FRIGHTFUL COLLISION ON THE CAMDEN AND AMBOY RAILROAD.-About half past one o'clock yesterday morning a frightful collision oc-curred on the Camden and Amboy railroad, which, strange to relate, did not result in the loss of life, although a number of persons were very badly instrange to relate, did not result in the loss of life, although a number of persons were very badly in-jured. It seems that the train which left the Ken-sington depot at a quarter past eleven o'clock on Thursday night reached Princeton about fifteen minutes past time, and went upon the turnout. The train was an unusually long one, and but one-third of it had got upon the sidling, when the express train, which left New York at half past eleven train was an unusually long one, and but one-third of it had got upon the sidling, when the express train, which left New York at half past eleven o'clock came along. The point at which the trains should have met was at Kingston, a short distance above Princeton, but both trains were behind time, and the down train continued on to Princeton, which point it reached just as the upt rain was going at the rate of discention the one of the state of discention of the state of the state was going at the rate of discentions and its was going at the rate of discentions for was very dense, and neither engineer could see the approaching train in time to avert the ca-tastrophe. ere the approaching train in time to avert the ca-tastrophe. The locomotive of the down-train first struck the way car, throwing it over upon its side, and off the track. The second car was next struck; one end was knocked off of it and every seat was demolished. This car was full of passengers, every seat being occupied, and it is a marvel how they escaped with their lives. No one was killed, but a number of the passengers were more or lees hurt. In the other ears in the train no hurts more serious than bruises were sustained. The engine of the down-train, together with the tender and forward baggage car, was thrown into the canal, which contained but little if any water. The remainder of the cars continued upon the track. The remainder of the cars continued upon the track. The engineer and fireman stuck to the locomotive and tender, and went into the canal with the wreck. They both escaped unhurt. None of the passengers on the down-train received any injury. A great deal of confusion and consternation prevailed at the time of the disaster, and it was not a little increased by the log and darkness. The wounded persons were removed to the hotel, at Princeton, as soon so possible, and medical aid was procured for them. Several, who were slightly hurt, were enabled to proceed to New York on the train, which was not long delayed by the scident. But six persons were too much hurt to be able to proceed on their journey, and they remained at the thetel for medical reatment. Their injuries are believed to be not serious, and it is thought they will be able to be moved in a day or two. Among those who were hurt were three men who were in the uniform of soldiers. uniform of soldiers. The passengers who were upon the train coming south were unable to come directly through, in con-sequence of the accident. They left Princeton at 7.40 yesterday morning, and did not reach the Ken-sington depot until 10 o'clock, about seven hours after time. after time. The track was not cleared of the obstructions upon it until 10 o'clock yesterday morning, when the trains commenced running as usual. The obstructions to the road resulting from the accident caused a delay in the mails and the receipt of the morning papers from New York.
