DEPARTURE OF GENERAL BANKS' EXPEDITION. The military expedition which has been fitting out at New York for some time past, to be under the command of Major General Banks, left that port on Thursday evening. port on Thursday evening.

The troops composing the expedition are from the States of Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut and New York, and as a whole they are unsurpassed by any troops that have been raised in those States since the commencement of the war. The greater portion of them have been recognized in the vicinity of New York forms time. encamped in the vicinity of New York for some time enemper in the relative position. The remainder that were ready sailed Thursday, including the commander of the expedition; but other troops are to follow, as soon as they are in readiness. Brig. Gen. Geo. L. Andrews remains behind, at Gen. Banks' headquarters, and will superintend the forwarding of the remaining troops of the expedition. Gen. Banks and his staff sailed in the transport North Star, which also took out the 41st Massachusetts Regiment. The North Star left her dock at the foot of Eleventh street, East river, having ou board the regiment above named and a portion of Gen. Banks' staff; but the General himself did not embark until she had arrived off the Battery.

embark until she had arrived off the Battery. EXCURSION DOWN THE HARBOR. A good deal of disappointment was felt at the absence of Gen. Banks, it being understood that he would embark on board the steamer at that place. Such, indeed, was his intention in the morning, but stien, indeed, was nis intention in the norming, our it seems that many of our prominent citizens, desiring to have a social parting interview with the General, invited him to take a sail up the river, and join his vessel on her arrival in the bay. Accordingly, at three o'clock, Gen. Banks, accompanied by Col. Clark, of his staff, and a large party of friends. Col. Clark, of his staff, and a large party of friends, left the Astor House, and proceeded to the barge-office, foot of Whitchall street, where the Surveyor's yacht, the Winans, was in waiting for the excursion. Among the prominent persons who joined the party, were his Honor Mayor Opdyke, Gov. Curtin, of Pennsylvania, Collector Barney, Surveyor Andrews, J. J. Cisco, United States Treasurer, Gen. A BANQUET ON BOARD. During the excursion the party partook of a sumptuous repast, at which Mayor Opdyke presided, and where there was a few and informal interchange of sontiments, speeches, congratulations, and general good feeling. Mayor Opdyke, in a few appropriate remarks, introduced to the assembly Maj. General Banks, the commander of the expedition, who was received with enthusiasm. SPEECH OF GENERAL BANKS.

Star had come to anchor.

General Banks responded, saying that he had received numberless tokens of kindness from his friends in New York, but this last one crowned them all, and he felt as if it were almost too much for him. He really could not express the gratitude he felt. The Government of the country had given he felt. The Government of the country had given him a great and important charge; they had entrusted an important expedition to his hands, and no effort would be wanting on his part to execute with fidelity the trust committed to him. The Government had promptly and liberally supplied him with every requisite; and he pledged himself to his friends present, to his fellow-citizens, and to the representatives of the brave and patriotic soldiers who had gone forth to fight their country's battles—hailing as they do from all the States—an almost certain success.

A COMPLIMENT TO PENNSYLVANIA. The General closed with a toast, and sat down amid a tumult of cheers. Gen. Wetmore then took the floor, and complimented Pennsylvania, a noble State, which sent 200,000 men to the seat of war, and when her soil was invaded raised 70,000 more men to repel the invaders. He spoke of the confidence reposed in Gen. Banks and of the loyalty of the Empire State, and concluded with a fine sentiment, which brought Goy. Ourtin to his feet. SPEECH OF GOVERNOR CURTIN, OF PENN-SYLVANIA.

The Governor made a most eloquent and patriotic speech, which ought to be written with a diamond pen and printed in letters of gold. He said he was not insensible to the honor paid to Pennsylvania. She abounded in men of consistent and stubborn loyalty. When the rebels dared to pollute her sacred soil, in seven days 75,000 men rushed to her rescue like guests to a festival. During his short stay in New York he had heard disloyal sentiments that would not be tolerated in Pennsylvania. He had long known General Banks, and did not doubt his capacity for great deeds. The reticency of the Government respecting his expedition is remarkable, for it is not yet known in Richmond in what direction he intended to sail, nor where he intended to go. He was for crushing out the rebellion, and hoped Richmond, that nest of vipers, would be taken. We must strike at the The Governor made a most eloquent and patriotic vipers, would be taken. We must strike at the heart of the enemy; when we saw the blood flowing from the heart of the enemy there would be hope. Eighteen months' experience should have taught us the lesson that we have to deal with a desperate and unscrupulous foc. We must be more in earnest. Pennsylvania was willing to exhaust her money and her men to defend the Union—we must fight us though all depended upon our exertions, and trust in Heaven as though all depended upon Providence. Cheer after cheer was given for Pennsylvania and her nebble Governor. Several other speaks were her noble Governor. Several other speeches were delivered by distinguished gentlemen, after which General Banks embarked on board the North Star, and proceeded on his voyage with the heartfelt good wishes for his success of those present.

General Banks and his Captains.

Major General Nathaniel P. Banks, commander in-chief of the expedition, is the senior, and, in the absence of any special orders to the contrary, would be ranking major general in the volunteer service. He was one of the three major generals appointed in the volunteer force raised in conformity with the President's proclamation of May 3, 1861—the other two being John A. Dix, of New York, and Benjamin F. Butler, of Massachusetts. Their commissions F. Butler, of Massachusetts. Their commissions are dated May 16, 1861. General Banks is now the second Massachusetts general honored with the comare dated Massachusetts general honored with the command of a mammoth expedition, and no one having any knowledge of the skill, energy, perseverance, and thorough straightforwardness which are the chief characteristics of the General, can entertain a chief characteristics of the General, can entertain a doubt but that his expedition will be at least as successful as the one which, under his brother general from the old Bay State, B. F. Butler, resulted in the capture of New Orleans.

Prior to the outbreak of the rebellion, General Banks had no practical military experience, but his anticedents were so honorable, and his popularity in his native State so extensive, that he was at once singled out for a prominent military command. So far he has proved himself to be an able general, both in theory and practice, and it would be difficult to singled out for a prominent initiary command. So far he has proved himself to be an able general, both in theory and practice, and it would be difficult to select a man better fitted to command the magnificent armada which, as the General himself is reported to have said, will consist of "a good many men," and which is "going South."

General Banks is essentially a self-made man. Born of poor parents, at Waltham, Massachusetts, on the 30th of January, 1816, he had very limited opportunities of obtaining an education at common schools, and had, at an early age, to take his place in the factory where his parents worked, and earn his own livelihood. His mind, however, was one of those which must have knowledge, no matter what obstacles may stand in the way.

Even while a factory operative, he helped to establish a debating society, and also contributed to the columns of the local paper, which he subsequently edited. In 1812, and the following five years, he was brought forward as Democratic candidate for Assembly from his native town, but was defeated every year. Any one less persevering would have been disheartened by six successive defeats, but General

Any one less persevering would have been disheartened by six successive defeats, but General Banks tried again, and the seventh time he was triumphant, and accordingly took his seat in the Assembly, of which, in 1850, he was elected Speaker. In 1852 he became a member of Congress, and was chosen Speaker of the House of Representatives after a contest of more than two meants and a hunchosen Speaker of the House of Representatives after a contest of more than two months and a hundred ballotings. The onerous duties of Speaker were performed by him with great skill, firmness, and impartiality. After serving his term in Congress, he was elected Governor of Massachusetts, and was a prominent candidate before the Republican National Convention at the time when John C. Fremont was nominated for the Presidency. Subsequently he accepted the post of superintendent of the Illinois Central Railroad, in the room of George B. McClellan, resigned. This railroad has given the country three prominent generals—McClellan, Burnside, and Banks. In his turn he resigned this position to accept a major generalship in the volunteer army of 50,000 men, called out by the President's May proclamation. He was assigned to the command of a army of odownien caned out by the Freshen's May proclamation. He was assigned to the command of a division in the Army of the Potomac, and sent to guard the upper fords of the river. After spending many months drilling and disciplining his command, he was ordered to cross the Potomac and clear the Shenandoah valley of the redoubtable "Stonewal" Jackson. He failed to do this however, in consequence of regiment states. Jackson. He failed to do this, however, in consequence of regiment after regiment being taken from him and sent to other posts of supposed danger, until he had only about four thousand to oppose to Jackson's 15,000. The disaster at Front Royal was one consequence of this weakening of his forces. He, however, made a splendid retreat to the north side of the Potomac, without the loss of a single gun, and with but yery few casualties among his troops. He was next ordered to the Rappahannock to join Pope and assist him and Sigel in keeping the enemy in check while McClellan made good ing the enemy in check while McClellan made good his reluctant retreat from the Peninsula. The sanguinary engagement at Cedar Mountain followed; and notwithstanding the great disparity between Banks' and "Stonewall" Jackson's army—Badks had 7,000 to Jackson's 25,000—the latter was defeated.

General Banks was wounded here; and when the battles of Centreville and the second Bull Run took place, he was not with his corps, which, with Sum-ner's, formed the advance of McClellan's grand ner's, formed the advance of McClellan's grand army, but was on temporary duty at Washington as military commander.

Since he established his headquarters in New York, the General has been almost overwhelmed with the multifarious duties devolving upon him. He has at last got his expedition in readiness to start, and before long we shall undoubtedly hear great news from the Banks armada. MAJOR GENERAL AUGUR. MAJOR GENERAL AUGUR.

Major General thristopher Colon Augur, who goes out with Gen. Banks as the second in command, is a native of this State, but his appointment is credited to Michigan, from which State he was nominated to the United States Military Academy in 1839, and graduated in 1843. In general merit he stood number sixteen in a class of thirty-nine members, so that his talents must be of a high order. Many of his West Point class-mates are now celebrated generals in the Union army. General William B. Franklin was at the head of the class; General Isaac F. Quimby was the sixth; General John G. Peck Quimby was the sixth; General John G. Peck eighth; General Ulysses S. Grant twenty-first; General Charles A. Hamilton twenty-sixth; General Frederick Steele thirtieth; General Rufus Ingalls found in our columns this morning, in relation to thirty-second, and General Henry M. Judah thirty- the provisions needed for the wounded in view of fifth.

After graduating, General Augur was attached to the 2d Infantry as brevet second lieutenant. In September, 1845, he was transferred to the 4th Infantry, and in February, 1847, he was promoted to the rank of first lieutenant. During the Mexican war he served as aid-de-camp, first on the staff of Brig. Gen. Enos D. Hopping, and then, after the death of that general—which occurred in September, 1847—on the staff of Brig. Gen. Galeb Cushing. He returned to his regiment when the war was over and succeeded to a captainey on the 12th of August. 1852. on the staff of Brig. Gen. Caleb Cushing. He returned to his regiment when the war was over and succeeded to a captaincy on the 12th of August, 1852, his command being company O, 4th Infantry. At the head of this company he served with distinction on the frontiers, being honorably mentioned for his gallantry in many severe conflicts with Indians near Rogue river, in Oregon, in 1856. From that time until immediately after the bombardment of Fort Sumpter, he commanded the troops at Fort Hoskins, Uregon. When the army was augmented, in May, 1861, Captain Augur was promoted to the senior majority of the 13th Infantry, and was recalled from the Department of the Pacific to attend to the organization of the first battalion, which, as senior major, he was entitled to command. After this, he was placed temporarily in command of the cadets at West Point, and then, November 12, 1861, was made brigadier general of volunteers, and assigned to the command of a brigade in King's division of McDowell's army. When General Sigel superseded General Fremont, Augur succeeded to the command of Sigel's division, which he led into battle at Cedar Mountain, where, while behaving with conspicuous gallantry, he was severely wounded: Before he had well recovered from his wound he reported for duty, and was detailed to serve on the commission appointed to investigate the surrender of Harper's Ferry. When General Banks was placed at the head of the magnificent expedition fitted out here he applied for General Augur, whose merits he had seen tested in the sanguinary conflict at Cedar Mountain. Although ordered already to report to General Reynolds, when General Banks wanted him he was at once promoted to a major general of volunteers, and received instructions to proceed to New York, and assist General Banks in fitting out the expedition. General Augur's reputation, as a competent military man, stands very high, and those who know him best are emphatic in their declaration that he is not by any means to be classed with those "augurs that woult here?"

be classed with those "augurs that won't bore."

Grover, who, like Gen. Augur, is an officer in the Grover, who, like Gen. Angur, is an officer in the regular army, as well as a general officer of volunteers. Gen. Grover was born in the State of Maine, and entered the United States Military Academy in 1846 as cadet. After four years' study he graduated fourth in a large class, at the head of which was Frederick E. Prime, now a captain in the corps of engineers. The other distinguished members of this class were Governeur K. Warren, captain in the topographical engineers and brigadier general of volunteers, who was second, and Silas Crispin, captain of ordnance, who was third in the class. General Eugene A. Carr, the gallant Slemmer, hero of Fort Pickens, and Captain Bates, of the 4th Infantry, now on duty in this city, also belonged to this class. on duty in this city, also belonged to this class. After graduating he was appointed brevet second lieutenant in the 4th Artillery, then commanded by the late General Walbach. He continued in this regiment until March, 1855, when he was transferred to the 16th Lefentry they compared. this regiment until March, 1855, when he was transferred to the 10th Infantry, then organizing. Under ordinary circumstances General Grover would have been appointed into one of the superior corps of the army, viz: either the Corps of Engineers, Corps of Topographical Engineers, or Ordinance Department; but at the time he graduated these corps were full, and he had, therefore, to be attached to the artillery. In the official army register for 1861 he appears as captain in the 10th Infantry, his commission in that grade being dated September 17, 1858. His present rank in the regular army is captain. He stands in lineal rank number sixteen on a list of over three hundred of them. inneal rank number sixteen on a list of over three hundred officers, so that he will soon be full major. In April of the present year he was appointed brigadier general of volunteers, and in that capacity has done good service. Since the inception of General Banks' expedition he has been in New York, and his latest duties have been the superintending of the embarkation of the troops.

COL. HAMILTON, OF TEXAS.

Col. A. J. Hamilton—better known as Col. Hamilton, of Texas—has been quite recently appointed military governor of that distracted State. He is one military governor of that distracted State. He is one of the members of Congress from Texas, and about the only one from that section who refused to join the conspirators who left Washington during the last days of the Buchanan Administration. Wigfall and Toombs tried to bully the colonel into their Secession views, but his loyalty was proof against all their arts and threats. For nearly 12 months preceding the 2d of July last, Col. H. resided at Austin, the capital of Texas, where, with a large number of Union men, he considered himself comparatively safe, as there were no rebel soldiers in the immediate vicinity. On the 2d July, being informed that the rebel soldiers, who had then taken possession of Austin, had orders to capture him, he left hastily, and betook himself to the mountains, whence, after a month's delay, he made his way, with a few friends, Austin, had orders to capture him, he left hastily, and betook himself to the mountains, whence, after a month's delay, he made his way, with a few friends, to the Rio Grande, and escaped into Mexico. On his way down the Mexican side of the Rio Grande to Malatanioros. he had many narrow escapes, but at length reached that place in safety, and took passage in a vessel. But the rebels were aware of his movements, and he eluded them only, by travelling some distance overland, and taking refuge in a schooner. After another very narrow escape from the rebels, who sent an armed launch after the schooner, he at last reached New Orleans, having in the meantime fallen in with the U. S. brig Bahia. He came to this city in October last. His accounts of the present condition of Texas, and the suffering of the Union men there, will long by remembered by all who heard them. It should be mentioned that he was elected to the Texan State Senate over a Secessionist, and then refused to take his seat with that rebellious body, saying that he only wanted to show them what was thought by the people in his district. He steadily refused to pay all Confederate taxes, and also to give an account of property in his possession belonging to Northern men. When the rebels took possession of Texas the colonel made a vow never to recognize their authority. He has kept that vow most religiously, as the rebels will find out when he is fairly installed as military governor.

The narration of his recent experience in Texas, after his arrival in New York, elicited a great deal of sympathy for the Unionists of Texas, and but for the political character that circumstances justified people in attributing to them might have brought the political character that circumstances justified people in attributing to them, might have brought forth many good results.

materials, a few of which are as follows:

FALL OF A CHURCH—A MAN CRUSHED TO DEATH-ANOTHER FATALLY INJURED .- About two o'clock yesterday afternoon a portion of the new Presbyterian Church, building at the northeast corner of Broad and Green streets, fell, killing instantly one man, and so badly injuring another that his recovery is considered almost impossible. The church is being constructed by a new congregation, at present worshipping in the second story of the Spring Garden Hall, under the Rev. E. E. Adams, having no structure of their own. The church is built of brown stone, but is yet in an unfinished state. The roof is not yet on, and the joist have recently been laid. The building, it is expected, however, would be completed by spring, and far enough advanced to admit of service being held by Christmas. In the rear of the structure was an arch-way about 20 feet wide, underneath which the pulpit was to be located. While two men were busily engaged on this arch, yesterday afternoon, it gave way, and fell with a tremendous crash. The men were on top of the arch at the time, and one of them, named James Burke, was instantly crushed to death beneath the ruins. The other workman, named Thomas Mackney, although not instantly killed, received injuries of such a serious character from the falling of the scaffolding and loose brick, that it was thought he could not live over night. Mackney was picked up in almost a dying condition, and conveyed to the St. Joseph's Hospital. In about an hour after the sad occurrence, Burke was dug from the ruins. His face was horribly cut, and masons. Burke has a wife and five children. The Coroner was notified, and will investigate the matter to-day. Five men were altogether engaged at work on the arch, and three of them had just left a few minutes previous to the accident; the cause of which is not definitely known. It is said that the abutments were too weak for the weight of the arch; another theory is that the ground is of a sandy nature, and caused the abutments to sink into the earth, thus weakening the structure. This seems more plausible. One side of the High School wilding, on the opposite corner of Green street, has sunk considerable since its crection, and from examinations made it was found that this was caused by the quantity of sand in the earth. The rest of the church remains in a good condition, no other part much disfigured. Both men resided in Carlton street, near Seventeenth, and were by trade stone-

The superintendent of the Sanitary Commission at Washington writes to the Philadelphia Depository, 1235 Chestnut street, stating the urgent need of all varieties of bed and clothing materials, and of such articles as tea, coffee, cocoa, white sugar, dried fruit, farina, etc. This appeal will assuredly be most cordially responded to as all such appeals ever have been by warm-hearted Philadelphians. All articles may be sent to 1235 Chestnut street. The Committee of Depository are C. J. Stille, W. H. Ashhurst, T.

NARROW ESCAPE OF A LAUDANUM DRINK-En.-Last evening, a lady named Mary Ann Weldon, aged fifty-five years, residing at No. 1117 Milton street, was found in Front street below Arch, in a nearly exhausted condition, caused by taking an over-dose of laudanum. She was conveyed to the Sixth ward Station House in an insensible condition. A physician was summoned, and after much trouble, she was brought to her senses, and at last accounts was in a fair way of recovery. A bottle, labelled "laudamim," was found in a basket which McClintock, it appears, was a contracton for making knapsacks, and had quite a number of men employed under him, at the shop, Eighth and Market streets. The testimony of one of the employees was to the effect that BIr. Winnemore, a partner, came into the workshop, a short time ago, and announced that he was authorized by Mr. McClintock to say that operations would be suspended, and no money could be paid to the men. William H. Whitaker, a bookkeeper in the store of C. C. Roberts, Thirteenth and Market streets, testified that a load of knapsacks was delivered there by Mr. McClintock, and that he gave him a check for $175, in full, as payment. Jacob Walters, who worked for McClintock, testified that he delivered to him about 800 knapsacks. The last batch of 100 were delivered on Saturday, and the charge, $32.50, and not yet been paid. Mr. Winnemore testified that a lot of work was returned to Mr. Roberts, and that McClintock authorized him to say to the men that there was no money with which to pay them. He said that he was to get half the profits, and pay a portion of the expenses. To the question, "What did he know about McClintock's intention to defraud?" the witness thus replied, implicating himself as much as McClintock in the alleged guilt: Well, the arrangement was that McClintock was to defraud his men, and the way he was to do it was,

THE MONEY MARKET.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 5, 1862. Between the bulls and the bears gold presented much the appearance of a cork bouncing upon the waves of a stormy sea. The market was subject to favorable rumors of Mr. Chase's intentions for an hour, when the bears would get the control, and down would go the price; so they had it between them all day. The important fluctuations were as follows: opening at 132, it rose to 133; fell by successive stages to 130; rose to 132; fell again to 131, and closed at the latter figure, the market showing signs of weakness. Old Demands followed in the wake of specie, and presented something akin to it in the shape of fluctuations, closing at 1251/2 bid. Government securities were steady, and money rather t...... 54% 55 55 @ 55% The New York Evening Express, of yesterday, makes the following desperate attempt to injure the Government, and create a monetary panic over the report of the Secretary of the Treasury:

The Bank scheme of the Secretary seems of no consequence, except to find a new use for the national debt after it is made. He proposes to kill off the State bank circulation, and substitute a national issue, secured by the deposit of United States bonds.

The whole report proves the financial condition of the country to be in an unsound condition, and should warn the public to beware of getting into vernment, and create a monetary panic over the debt upon paper money alone. The closer merchants keep their affairs, and the less people have to do with speculations, the better it will be for them in the stormy political and financial crists through which the country must pass before March, 1862 The report of the Secretary of the Treasury is the most important ever issued from the Department, and deals in amounts which startle the most extravagant.

He says the national debt will be, on the 30th of June, 1863, over $1,100,000,000. In other words, the cost of war in money thus far, is greater than the cost of all the railroads in the United States. extravagant. For the coming year it will reach $1,700,000,000.

As to the mode of procuring the money required by the Government, Mr. Chase prefers loans—7.30 or 3.65 notes at three years, convertible into 5.20 six per cent. bonds. In some way he wants $600,000,000 per cent. bonds. In some way he wants $500,000,000 per annum over his internal revenue and the customs duties. In other words, the millions per day of leaves must be placed upon the labor of the country in the form of a funded debt or in paper money.

The New York Evening Post of yesterday says: The stock market opens heavy. Operators are disposed to sell at a decline of 1/2021 per cent. There are yarious rumors on the street concerning the financial policy of the Government, and to the effect that Jeff Davis is about to send ambassadors to Washington, asking a suspension of hostilities. It is needless to say that the latter rumor is entirely unfounded but it has its effect on timid holders who unfounded, but it has its effect on timid holders who rush to sell.

Since the adjournment of the Board the market is

Since the adjournment of the Board the market is better, at an advance of 1/0/2 % cut.

The stock of the Terre Haute and Alton Company was called at the Board this morning for the first time. This preferred stock represents the third-mortgage bonds of the old company, and started at 33 bid. The carnings of this road, as published by us two days ago, give the stockholders good reason to hope for dividends next year. The bonds of the company were firm this morning, at advancing prices. The railway-bond list is generally well sustained.

Governments are steady at about yesterday's quotations. Coupons of 1881 are 104@101½; registered 100@100% ex-interest; seven-thirties are 104@101½; per cent. per cent.
Certificates of indebtedness continue dull at 97% (27%) per cent. The Secretary of the Treasury is now issuing $13,000,000 worth of them, the balance on hand of his $100,000,000, which he has authority to issue. These coming on the market in large amounts has, of course, the effect of keeping them heavy.

The demand for money enables most of the large leaders to get six per cent., though we hear of large transactions on time at much lower rates. There is every year, at this time, and until after the 1st of January, a good inquiry, as so many of the States and corporations are getting ready for the half-yearly dividend. There is more good paper on the Fixed and the rates are up 1/2 per cent.

Exchange on London, 60 days, is rather weak at 145 per cent. 45 per cent.

Gold since the first board is weaker, selling at 131 Gold since the first board is weaker, selling at 131 per cent.

The demand for postage currency continues unabated. General Spinner, United States Treasurer, informs us that at the present rate of production the Government will not be able to supply the demand within a year. When it is taken into consideration that only $4,000,000 worth have been issued, thus leaving $36,000,000 more to be issued, some idea can be formed of the immense amount of small-change which has been withdrawn from circulation, and the necessity for prompt delivery to the community on the part of the Government of the remainder of the currency.

About twelve months ago I had a severe attack of Diabetes, attended, with other difficulties too numerous to mention. My desire for drink was constant, and although I drank gallons per day, my thirst was never allayed: I was only able to sleep at short intervals, which seemed like a trance. The mucous surface of my mouth and throat had become so purched and feverish, that I was in constant misery. I was also suffering from all the horrors of Dyspepsia, loss of appetite, Nauses, and frequent and severe attacks of vomiting; and so prostrated was my general system, that I was scarcely able to move about. I had availed myself of the science and skill of distinguished medical mon, both of the Allopathic and Homeopathic school, and exhausted their catalogue of remedies, but found only temporary relief. In this condition, when every ray of hope scemed paralyzed, I heard of the discovery of Professor Bolles in the use of Electricity, and the wonders he was performing in curring disease, and placed myself and friends, in two operations my Diabetes was controlled, and other difficulties soon disappeared; my appetite has returned, sleep undisturbed, and, in fact, I feel like one made anew.

I would further state that I have seen other remarkable curves performed by Prof. Bolles, and would advise the diseased to call at 1220 Walnut street, and be restored to health. I shall be glad to give any one information calling on me.

In attempting a definition of my. disease, I can only give some of the many symptoms which, taken altogether, were the most horrid; and even medical men did not know my disease from pathological symptoms. How ever, Professor C. H. Bolles, by whom I was cured, located my disease in the pelvic viscera, in five minutes after I entered his office, and offered to warrant a perfect cure in eight applications. And I fraulty admit that in eight applications of Electricity, administered by Professor Bolles, 1220 Walnut street, Philadelphia, I am perfectly cured; and to me this is most astonishing, for I had exhausted the catalogue of old-school remedies, and grew worse all the time.

I had long believed that in Electricity resided a potent agent fouthe cure of disease, if a right application could be made; and now I can comprehend, from its powerful effects on me, for a speedy cure, although no shocks were given. All was pleasant, and accomplished as if by magic.

given. All was pleasant, and accomplished as if by magic.

I will give most of my symptoms, for the benefit of suffering humanity. I had dyspepsia, bad marasmus, or wasting of the tissues of the whole body; at times a difficulty of breathing, some palpitation of the heart, much bronchitis, trembling of the limbs after exercise, aversion to business and company; at times gloomy, inability to collect my thoughts vigorously on any subject, a loss of memory, pain in various parts of the body; suffered much from lumbago, deranged secretions of the kidneys and other glands of the system, constant dragging pains in the lumbar region, and severe nervous dizzipess.

ging pains in the lumbar region, and severe hervous dizziness.

I believe it is my duty, as a lover of humanity, to recommend this discovery of Professor BOLLES to the afflicted of all classes. There seems to be no guesswork, no confusion, no matter of doubt in his treatment. He proceeds on fixed principles, and according to fixed laws, which seem to me infallible and harmonious. He warrants, by special contract, the most obstinate, chronic and acute cases, and charges nothing, if he fails. I advise all of the diseased to try his treatment.

LIMBS (Paraplegia) AND APOPLEXY COMBINED.

Read the following:

PROFESSOR BOLLES, 1220 Walnut street. The remarkable cure which I have derived from your method of applying Electricity compels me to thus acknowledge the great obligations I am under to you for snatching me, as it were, from immediate death. About two years ago, while a resident of Cincinnati, Ohio, I was visited with an attack of paralysis of the lower extremities, which rendered me almost entirely unable to stand upon my limbs. I employed some of the most celebrated physicians to be found in that section, but received no apparent benefit, and after a lapse of about eighteen months was taken with a spasm, which one of my physicians pronounced a fit of apoplexy. Two weeks elapsed from that time before I became the least conscious of anything that had transpired, nor could I concentrate my mind or converse upon any subject without becoming very visionary and excited, until I placed myself under your valuable treatment. After my arrival in Philadelphia my attention was called to your treatment by a pamphlet handed me by my father, which contained the names of some gentlemen whom I had been formerly acquainted with, and whose statements I could rely upon. I immediately made up my mind to place myself under your treatment. I have now been the recipient of four treatments, and I now feel perfectly satisfied that I am restored to a sound condition, and thefore feel it my duty to gratefully acknowledge the benefits which I have received through your treatment.

Very respectfully yours, &c.
