THURSDAY, MARCH 12, 1863. ARMY OF THE CUMBERLAND.

Special Correspondence of The Press.] DETAILS OF THE BATTLE OF SPRING HILL NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 7. As there is an Associated Press agent stationed i his city, you have no doubt received intelligence of the disaster at Franklin, the fault of which must be iid to that well-known military humbug, "Major Brigadier General" Gilbert, the fellow wno made he great march of twenty-five miles in ten days in Kentucky last fall, and who "listened" to the canion's roar at Perryville. It is well known that Van Dorn, with ten o relve thousand men, has been at Spring Hill for a week or more. The appearance of rebel cavalry on r outposts has been of daily occurrence for some time, and frequent skirmishes with the troops under Col. Opdyke had taken place, always resulting in our favor. It was clear that the rebel plan was to draw the troops from this place and then attack them On Monday a reconnoissance was ordered in the irection of Spring Hill, and the 33d Indiana, 19th 18th Ohio Battery, 9th Pennsylvania, and 2d Michigan Cavalry, composed the force, all under the command of Col. Colburn, of the 33d Indiana. After an advance of about four miles, in which considerable skirmishing ensued, the brigade encamped, and held their ground until Thursday morn-ing, when the enemy made their appearance in our mmediate front again. Our force met them in line of battle, which caused the rebels to fall back in slight disorder, apparently. Our troops were in the highest possible spirits, and up to this time confident of success. So well did everything go to all apearances, that a feeling of security overcame their vigilance, and led to the neglect of those precauthey reached Thompson's Station, and were sudlenly and unexpectedly greeted with the thunder of hree batteries from as many commanding heights while at almost the same instant heavy masses of entry appeared as if by magic on either flank. The natural result of this discovery was some consion, but, nevertheless, our men showed the most etermined courage and boldly charged one of the rebel batteries. No infantry was seen near this battery until our men approached within a few yards of when the rebels rose from behind a stone fence, where they had been effectually concealed, and from whence they poured a most deadly fire on our men, first checking and then driving them back with heavy loss to us and little to themselves. On other parts of the field, however, the rebels lost severely; but ry, with three batteries of artillery disgorging their eath-dealing missiles full upon them, and no reasonable hopes of immediate reinforcements, it was not strange that they yielded to the "inexorable logic f events," and most of the 33d Indiana, 85th Indiana, 19th Michigan, 22d Wisconsin regiments, with their commissioned officers, are Van Dorn's prisoners. Our artillery was withdrawn without During all this time General Gilbert, with nine regiments of infantry, was within a few miles of the disaster, and refused to reinforce the suffering forces. Since his Kentucky campaign General Gilbert has been most thoroughly detested by the army, he being unfit to command even a regiment.

Our loss, as far as ascertained, is as follows:

The rebel loss is small, and we succeeded in capturing but fourteen prisoners. B. C. T. SOUTH ATLANTIC SQUADRON.

Destruction of the Rebel Steamer Nash ville—Official Reports of Admiral Dupont and Commander Worden, Explosion of a Torpedo beneath the Iron-clad Montank, &c. FLAG-SHIP WARASH, PORT ROYAL HARBOR, S. C., March 2, 1863.
SIR : I have the satisfaction to inform the Department of the destruction of the privateer Nashville, while lying under the guns of Fort McAllister, on the Great Ogecohee, Georgia, by the ruomann, Commander J. L. Worden, whose enclosed report The Department is aware that I have had this to the extreme vigilance and spirit of Lieutenant cotton, but, though constantly on the alert, she never ventured to run out. She then withdraw up the Ogeechec, and agappeared, after a length of time, thoroughly fitted as, privateer, and presenting a very fine appearance.

Fort McAllister was strengthened, the river staked with a line of torpedoes in front, to prevent its accent by light vessels to cut her out. She has been frequently seen under the fort, ready to make a dash if the opportunity offered, or was quietly waiting for an iron-clad to convoy her to sea.

If I am not missinformed, she had a heavy rifle gun on a pivot, as a part of her armament, was proverbially fast, and would doubtless have rivalled the "Alsbama" and "Oreto" in their depredations on our commerce. I have, therefore, never lost sight of the great importance of keeping her in, or of destroying her. If I could. I have accomplished both, through the zeal and vigilance of my gunboat captains mentioned above, and the quick perception and rapid execution of Commander. Worden, who has thus added to his already brilliant services.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. F. DUPONT,

Rear Admiral Commanding

South Atlantic Blockading Squadron.

U. S. IRON-CLAD MONTAUE,

Washington, D. C.

U. S. IRON-CLAD MONTAUR,

OGERCHEE RIVER, GEORGIA, Feb. 28, 1863.

Sir: I have the honor to report that yesterday evening the enemy's steamer Nashville was observed by me in motion, above the battery known as Fort McAllister. A reconneissance immediately made, proved that in moving up the river she had grounded in that part of the river known as the seven-miles reach. Believing that I could, by approaching close to the battery, reach and destroy her with my battery, I moved up at daylight this morning, accompanied by the blockading fleet in these waters, consisting of the Seneca, Lieut. Com. Gibson; the Wisshickon, Lieut. Com. Davis, and the Dawn, Act. Lieut. Com. Barnes.

By moving up close to the obstructions in the river, I was enabled, although under a heavy fire from the battery, to approach the Nashville, still aground, within the distance of twelve hundred yards. A few well-directed shells determined the range, and soon succeeded in striking her with 11aground, within the distance of twelve hundred yards. A few well-directed shells determined the range, and soon succeeded in striking her with 11-inch and 12-inch shells. The other gunboats maintained a fire from an enfilading position upon the battery, and the Nashville at long range. I soon had the satisfaction of observing that the Nashville had caught fire, from the shells exploding in her, in several places, and in less than twenty minutes she was caught in flames forward, aft, and amidships. At 9.20 A. M. a large pivot gun, mounted abaff her foremast, exploded from the heat; at 9.40 her smoke chimney went by the board; and at 9.55 her magazine exploded with terrific violence, shattering her in smoking ruins. Nothing remains of her. The battery kept up a continuous fire upon this vessel, but struck her but five times, doing no damage whatever. The fire upon the other gunboats was wild, and did them no damage whatever. After assuring myself of the complete destruction of the Nashville, I, preceded by the wooden vessels, dropped down beyond the range of the enemy's guns. In so doing, a torpedo exploded under this vessel, inflicting, however, but little injury.

I beg leave, therefore, to congratulate you, sir, upon this final disposition of a vessel which has so long been in the minds of the public as a trouble-some pest.

Blockading Squadron, Port Royal, S. C. The Capture of the Jacob Bell. HALIFAX, March 8.—The following account of the pture of the ship Jacob Bell, from Swatow, China, ound to New York, by the Confederate privates

Commissioner of Customs to the Imperial Govern ment of China, and Master Charles W. Johnson, passengers on board the Bell:

The Jacob Bell, 1,600 tons, Captain Frisby, with a full cargo of teas, cassia, camphor, cassia oil, etc., valued at $1,500,000, all British property, at about noon on the 12th ultimo, about one hundred miles from Sombrero, discovered a steamer in pursuit, under full head of steam and all sail set. After six hours' chase the steamer fired a shot, which struck about twice the length of the ship astern, when Captain Frisby ordered his ship hove to. The steamer carried the Federal fing.

After sailing around the Bell three times, she presented a broadside, ran up the rebel fing, and sent a boat's crew on board. She proved to be the rebel privateer Florida. After examining the Bell's papers, she was declared a prize to the Confederate States.

The officers, crew, and passengers of the Bell. passengers on board the Bell: pers, she was declared a prize to the Confederate States.

The officers, crew, and passengers of the Bell were immediately transferred to the Florida, being allowed only half an hour to collect a few necessary articles, the prize crew appropriating whatever of the remaining articles, including many valuable curlosities, &c., that pleased their fancy. The Florida immediately started in pursuit of a schooner, giving orders to the prize-master to steer a certain course to meet the Florida the following morning. The schooner escaped in the darkness.

The Florida and Jacob Bell met, the morning of the 13th, when the prize crew were taken off and the ship fired. The Florida narrowly escaped being run down by the Bell, she having banked her fires, the crew were so intently engaged in transferring plunder as to quite neglect the management of the ship, which, with sails set, bore down on the Florida, the rigging of which had to be manned, and the Bell shoved off. She was then abandoned and burned to the water's edge. The same day the Florida brought to a French bark, boarded and examined her papers, afterward chased a schooner, which escaped. On the 17th brought to the Danish bark Morning Star, which consented to receive the rew and passengers of the Bell and land them at St. Thomas.

THE INDIAN WAR IN UTAH. reat Battle of Bear River-Concise Histor

Inflicted-The Losses on Both Sides, &c from the Deseret (U.T.) News, February 10. ] n the last issue of the News, and the one preceding that, we noticed, as far as we had information, "the expedition for the arrest of Indian chiefs, and the fight with the Indians." The volunteers have now turned to their quarters on the beach, east of the city, and through them we learn the facts in detail of the expedition, and of a hard fought battle, which, though in a locality outside of our Territorial limits, will not be the less felt in its results by our citizens. As we have been freely furnished with what infornation we have requested, we give it as freely to our readers at home and abroad.

THE EXPEDITION.

THE EXPEDITION.

At the time we noticed the departure of the infantry, under Capt. Hoyt, and of the cavalry, under Major McGarry. We now learn that the former had 59 men, of Company K, 3d Infantry, and the latter had 220 men of Companies A, H, M, and K, 2d Oavalry. These, together with twelve mounted men as an escort to the baggage train, and Col. Connor, Major McGarry, Major Gallagher, and Lieut. Berry, constituted the entire fighting force that went north. Guides and others attached to the company are, of course, not counted. Five or six irregulars, among them "Dutch Joe," a gentleman with whom we have no acquaintance, went in and had a free we have no acquaintance, went in and had a free ght, by way of wiping off old scores with the In-ians; so, altogether, the force exceeded a little over oians; so, altogether, the force exceeded a little over 300 men.

The judiciary, probably, regarded the marching of the expedition as an aid to the United States marshal in serving writs for the apprehension of several chiefs; but it is quite as probable that the movement was but a part of the esmpaign upon which Col. Connor and the volunteers have entered to clear the north and central routes to California of the marauding, thieving Indians, whose murderous hostilities we were so frequently called upon to record last summer. Two previous expeditions, under Major McGarry, were but the prelude to that which we have now to record, and, as far as we can learn, conjecture leads to the conclusion that the end of expeditions has not yet come, and that the Colonel will either make an end of Pocotello and Sag-witch, with their bands, this summer, or drive them far enough from the northern route to render it safe for the emigrants.

THE ARRIVAL AT BEAR RIVER. n reaching Bear river, although it was yet early light, by the aid of his field-glass the Colonel ld plainly discover the position of the Indians on daylight, by the aid of his field-class the Colonel could plainly discover the position of the Indians on the north side of the river. The cavalry dismounted, loaded arms, remounted, and Major McGarry had orders to lead across the river, and, if possible, surround the Indians. Companies K and M. Lieutenant Chase and Captain Price, first reached the banks on the north side, after considerable difficulty from the ice in the bottom of the river, and from the masses of ice that were carried along with the current. Companies H and A, Captain McLean and Lieutenant Quiun, followed close behind them. The first companies galloped up the base of a range of hills to the east, and formed in line of battle; but before all the men had dismounted the Indians sent a shower of lead among them, wounding one of the volunteers. The first companies were deployed as skirmishers, and ordered along the front of the ravine. The two other companies were up immediately after, and. dismounting, were ordered forward in the same manner.

THE POSITION OF THE INDIANS. The Indians had excellent winter quarters in a deep ravine, about three-fourths of a mile long, running almost directly due north from Bear river into the mountains that formed their protection on their left. The banks of the ravine, east and west, were almost nervenidean, with only three places of diff. left. The banks of the ravine, east and west, were almost perpendicular, with only three places of difficult approach, which the Indians had made for their own convenience, and for the annoyance of any approaching enemy. Anticipating an attack, they had cut steps in the east side of the banks of the ravine, from which they could conveniently fire without exposure, and descend again for perfect security. Besides these natural advantages in the ravine, on each side there were rising henches, about ten feet apart, which also gave the Indians the advantage over their exposed enemy, who had to discover, suddenly, that ready rifles awaited their approach.

In the ravine, the wick-lups were planted among the willows, which partly concealed them, and the lower vortices were emballed outside with rock the willows, which partly conceated them, and the lower portions were embanked outside with rock and earth. With considerable ingenuity, they had interwoven the willows to the east of their wick-tups, with loop-holes, through which they could fire without exposure. They had also forked sticks set in the ground, to serve as rests for their rifles, and with these, no doubt, considered themselves safe enough against any force likely to be brought against them.

As the troops formed in line of battle, the Indians seemed to look upon the coming struggle with particularly good humor. While one of the chiefs rode up and down in front of the ravine, brandishing his spear in the face of the volunteers, the warriors in front sang out: "Fours right, fours left! Come on, you California sons of b—!" On such a polite invitation the word was given to "advance," and gradually, as the volunteers neared the ravine, the Indians retired over the benches, awaited calmly their approach, and sent at them a murderous fire that was sensibly felt everywhere. A large number of men fell dead, several mortally wounded, and others through adopt another style of fighting. The word was passed along the line for the men not to waste their ammunition, and to protect themselves as much as possible. In the advance of Company K, Lieutenant Chase was first wounded in the wrist, and in a moment or two received his mortal wound, but kept his saddle for about twenty minutes longer, urging on his men in the fight. Capt. McLean in waste their amminition, and to protect themselves as much as possible. In the advance of Company K. Lientenant Chase was first wounded in the wrist, and in a moment or two received his morial wound, but kept his saddle for about twenty minutes longer, urging on his men in the fight. Capt. McLean in the advance with Company M. was wounded in the right hand, but kept on toward the ravine, with revolver in his left hand, till he received a dangerous wound in the left thigh, which has caused him much suffering. and threatens his life.

The Colonel, seeing the advantageous position of the Indians, resorted to strategy, and sent Major McGarry, with a small detachment of dismounted cavalry, to cross the north-end of the ravine, to flank the Indians on the left and take, them in the rear. The infantry, hearing the firing, while yet distant from the scene of action, hastened up and attempted to cross the river, but it was too deep for footmen, and they had to fall back. Colonal-Commor sent over to them the cavalry horses, with which they crossed, and, wet and freezing, they, entered the fight. Captain Hoyt was ordered to support Major McGarry in the flanking movement, and with his company succeeded in scrambling up the hill, skitmishing as they went, till they finally reached the west side, where, with the troops north and east, they kept up an enflading fire on the Indians, in the opening of the fight, had the best of it, and the volunteers fell like the leaves in autumn, but the tide of fortune changed, and savage fergoity was outmatched by generalship, brave men, and good rifes.

As the work of death progressed, and the result was now clearly seen, the lower portion of the revine became the object of interest. Captain Price, with a detachment of men from companies K and M, was doing fearful execution. In the space of five minutes, eight of his men had fallen in death or were mortally wounded; but others taking their places, the contest was kept up, and at the close of the struggle, forty-eight Indians were lying toge and in full retreat; but very few of them e THE RESULT OF THE BATTLE.

THE RESULT OF THE BATTLE.

We have learned nothing more definite with regard to the number of Indians killed, than what we stated last week. From 250 to 300 were undoubtedly killed in the fight, or in the river, in the attempt to escape. The chiefs, Bear-hunter, Sagwitch, and Lehi, were among the slain.

A thousand bushels of wheat, and a large amount of beef and provisions, together with an abundant supply of powder, lead, bullets and caps, were found in the encampment. There were numerous evidences of emigrant plunder, such as modern cooking utensils, looking-glasses, combs, brushes, fine rifles and pistols, and such things as the Indians were likely to consider worthy of preservation, when they had attacked and robbed the emigrants. Wagon-covers, with the names of their unfortunate owners, were also lying around and patching up their wick-i-ups. What the command thought worth bringing to camp they took, and destroyed the balance, leaving enough only for the preservation of the squaws and papooses. Among the trophies of war were 175 ponies, that the Indians had tied up to the willows during the fight. f war were 175 ponies, that the the willows during the fight. THE ORDER OF THE DAY. ng complimentary order was read to the troops: HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT UTAH, CAMP DOUGLAS, U. T., February 6, 1863. The colonel commanding has the pleasure of congratulating the troops of this post upon the brillian victory achieved at the battle of Bear river, Washington Territory.

After a rapid march of four nights in intensely cold weather, through deep snow and drifts, which you endured without murmur or complaint, even when some of your number were frozen with cold, and faint with hunger and fatigue, you met our enemy, who have heretofore, on two occasions, defied and defeated regular troops, and who have, for the last fifteen months, been the terror of the emigrants—men, women, children, and citizens of these valleys—murdering and robbing them without fear of punishment. ment.
At daylight, on the 29th of January, 1863, you encountered the enemy, greatly your superior in numbers, and in a desperate battle, continued with unflinching courage for over four hours, you completely cut him to pieces, captured his property and arms, destroyed his stronghold, and burned his lodges.

The long list of killed and wounded is the most fitting autoguou your courage and brayery.

The long list of killed and wounded is the most fitting eulogy on your courage and bravery.

The colonel commanding returns you his thanks; the gallant officers and men who were engaged in this battle, without invidious distinction, merit the highest praise; your uncomplaining endurance and unexampled conduct on the field, as well as your thoughtful care, and kindness to the wounded, is worthy of emulation.

While we rejoice at the brilliant victory you have achieved over your savage foe, it is meet that we do honor to the memory of our brave comrades, the heroic men who fell fighting to maintain the supremacy of our arms—we deeply mourn their death and acknowledge their valor.

While the people of California will regret their loss, they will do honor to every officer and soldier who has, by his heroism, added new laurels to the fair escutcheon of the State.
