LOCAL MILITARY. - Thus far, over three thousand men have left this city, for Harrisburg, in response to the call of Governor Curtin for troops The military fever is by no means subsiding, and was as high yesterday as at any previous time. under guard until removed.

The "old" Scott Legion will hold an adjourned meet-ing this evening, at Fifth and Walnut streets, for the purpose of completing the organization of a regiment fon setting service. They have already tendered their serpurpose of completing the organization of a regiment for active service. They have already tendered their services, and expect soon to receive mustering orders. At the United States Arsenal, on Gray's Ferry road, the greatest activity is being displayed. The material for clothing, is its unout condition, is now being packed up and sent to every loyal State in the Union. Work will thus be afforded to thousands of women in different cities. Another military company has been organized—Samuel S. Bears captain, and John Heffman first licutement:

Ool. Scimillowman, of the Sath Pennsylvania Volunteers, is in town. He urges the policy of filling up the old regiments now in the field. Uol. Bowman is distinguished for ability, and has probably seen as most in hard service as any other commender from this State. He commenced his military career as myor of cavalry; commenced his military career as major of cavalry; fought at Fort Donelson and Shiloh, and was distinguished for his bravery on several important occasions, for which he was prometed to colonel. He now commands the famous 84th, Col. Marray's old regiment, which was in saveral of the recent battles under Pope. INTERESTING LECTURE BY REV. J. WALKER JACKSON .- This popular war orator deliver ed, to a large and appreciating audience last evening, at Handel and Haydn Hall, an interesting lecture on "The Duty of Every Man in this our Country's Peril." Among others assembled on the platform, was a number of the prominent clergy. The lecture was full of in terest, and was enthusiastically received.

The lecturer commenced with a beautiful allusion to the hour when Ponce de Leon first explored the interior of America. On Easter Sunday, March 27, 1512, the ad-venturer first fancied the realization of his dream. Pas-cua Florida became to him the harbinger of the future. By appropriate ausloy the lecturer glanced at the present state of the Union, which, also, had not fulfilled the premise of its youth. Liberty, which had seemed to be baptized in the foundain of perpetual youth, had savee attained the strength of its manhood. The Union was dead. The expression of its external life was the policy of its public functionaries. Falletted through citizen and dead. The exprasion of its external life was the policy of its public functionaries, reflected through citizen and soldier. The common life of a nation has its seat in the nation rxisting as a body politic—that is, as a State.—Power is the hand of a State, law is its heart; each is united in the government. Government is the State percolified. Plato says let us invoke God for the constitution of the State. Closero says the first principles of a 1 laws are derived from Divinity. Bacon declares that religion is the chief bord of society. The chief end of the State is the glory of God in the highest well-being of man. The chief object of the State is the establishment of justice, in which is included life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. All social relations merge themselves suit of happiness. All social relations merge themselves into those of religion. Moral demerit is the germ of orime. All criminal law is grounded upon the principle To the public personality of the state belongs moral To the public personality of the state belongs moral characte. It is the great minister of justice. The state recognizes obligations, the correlatives of determinate rights, and exe cises all the control of legitimate government. Our nation is in God, and of God. Libertry, Beligion, and Science have ever been on wing to these shores. The land has been decreed to us by Providence, and America will advance to the summit of her glory with rapicity, as dever justify the sublimity of her Constitution. [Applause.] On the nineteenth day of April, 1861, the first bloof was shed in perpetuity of our national existence. On the same day of the same month, near a existence. On the same day of the same month, near a century ago, the blood of our fathers bedewed the ground, and baptized America with freedom. [Great ap-

Our ancestors soled on the principle that governments were for the people, and net people for the governments.

The Revolution was designed to organize social union, through the establishment of personal freedom. Industry was commissioned to follow the bent of its own genius. The nobiest work of human intellect was consummated in the formation of the Federal Union the United States of North America. [Immense applause] There is but one issue of the hour—government or anarchy. The Government is made for the Union, and not the Union is rethe Constitution. On the 19th June, 1754, a Congress at Albany, of great and venerable men, representing the Colonies of the Union, on a motion of Benjamin Franklin. vote i a perpetual Confederacy. Eminent men in Europe oposed it as the keystone of American independence. Our posed it as the keystone of American independence. Our State needs a religious character; for it is monstrous that its functionaries should exercise control over the persons and properties of its commonwealth, without relying on Divine revelation as a guidance. Ohristianity has, indeed, a legal recognition, yet, in the Constitution of the United States, there is no direct acknowledgment of the providence of God. There is a great defect in our national religion. Our true destiny is of our own choosing. The question is not now the subversion of other Governments, but how best we can preserve our own. The condition of right is obligation, and this constitutes The condition of right is obligation, and this constitutes The reason why we should be free is the reason why we should live, to glorify God! But we do not appreciate our advantages. The lecturer had heard some preachers beast that they had not voted, and the apathy f a certain class has allowed the symbols of liberty to a trodden down by a South Carolina devil! According runs throughout all our existence as a nation, a river of contention, whose turbld waters cast up mire and dirt. Great applause ] As Bishop Hughes would have said, in the language of his Celtic ancestors, slavery is a hist" from the top of a great wall to the bottom of a great gutter. [Lânghter.]

The voice of the people is the voice of God Slavery has thrown itself upon the boases of the buckler of God, and by so doing has expedited its ewn death. [Im nense applause] Write on all the banners of the glorious Union, as the men enroll themselves in the airs of the great write through [Arabayes]. The tors Union, as the men enroll themselves in the airs of .

Heaven—write EMANCIPATION! [Applause.] The test of American Ohristianity is the spirit in which we look on the African. The question of the world at present is the old question of aristocracy and democracy! All parties are united in the South in fighting for slavery; all parties are not united in the North in fighting against it. The war is one of freedom, and the lecturer wanted it written so plainly on the banners that he that runs may read. [Applause] The hour of this nation's birth was that of civil war, and it is not surprising that it should retain its nationality as it commerced it. Tumultnous applause, and three cheers for those who gained bresent success | The lecturer, in conclusion, present success ] The lecturer, in conclusion, pictured in fervent buce the future of our Republic, and was saluted with loud and long-continued applause.

Address by Rev. Dr. Goddard to afternoon the three companies raised for State defence under the suspices of the Corn Exchange Association assembled in the upper hall of the building of the asso-ciation, to receive their blankets, rations, &c., previous to their departure. The men—a body of young, athletic, to their departure. The men—a body of young, athlotic, fine looking parsons—were ranged along the entire length of the room, and that appearance was highly inspiriting. They were dressed in a neat uniform, with pants of sky-blue, dark shirt, and blue blouse; they were provided, also, with canteen and haversack, each of which was well filled. Previous to their departure the band, which had been playing during the day. In front of the building, struck up a pariolic air, and the "boys" cheered lustily. They were then addressed by Rev. Dr. Goddard, in a few feeling and impressive remarks. He congratulated his soldier friends on their handsome appearance and martial hearing, which he believed would have no little effect in existing the fance of Philadelphia wherever they might go. The munificer of which had fitted them out for active service was princely in its character, and that, too, advanced the fame of Philadelphia, for it evinced, the particular and liberality of the Philadelphia grain mert ictism and liberality of the Philadelphia grain m chant, who, since the breaking out of the war, had signally proven their devotion to the Union cause. The Corn Excharge Association may feel proud of its record. It stands out for day on the pages of our local history as one of the gramments of our day and generation. It lives in the best wishes of the coldier's heart, as well as in the past in the pages of the coldier's heart, as well as in the patriot's memory.
The apeaker indulged in a few words of consolation to The speaker indulged in a few words of consolation to the wives and per ents of the soldiers who were about to leave. They should not feel desponding in the absence of those they love, but live in the hops of their speedy, and happy return. The interests of religion would be promoted by the departure of these galant fellows, for they are defending a noble Government, and sustaining a noble fig. The Lord of Hosts would be their protector. In conclusion, he invoked a blessing upon his young triends. The companies left the hall about 8 c'clock with full The companies lett; no hall about 3 o'clock with full ranks, and officered as follows:

OUR ARMY OF EXEMPTS .- Be it remembered, that on Monday, September 15, 1832, the Com-missioners appointed by the Gevernor to superintend the member of, that on Monday, September 15, 1832, the Commissioners appointed by the Gevernor to superintend the drafting of militia commenced the hearing of appeals. Therefore all feminines who have hitherto speak their sympathy upon the troops of able-bodied men, whose souls are "in arms and eager for the fray," should henceforth expend it upon that large class of disable-bodied mesculines who prove their attachment to home by refusing to leave it. Patriotism, like charity, begins at home, and often ends there, too. One must defend his fireside, that is, Philadelphia, not Harrisburg! Enthusiastic belles warble "Yes, let me like a soldier fall," and lackadaistal beaus, "Home, sweet home "To'a certain class, young men of coward souls, Philadelphia neyer possessed so many attractions as at present Myriad femilies where cliscore lone presided have been surprised to find how, firmly the knot of relationship has recently been rivetel—el—a Gordian knot which only the sword of the law shall sever. The Hibernia Engine was at Fortress Monroe for a long time, and did noble service.

RECRUITING.—Recruiting is not as fast as it must be in order to avoid the draft. During yesterday only eventy-three men were obtained for the old regiments and thirty for the new organizations.

FORT DELAWARE AND ITS OCCUPANTS. Many improvements have recently taken place at this spot, the existence of which was hardly known before the breaking out of the rebellion. Delaware Island, or the "Peapatch," originally a sand beach, over which swept the tide to the depth of six feet, but now real and by hears of a dyke, is just forty six miles below Philadelphia. Opposite, to the west, is Delaware City, Del., the breatith where one mile and a ball. To the over is

by means of a dyke, is just forty-six miles below Philadelphia. Opposite, to the west, is Delaware City, Del., the breadthy water one mile and a ball. To the east is Balam, N. Jone mile and a quarter. The form of the island at ovail is extent one-fourth of a mile and it breadth some 200 yard; containing an area of 150 acres. Some portion is devoted to grave, or gardening, by the resident laborers. Two ditches surround the fort at une equal distances. The use of one is to prevent an essault by scaling ladders, and the other to facilitate flooding the island and the juterier of the fort which may be submerged, in case of bombardment, four feet. The fortyess is a pentagon in figure, the length of whose sides are unequal. A most drawbridge surrounds the walls, and a bastion strengthens each angle, on the parapet of which is mounted a 10 inch columbiad. But two sides of the fort are casemated—only the flanks of the three others being used for ordnance. These two, however, command the ship channel of the river. The wall is 45 feet in beight, and nine feet thick—thatis, four feet of solid granite (brought from the State of Maine.) and five feet brick, estimating the casemates at five feet solid. Three lines of forts are seen, but the upper ones are mock, making, with the barbette pieces, three lines of baiteries. The parapet guns are 64 and 128 pounders, 8 and 10 inch, old pattern. The casemates, 42 pounders and 12 pound howitzer—the howitzers in the flank casemates. The number of guns now in the fort ranges some 46, its complement 165. Three sides of the interior of the fort are being built up with brick quarters, bombproof rooflags, for garrison purposes, and will be finished by Obristmas. "a en feet of pavement is intended to be the money and stock circles during the depressing period through which we have just passed. Amid the meanings and the creakings of semi-imbeciles, the country has safely passed another great crisis, as if borne along by an intestine buoyancy that no adverse influences could depress. If any man will look thinkingly into the future, he need not deplore the prospect before him. At the end of another year, should the war last that long, our country will be richer, more powerful, and in a fairer way of prosperity than ever it has been. People are spt to forget, when they see large amounts of legal-tender notes floating about, that there is a firm basis for them; that these same notes have only the tendency of enriching the country. Congress has manufactured say three hundred and fifty million dollars in paper money. This amount has been ex. pended, or will be soon, in military and naval equipment and subsistence; consequently a large portion of the amount may be looked upon as clear profit to the country. The deduction is founded upon substantial facts. For instance: the farmer plants his corn, rais his hogs and sheep, which costs him very little. He sells to contractors, they to the Government, and the difference ebtween the first cost of these products and the amount paid by the Government for them, when they are put into the proper shape for usefulness, is so much clear gain to the country. The slab of iron on one of the new steamers was worth nothing as it existed in the ore. Iron is only valuable as it is useful; and it has been the manipulation of the ore which makes the plate: therefore the entire price paid for the plate

the fort are being built up with brick quarters, bombproof roofing, for garrison purposes, and will be finished by Christmas, "on feet of pavement is intended to balaid around the inside, and when all is completed every accessary of comfort will be found to have been embodied in these quarters. The area of the ground upon which stands the fort comorises one acre and a haif. Outside the walls are wooden barracks, capable of quartering 4,000 troops; 1,000 men is supposed to be the maximum garrison of the fort itself. Besides the structure advected to, there are eleven wooden buildings now used as residences by the officers and laborers at the post, a gutler's store, carpenter, blacksmith and wagon shop, stables, boat sheds, &c. Two what was are also constructed, one on the east and the other on the west side of the island. Huge piles of, rough and bewing ranite are piled around the fort outside the most, but their use is at present unknown. by Government is clear gain to the manipulators, whether the lowest workman or the heaviest contractor. Manipulation may be said to be the saver of the country financially. CONVICTED OF THE LARCENY OF A

BAG OF MONEY.—Yesterday, in the Oriminal Court, William Cross was placed on trial, charged with stealing a bag of nickels (about five hundred) and a two and ahalf gold piece, the property of Edward Donnelly, who keeps a tavern in South Sixth street. The evidence was that a couple of men came to the tavern, and, after being attended to, the proprietor gave them the change from the bag. Cross was standing at the end of the bar, and seked for change for a quarter of a dollar. This was given to him. The proprietor, feeling rather sleepy, commenced dozitig in a c. air; and while in a half somnolent state, he was awakened by his wife coming in. Just
