Interesting Anniversary of Washington's Birthday in London—Speech of the Ameri-can Minister—Progress of the Polish Revolution—Opinions of the European Press —Lord Palmerston on the French Emperor's Kidnapping. WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY IN LONDON.

[From the London News, February 24.]

The anniversary festival to commemorate the birthday of Washington, took place yesterday evening, at St. James' Hall, and was attended by about one hundred and twenty persons. The room was decorated with the Union fag, intermingled with the national banner of England.

In the absence of Mr. Morse, the consul of the United States, who was absent from illness, General O. Vandenbergh presided. Amongst the company, including a large number of ladies, were the Hon. Charles Francis Adams, the American Minister; Mr. Charles L. Wilson and Mr. B. Moran, Secretaries to the American Legation; Mr. White, M. P., Mr. Coningham, M. P., Professor Newman, the Rev. Newman Hall, the Rev. Nr. Warren, Mr. Issiah Veree, Jr., late United States Secretary of Legation at St. Petersburg; Dr. W. R. Ballard, Judge J. G. Winter, of Georgia; Mr. J. Snow, Mr. R. Hunting, Mr. O. F. Dennett, Dr. Richardson, Mr. A. Bostwick, Mr. W. Wilkes, Dr. Coffin, &c.

The chairman proposed, as the first toast, "The Memory of Washington." In doing so he observed that Washington was the founder of those great institutions which were now exposed to such deadly assaults. The name of that great man could never be dissevered from the Union; and when the latterwas broken, the fair fame of the former would have been tarnished. [Hear, hear.] For the last two years it had been customary with a certain class of persons in this country to compare Washington and Jefferson Davis, because both resisted established authority. Nothing could be more unwarrantable than such a comparison; for while Washington rebelled against wrong and oppression, the leader of WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY IN LONDON.

than such a comparison; for while Washi belied against wrong and oppression, the leader the South rebelied in order that slavery might come permanent in the Union. The toast was drunk in solemn silence. The toast was drunk in solemn silence.
After the toasts of "The President of the United states" and "The Queen," both of which were man gave "The Union," the chief instrument in bearing an infant Republic on to prosperity and greatness. May the Union never be divided, The toast was drunk with three times three, the band, which was present, afterwards playing "Yan-kee Doodle."

Mr. Adams, the American Minister, who, on rising band, which was present, afterwards playing "Yankee Doodle."

Mn. Adams, the American Minister, who, on rising to respond, met with a very hearty welcome, said: Mr. Chairman and ladies and gentlemen, in responding to the sentiment I feel in some degree embarrassed by the manner in which it has been associated with myself. If I were at home, as I was in the days to which you, sir, have been pleased to allude, when I was a candidate for the office of President, without any chance of being elected [laughter] I should have liked nothing better as a theme to descant upon. But things are now changed very much, and I find myself placed, without any act of my own, in a situation in which, according to all the ordinary usages, at least of the European world, it would not be very proper for me to indulge in any very extensive or very hazardous talk. [Laughter.] I feel myself in a somewhat similar position to that of the Irishman, who, having got somewhat exhilarated, said to himself, "Faith, it's not I, but somebody else." Standing in the position which I have now the honor to occupy, I feel that it is not I, but somebody else that is here, and therefore I hope you will be so kind as to excuse my not making a speech this evening. I should have been delighted to extend the subject in connection with the associations which the chairman has presented; but. in a foreign country and in a foreign country and in a stratisticated and I would the extended and I would the extended as the stratistic test and I would the extended and I would and I was a stratisticated and I would the extended and I would the extended and I would the extended and I would at the extended and I would and the extended and I would the extended and I would and the extended and I wou man has presented; but in a foreign country and in a foreign situation I feel myself to be, as it were, in a strait-jacket, and I would, therefore, rather de cline the responsibility of speaking. [Hear hear] But, before sitting down, I may, perhaps, be permitted to make one remark connected with the sentiment to which I had to respond any with the Union and Washington went together—that chain of connection between those two ideas are dissoluble. Never was there a remark made in opening address. You remarked sir, in effect, that Union; and Washington went together—that the chain of connection between those two ideas are indissoluble. Never was there a remark made in relation to American affairs more true than that. [Cheers.] The Union was as much the work of Washington as any mortal man. He devoted the whole of his efforts for years to the bringing about the Union; he crowned it by accepting the situation which finally effected the completeness of the bond; and one of the last acts of his political life was, as you must all remember, that memorable legacy by which he enjoined his countrymen to keep the idea of the Union, as the ark of the covenant, ever sacred in their minds. [Cheers.] Yet I have heard it contended in some quarters that it Washington had been alive at this time he would have been found arming the rebels. The persons who talk in that way have little perception of the character or principles of the persons about whom they are speaking. [Hear, hear.] What! Washington that erbellion—axis the authority he had everprized! For what? We all know what has been the object of the gentlemen who stimulated the present rebellion—it was to extend and perpetuate slavery. [Cries of "True."] Would Washington have taken part in any such movement; when the very last act of his life, as his testamentary depositions shows, was the liberation of all his slaves? [Hear, hear.] Intevit the prefension may dismiss, with contempt, brever, the prefension final under any circumstances, the name of that, under any circumstances, the name of that, under any circumstances, the name of that, under any circumstances, the name of the dismiss, with contempt, prefer to the name and memory of Washington must be kept in reverence, and guarded with care, exclusively by the loyal portion of the Americans. It can never be regarded with admiration by those on the other side. [Cheers.] They have voluntarily abandoned all the glorious associations connected with the perpetuation of the Union. [Loud cheers.]

THE POLISH REVOLUTION.

The Polish question, under the attitude taken by France in favor of the Poles and against Prussian intervention, was attracting great attention. The Paris Constitutionnel, which is supposed to speak the sentiments of the Emperor Napoleon, had published a strong article against the intervention of Prussia. The London Times, alluding to this article, says that if the Constitutionnel really speaks the sentiments of the French Emperor, the prospect is, indeed, momentous, and it is impossible to repel the apprehension that this foolish King of Prussia is making a great and perhaps a fatal opportunity for his powerful neighbor.

The London Post thinks the King of Prussia's fate lies in the hands of the three great Powers, and that, unless they combine to force him into a safer policy than that which he has followed hitherto, he will fall a victim to the most aggressive of them. The Post concludes by observing: "When the Emperor Napoleon, Lord Palmerston, Count Rechberg, and Garibaldi are working for the same result—the liberation of Poland—the alliance may be unholy, but it would appear to us irresistible."

The other leading journals unite in regarding the question; as one of European importance, owing mainly to the conduct of Prussia.

The London Daity News thinks that the fallure of the French arms in Mexico may prove fortunate for the Poles. Every fresh report from Mexico is of a nature to urge the Emperor to put an end to the Mexican war, and evacuate the country. Advice of that kind could not be followed without a full excuse, such as an active, part taken in the affairs of Germany and Poland would instantly afford. Such an alternative is now before the Emperor, and, no doubt, forms the object of his serious consideration. THE POLISH REVOLUTION.

cuse, such as an active part taken in the aliairs of Germany and Poland would instantly afford. Such an alternative is now before the Emperor, and, no doubt, forms the object of his serious consideration. Among his political councillors there exists, it is understood, perfect unanimity of opinion on the policy of intervention.

The London Times' Paris correspondent says:
"Of the determination of the French Government to interfere in favor of Poland there is no doubt. They, hattirally enough, hope that this intervention will not be otherwise than diplomatic, but if notes and remonstrances are of no avail, and if Prussia is resolved on playing the part of auxiliary to Russia in her iniquitous attempt to crush the Poles, people would not be surprised if a French army were to make its appearance on the Rhine. The French note to Prussia was, it is said, a separate act on the part of France. The question was mooted whether it were not well to wait for the opinion of the British Government before remonstrating with Prussia, but it was thought better to act at once. There is nothing menacing in the note. It states that the Emperor is unwilling to believe that the Cabinet of Berlin could be so regardless of the principles of non-intervention, and he would willingly receive auch explanations as would remove all cause of disauch explanations as would remove all cause of disquiet."

La France says: "We believe ourselves correct in stating that Austria is disposed to join the policy of La France says: "we believe ourselves correct in stating that Austria is disposed to join the policy of France and England on the Polish question. A petition in favor of Poland had been presented to the French Senate by M. Girardin. It bore two thousand signatures. A committee of the Senate would report upon it."

The Paris Constitutionnel of the 24th February expresses the hope that the Convention between Russia and Prussia will be abandoned, and says the voice raised by Europe against Prussia is still only a warning—the Prussian Government will hardly desire that it should become a threat.

The Opinione Nationale gives a rumor that Prussia had positively refused to yield to the representations which the French Ambassador had been instructed to offer.

La France points out to Russia the expediency, in order to avoid a general war, of giving liberal institutions to Poland.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times says nothing was talked of but a triple alliance of England, France and Austria, with a view to a solution of the Polish question, which was taking precedence of everything else.

rench, which he characterized as a most base and evil proceeding, and worse than a revival of the slave trade.

Lord Palmerston said the transaction was not only very irregular and unfortunate, but in some of its details liable to stronger censure than his friend applied to it. The facts of the case were as follows:
The Emperor of the French, on account of the mortality of the French troops in Mexico, had desired to culist a force of Africans for service there, but the Pasha of Egypt at once went beyond this request. A regiment of Nublans was marched down to Alexandria, and forthwith shipped on board a French frigate before they knew why or where they were going. This was not the intention of the French Emperor, who only wished to enlist Africans voluntarily; but the conduct of the Egyptian sovereign was exactly similar in violence and cruelty to that which had been committed at Warsaw. Warraw.

He, however, hoped that the French Government, which had expressed its strong dislike of what had been done at Warraw, would feel that this was exactly the same, or rather worse, in cruelty, for the Nubisns were carried to an unhealthy climate, and he trusted that they would as far as possible repair the wrong. Her Majesty's Government had expressed an opinion to this effect to the French Government. vernment.

SIATH DAY—EVENING SESSION.

[Special Correspondence of The Press.]

York, Pa., March 10, 1863.

Conference convened pursuant to adjournment, and the exercises were opened by singing and prayer.

The minutes of the preceding session read and approved. The Committee on Memoirs reported that three brethren who were present one year ago, and participated in our services, have slept the sleep of death. Rev. James Sanks, long and favorably known to the ministers of this body, died on the 4th of June, 1862. Rev. The Committee on Seamen's Union Bethel handed in their report, but, savoring too much of censure upon the chaplain, which was regarded as irrelevant, the whole report, after having been read, was laid on the table. the table.

The committee on affairs of Dickinson College reported the institution to be in a prosperous condition. Colonel John A. Wright and Rev. Dr. Johnson addressed the Conference, referring to the infinite value of such an institution, and urged upon the ministers to obtain students for the same, as well as to bring the subject in all its bearings before the people. well as to bring the subject in all its bearings before the people.

The Committee on Seminaries reported favorably upon Dickinson Seminary, Williamsport; Irving Female Institute, Mechanicaburg; Baltimore Female College; West River Classical Institute, at Owensville, Maryland; Cumberland Valley Institute; Female Seminary at Cockeysville, Maryland, principal, John S. Deall. Report accepted.

The Committees on Tract, Temperance, and Sunday School causes reported, and reports adopted.

The report of the Committee on Colonization, on account of some discrepancy, was laid on the table. Four motions to adjourn were lost.

Taking last year's vote for the returns not heard is estimated at 3,276. Eastman's gain from last year is 4,524.

For Congress, Daniel Marcy is elected in the First district over Joel Eastman (Rep.) by 150 majority. Edward H. Rollins (Rep.) is re-elected in the Second district by 300 majority, over John H. George, (Dem.)

James W. Patterson (Rep.) is elected in the Third district by 350 majority, over Wm. Burns, (Dem.)

The Republicans will have from sixty to seventy majority in the House, nine of the twelve Senators, and the Council will probably stand three Republicans to two Democrats.

CONCORD, N. H., March 12.—Returns from several towns in the Second Congressional district bring, Rollins' majority down to so small a figure that it may require the official returns to decide. Christian Commission Meeting at Harrisburg, Harrisburg, March 12.—A most enthusiastic and crowded meeting was held last night, in behalf of the Christian Commission, in Rev. Dr. Dewitt's Church. Ex. Governor Porter presided, assisted by a number of distinguished vice presidents. Gov. Curtin was prevented from presiding on account of pievious engagement in your city, but expressed his regret in a letter, warmly commending the objects of the meeting.

The meeting was eloquently and effectively addressed by Rev. A. Reed, of Parkersburg; Rev. George J. Mingins, of the Commission; George H. Stuart, and Hon. Henry D. Moore.

A collection of six hundred and fifty dollars was taken up, and a committee was appointed to solicit donations. Seldom has an audience in our city been so strongly moved in behalf of any object. THE NEW PASHA.—The death of the late Pasha of Egypt appears to have revived the hopes of the fanatical Turks, who think, apparently without any foundation, that the new Pasha is less favorably inclined to the Ohristians than his predecessor. A party of soldiers insuited a French gentleman the other day, and, proceeding from one degree of violence to another, they would have murdered him if he had not been rescued from their hands. The European population were thrown into great alarm, but apologies were tendered to the French consul, the soldiers were punished, their superiors disgraced, and confidence is again restored.

SUPPRESSION IN FRANCE.—Suppression of objectionable papers or pamphlets is the order of the day in France. Copies of Mr. Hooper's "Waterloo, or the Downfall of the First Napoleon," which have reached Paris, have been seized by the French police; and not only the February number of the Cornhill Magazime has been seized for its favorable review of Mr. Kinglake's "Invasion of the Crimea," but the magazine has been interdicted from France for the future. insurgents would arrive there.

There were rumors of engagements having taken place near Pretrikan and Radousk.
