The market opened well on Governments, and after sindry irregular movements of the share list closed with a hardening tendency.

The most conspicuous feature of the market this morning is the very slight effect which the convulsions of the moribund gold speculation is able to produce on the better class of securities.

Two pretty little girls one day
Stood at a public crossing,
The chilling rain in torrents fell,
And wild the winds were tossing. These little girls were wondrous fair, As though by elves begotten, But one was robed in silken gown, The other one in cotton.

Each feared to cross the muddy street. Each hoped that some good stranger Would pass that way, and kindly help Them o'er the mud and danger. stranger came, he say their plight, Patent leathers were forgotten, helped the child with silken gown, but not the one with cotton. Tis ever thus, the wide world o'er, And 'twill be thus forever; The well-dressed man finds fayor first, The ill-dressed oftimes never.

Major Frank G. Ruffin pitches into Senator H. S. Foote, through the columns of the Enguirer, because Foote had accused him of corruption in the Confed Commissary Department. Ruffin says Foote is 70 years of age, which saves him from being called out. The Enguirer, in an editorial admitting that the Federal blockade "has shut them almost entirely out from the outside world," says that the most mischief this has done them is in affording their opponents an opportunity to manufacture public opinion for the world.

THE STEAMER NASHVILLE DESTROYED. THE STEAMER NASHVILLE DESTROYED.

HEADQUARTERS, ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, March 5, 1863. The Second (Gen. Couch's) Corps was reviewed to-day by General Hooker. Never did a more de-lightful day dawn. The sun shone bright, clear, and warm; the fields and roads were dry, and all things favorable for a fine display of the corps. In the ab sence of General Couch, General Hancock was in command. By his order, the several divisions were SKETCH OF THE NASHVILLE.

The Nashville is one of the historic vessels of the rebellion. It was one of the historic vessels of the in Charleston in 1861, and was sent to sea under the rebellian; and the rebellion. She has several times run between Bermuda and Charleston with a contraband cargo; but the last time she entered one of the Southern ports she was so completely hemmed in that she could not escape. It was reported last October that she was fitting out with heavy armament for the purpose of joining the privateer vessels of the problem in the first seized by the rebellian. It was one of the historic vessels of the problem in the first seized by the rebellian in Charleston in 1861, and was one of the historic vessels of the problem in Charleston in 1861, and was one of the historic vessels of the problem in Charleston in 1861, and the problem in Charleston in 1861, and the rebellian in Charleston in 1861, and the problem in Charleston in 186 rawn up in order on high ground, in a large, open field, at 9½ o'clock. The scene was mag The bright new banners, streaming by the side of the old battle-riddled flags, gracefully gave their folds to the breeze. The music from the bands sounded wide over the field, through the clear, still air, and the vhole scene was one of beauty and grande ur. At 10% o'clock the Commander in Chief of the army, attended by his staff, rode on the field where ing with the artillery on the extreme right, brigade, closely reviewing all the men and accourrements. The General took a favorable position on high ground, and the whole corps passed before him n review. The several brigades and divisions made a creditable appearance, and the review passed off in a manner highly complimentary to the officers incommand. General Hooker expressed himself well-pleased with the condition of the command, as well as with the appearance and behavior of the several DEPARTMENT OF THE SOUTHWEST. Movements of the Troops—Condition of the Soldiers—General Benton and his Disci-pline—Good Spirits of the Army, man, and sailed from here with orders not to go into Charleston if there was any danger. He arrived out the bar April 12, while the bombardment was in progress, and lay off and on until the capitalistion of Sumpter, when the ship ran in and was at once seized by the rebel authorities at Charleston. It will be remembared that they had just before seized and released the Marion of the same line.

After her seizure the Nashville lay for some time dile at the dock in Charleston until she essaped to sea. She was then in the very best order, as her owners had but a short time before laid out $50,000 in repairing the ship. Her former purser came from Charleston shortly after her capture, and reported that the vessel was well taken care of, and was covered with tarpauline to keep her from the sun. She was considered so good a sea-going vessel that the Collins Company twice chartered her to put her on in place of one of their Liverpool ships, and she made the trip across each time inside of twelve days.

Soldiers—General Benion and his Discipine—Good Spirits of the Army.

Pilot Knob, Mo., Feb. 26, 1862.—The lowa Brigade, composed of the 21st, 22d, and 23d Iowa, went from Believue Valley to Iron Mountain yesterday. The 1st Division of what was once the Army of Southeast Missouri is still in Believue Valley, and will probably meve to Iron Mountain in a few days. The 2d Brigade of the 2d Division is camped at Aradia, and will join the other forces at Iron Mountain soon. The soldiers are in good health and fine spirits, and eager to get out of Southeast Missouri. General Davidson having reassumed command of the district of St. Louis, General W. P. Benton is now in command of the army; and I am sure there is not a general in all the armies of the Republic more universally beloved by his men than he is. As sound a patriot and brave a soldier as ever buckled on sword, with a big head and a big heart, able to plan a campaign or a battle well, and with the perseverance, steadiness, and pluck to carry out his plans, he unites that indispensable quality of a good general—the faculty of commanding the perfect obedience of his men, and at the same time their unbounded esteem and affection. With that quick, keen sense of honor which characterizes the soldier everywhere, whether he carries a musket or wears a star, he gives his men to understand that there is no prouder badge of honor in the army than a clean gun and well-kept cartridge box; that the private who is brave, always ready for duty, and does his duty well, is as good as the highest officer in the service.

And this doctrine of his, in its practical workings, service.
And this doctrine of his, in its practical workings, leads to no bad results. His men observe toward him more of the outward forms of respect than any aristocrat could ever command, though he made the having been arranged in alphabetical order:

Military ctiquette forbids me telling your read ers how many men are in this army, but fotheir number I do not believe there is any finer body of men in the service, and there are enough of us to make a handsome reinforcement for any of the big armies across the Mississippi. There will be a grand shout when we finally cut loose from Southeast Missouri, and few tears will be shed when we bid a long farewell to all the scenes of our marching and countermarching from village to hamlet, and from hamlet to village—the mud, the rocks, the rapid streams to cross with the pontoon train lumbering along two days in the rear, the false alarms, the scares, the sham fights, the imaginary enemy always "in front," and a thousand other memories which the pen of the historian will soon write down. pen of the historian will soon write down THE LATE TERRIBLE ACCIDENT IN MISSOURI. The train was a large one, drawn by two locomotives, and contained the Twenty-fourth regiment of Missouri volunteers, numbering about five hundred men. The regiment had a few days ago returned with the army of Southwest Missouri to Pilot Knob, and at the time of the accident was on its way to Rolla, where it was to be permanently posted. To the locomotive were attached some six or seven flat cars, on which were laden the camp fixtures, and all the heavy baggage of the regiment.

On these cars also were a number of soldiers, placed there to watch over the baggage. The second locomotive drew after it the passenger cars in which were the soldiers. annual sales do not exceed $25,000, for each license —$10.

At the time of the falling the distance was so short between the locomotive and the train that it was impossible for the engineer to check the train in the slightest. The collision was fearful. The forward locomotive and all of the flat freight cars between the two locomotives were crushed and jammed together in the most terrible manner. The soldiers on the freight cars suffered dreadfully. The Charleston Courier of the 16th ult. says:

Much to our surprise, three fine steamers, with large and valuable cargoes, arrived here at an early hour Saturday. They are the T. D. Wagner, Leopard, and Ruby, all from Nassau. They bring the news that the steamer Florida, Captain Mafit, has been at Nassau to coal up, and it was there at the time she was reported to be captured by the Yankees.

The Yankee truce boat, which had been ashore and which became a wreck, had our troops taken off by a bark, and it was said at Nassau that the Florida had captured the latter with 700 troops on loand. board.
The following steamers were left at Nassau: Eagle, Emma, Nicholas I, Havelook, and Calypso. The latter vessel arrived out on the 9th ult., from this port, and the Ariso, which sailed from here in her company, is supposed to have passed out safely. Captain Coxetter, of the Herald, has taken charge of the fine side-wheel steamer Havelook. The Antonica had proceeded to Havana in charge of Mr. Thayer, her mate.

She made her last trip from that port to Charleston just before the bombardment of Sumpter. THE MONEY MARKET.

PHILADELPHIA, March 6, 1863. Gold was again active and excited, but not so much o as yesterday. The fluctuations were not as extensive bould any further change occur it will be noticed at the close of the slock remarks. A difference of opinion exists as to the future movements of bullion, many supposing that it will soon rise to its former figure; they, of urse, forget the law which is causing the decline, and heir views have no foundation, except "an idea that t will go up again;" others more violently assert that it will be par in a month, and they imagine that because it has declined fifteen per cent. in two days, it must continue to fall until it reaches par. So their opinion is not worth much. Others of more dispassionate views usider that a further decline may be looked for unti the true relative value is reached, which is considere at twenty-five or thirty per cent, premium, but as the operation of new laws has often a contrary effect, or assumes an unexpected phase, they hold that it will take a day or two to decide the matter. In the meantime gold may advance a little or decline largely from fifty per cent., about the present price.
