midnight hour, I commenced writing a biographical sketch in declamatory style. I thought might be of use to him if published in America, where his plays had been very successful, and where, at the time, very little was known about the author.

He of his virtues and services. His name is familiar to the Southern States, and he has been appointed to the command of the 1st South Carolina Regiment. He has been a member of the State which arrived in Virginia, and whose advent has excited the extraordinary interest of the Southern States.
