The bill passed the House, but was lost in the Senate. I cordially supported Mr. Wildey's bill, which pro-posed to repeal the 'Act of 1861, under which Act, the Receiver of Taxes had claim(d five per cent on outstand-ing taxes. That bill passed the House, and was also de-feated in the Senate. I the intervent of Taxes, or of persons in his interest, who had visited Harrisburg for that purpose, the collec-tion of the Etate and Mercantile tax had been surrepti-tiously taken from the City Treasurer's Office, and trans-ferred to the Receiver of Taxes Office, with an increased charge of 2½ per centum for collecting, &c. That obmoxious law was soon repealed, and I had the honor of assisting in the work. Some of the parties in-mediately interested in maintaining the present unjust and burdensome system of collecting taxes, determined that I should no longer interfere with their wishes, and before, the cleve of the session I was informed that a young man, who is a clerk in the Beseiver of Taxes Office, had been stected as mr successor. The parties engaged in carrying out this (to them) de-sirable change, perfected their organization months since, in every precinct in the district. They rely for success, not so much upon their strength, as upon the beliet that you will, as heredofore, neglect to take part in nominating candidates for places of trust.
