERFUL SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY OF PROF. C. H. BOLLES. 1220
WALNUT STREET, PHILADELPHIA.

BEAD THE FOLLOWING CARREFULLY.
The difference between fact and faction, of permanently curing the sick and suffering of their diseases, or advertising to cure, and showing but little or no evidence of cures, can be well appreciated by the suxious inquirers after health, upon attentively reading the following synopsis of certificates from some of the most reliable gentlemen in Philadelphia, who were permanently cured by Prof. BOLLES, 1229 WALNUT street, and after they had been given up as incurable by the most eminent medical men of this city:

The following is a statement of facts in reference to my condition and astonishing cure of Epilepsy:

For five years previous to my knowledge of Prof. C.
H. Bolles' discovery of the therapeutic administration of Galvanism, Magnetism, and other modifications of Electricity for the cure of all acute and chronic diseases, I bed here covered afficient with Evillatic Etc. of the H. Bolles' discovery of the therapeutic administration of Galvanium, Magnetism, and other modifications of Electricity for the cure of all acute and chronic diseases, I had been severely affliced with Epileptic Fits of the most obstinate character, and had abandoned all hopes of ever being cured, as I had for years tried the treatment and received the counsel of the most eminent Bedical Men of the State, with a view of obtaining relief if any ceuld be found among the Old Schools; but all my efforts were unavailing, and, therefore, all hopes were shandoned, as I then knew of no greater skill for the cure of obstinate cases than in the Old Schools. About six months ago my mind was turned to investigate the new discovery of Prof. C. H. Bolles, 1220 Walnut street, and, after noticing several entificates of cures which were published, and some from persons with whom I was acquainted and knew them to be reliable men, I was induced to call on the Professor and obtain his opinion of my case. After he had examined me about ten minutes, he frankly informed me that he could cure me, and offered to give me a written wavrantee of a complete cure, and, in case of a failure, to charge me nothing. This at first seemed an impossibility; but the frankness and earnestness of the Professor convinced me of his scientific accuracy in the diagnosis of my case. He disclosed all my sufferings and symptoms for five years past as well as I knew them my self. I will here stake, for the good of humanity, and especially those suffering as I was, that I am perfectly cured. I further would state that mere than four months have elassed since my cure, and I have had no symptoms, and, therefore, feel confident that Lam cured. I shall take pleasure in being referred of at any time by any one suffering as I was, and any information of my condition previous to my cure will be freely given to any one at 1542 North Thirteenth street, Philadelphia.

Please take notice that Prof. B. does not advertise any certificates of cures, except those cured in this city, and his success in treating the sick is a sufficient guaranty that he claims nothing but actentific facts in his discevery in the use of Electricity as a reliable therapeutic agant.

very in the use of Electricity as a remain assent.

N. B.—It will be well for the diseased to recollect that Prof. B. has given a word of caution in his pamphlet, to guard them sgainst trusting their health in the hands of those in this city claiming to treat diseases according to his discovery. This caution may seem severe on those using Electricity at heard, but it is the severity of truth, and designed for the good of humanity. See advertisement in another column.

The repugnance of most patients to GOD-LIVER OIL.

The repugnance of most patients to GOD-LIVER OIL, and the inability of many to take it at all, has induced various forms of disguise for its administration that are familiar to the Medical Profossion. Some of them answer in special cases, but more often the vehicle neutralizes the usual effect of the Oil, proving quite as unpalatable and of less therapeutic value. The repugnance, nausea, &c., to invalids, induced by disgust of the Oil, is entirely obviated by the use of our CAPSULES. GOD-LIVER OIL GAPSULES have been much used lately in Europe, the experience there of the good results from their use in both hospital and private practice, aside from the naturally suggested advantages, are sufficient to warrant our claiming the virtues we do for them, feeling assured their use will result in benefit and deserved favor.
