RELIGIOUS. Pulpit Portraits-No. XXV. THE REV. T. DE WITT TALMAGE. BY GRAYBEARD. The subject of this sketch, the Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, pastor of the Second Reformed Dutch Church, Seventh street, above Brown, whatever he may have, or whatever he may lack, possesses the elements of popularity, and this, in our day, whether in the pulpit or out of it, "covers a multitude of sins." It may not be fair, in all cases, to estimate a preacher from a single discourse, because it may be nuch below, or may be above, his average. however, there is a marked individuality of style and thought, as there is in Mr. Talmage, a "specien brick" is sufficient to indicate the character of the structure. In appearance, manners, and mode of speech, Mr. T. would be taken for a "live Yankee," though he is not a native of New England. Biographically, he is a New Jerseyman, having been born at Bound-brook, Somersot county, in that State, in 1832, which makes him thirty-one years of age, about seven years younger than he looks to be. Having read law some two years, he entered the New Brunswick Theological Seminary, where he graduated with distinction, as he also did at the New York University. He commenced preaching in June, 1856, his first church being located at Belleville, in his native State. He continued in that relation three years, when he was called by a congregation at Syracuse, New York, in June, 1859, where he remained until he came to Philadelphia, in April, 1862, to assume the duties of his present charge. Mr. Talmage, like the Beechers, belongs to a reaching stock, and is historically, traditionally, preaching sto and nominally a Reformed Dutchman. Practically and doctrinally, however, he so rarely discovers any sectarian bias at all, that probably but few schools of theology would take serious exception to his preaching. Either he does not stand rigidly in the sintenance of the great doctrinal parts, or bonework of Christianity, or he chooses to veil this skeleunder the more attractive and symmetrical exte rior of Christianity, as it should be exemplified in every day life. In this particular he stands in striking contrast with his honored predecessor, the Rev. Dr. Berg, now professor at New Brunswick. The latter, while his discourses lacked the outward ornaments which attract the popular ear, dealt almost exclusively with the rocky foundation and the solid frame-work of his creed. As to which of these wings of pulpit practice has the more advantages, it would be alike invidious and foreign to our purpose In person, Mr. Talmage is tall and stalwart. He has a manly head and face, the former rather thinly covered with light brown hair; the latter set off with closely-cut reddish whiskers. Great mental activity, and firmness of character, are written upon every lineament and feature of his face, blended with enough of the genial and jocose to render him inde-pendent, bordering on the eccentric, in the pulpit, and exceedingly companionable out of it. He has an honest gray eye which he uses with considerable power in speaking. His voice, in its lower tones, is not good-something of a cross between the guttural and the nasal, and his clocution, in reading the scriptures and hymns, execrable—the worst, I think, I ever heard in the pulpit-with the possible exception of Dr. Wadsworth's, formerly of this city. The only redeeming offset to this defect in Mr. T.'s delivery is the fact that it is natural. If he is a bad model (in this respect), he would certainly be a worse copyist. What has been said, however, about his ding, applies with less emphasis to his preaching Although his sermons are mainly written, their delivery are extemporaneous, and as he progresses with his theme he leaves the dead level already deibed, and sometimes modulates his voice with an effect that thrills you. The staccate that characterizes his pronunciation, (which is otherwise distinct enough,) must at once strike every one who hears him. In fact, he utters some of his words too short to be understood in remote parts of the house. This is a defect which he could, and ought to remedy. Whatever allowance may be made for the idiosyncrasies of a man's style. there can be no excuse for a public speaker's pronouncing "cedar" as if it were spelled cener; or uttering the words "of war," as if they were written o' mar: or for misplacing the accent on so plain a word as "merchandise," by making it merchan dize. He speaks with unusual rapidity, gets through his nent; have all confidence in Dr. L.'s skill and sermons quickly, leaving his hearers little time for anything but listening while he is preaching. His thought intended to be conveyed, though in his rapid flight through figures and metaphors he some-times hurries you to the very brink of the ridiculous, where he leaves you to meditate, for a second or two, "upon the situation." His sentences are short and terse, and occasionally rounded up with a sort of spasmodic abruptness, as if he felt intensely what he was uttering, and meant to demolish the gainsayer with a single blow—another characteristic and noticeable peculiarity. His gestures, which are few, and evidently not studied, harmonize well with his delivery—being rapid, often unlooked for, and spasmodic. Their is a peculiar spontaneity about his thoughts and words, which, Water street. when he becomes immersed in his subject, finds expression in action. It will be remembered, that soon after his arrival in Philadelphia, early in June, 1862, Mr. Talmage lost his wife by a sad accident on the Schuylkill, in which several other members of his family narrowly escaped with their lives. Notwithstanding that he bore this blow with Christian resignation, those who are most intimate with him see how con-stantly and painfully that affliction has worn upon his mind. In private intercourse, his manners are those of an educated and genial man of business, rather than a clergyman. He is greatly esteemed by the people of his charge, and the steady increase in membership of his congregation attests the power which he exerts over his audiences. Since entering upon his duties in this church, over fifty ment of a case of severe inflammation of the throat families have been added to its membership, and the ongregation now tanks among the largest and most flourishing in this city.

On last Sunday evening, according to previous announcement, Mr. Talmage commenced a series of sermons, or lectures more properly, specially designed for Merchants. The church was densely filled; the music excellent, the reading and preaching, in point of style, as already described, though the matter of the discourse was interesting, and had it been delivered on Monday evening in Concert Hall, instead of on Sunday evening in a Reformed Dutch Church, would have been received with applause. The words announced as his text were these: "Wisdom crieth in the chief places of concourse, in the openings of the gates." Religion, he said, was not objected to by worldly minds as in itself an unsightly object, so long as it kept at a distance; but when it ventured to enter the marts of business, to unmask dishonesty and upset the tables of the money-changers, then it was voted a nuisance. He had sometimes inquired in his own mind what would take place if the religion of Christ should suddenly ome into our places of business and assert its rightful prerogative. What rending open of money safes it would cause that no burglar could ever nick What consternation among dishonest dealers as they saw the scattering among bonds and notes and assignments! What ripping off of French labels from American broadcloths! What a readjustment of treatment in a case of discharge from the ear and American measurement what a results such states and scales! What panie at the stock exchange! What upsetting of false samples and corporation of the throat, and would be change! What upsetting of false samples and corporation or smilesting. recting of invoices! What a resurrection from the dead of old-fashioned honesty! What a rocking among the thrones of commercial despotism! These were the Cains and the Absaloms and the Judases and the Hittites of to-day which God meant should be raked to pieces by the Gospel cannonade. Thus it was that Christianity fulfilled her mission in the marts of trade. So "wisdom uttered her cry in the chief places of concourse." Speaking of the mutual influence exerted by nations upon each other through the medium of com-merce, he said that the reason why European nations had not interfered in the struggle now ra-ging in this country was not because they had fallen in love with our institutions, or we with theirs, but because commerce sternly forbids the opening of hostilities. The most binding treaties were not those which were signed by diplomatists with the seals Government, but those in which a great Dola wise provision of Nature, every great portion of the earth was possessed of some peculiar product which every other portion must have. This constitution was also afflicted in a Henry Laws, staying with me, was as a sofflicted in a Henry Laws, staying with me, was as a sofflicted in a Henry Laws, and Dr. Lighthill was equally such tuted the strongest tie amongst the nations of the similar manner, and Dr. Lighthill was equally suc and, but the sword could not bring together the hearts of the people. That must be left for the opesations of commerce, and it would be realized in spite of the million demagogues and the political incendiaries which had come up thick as locusts, slimy as frogs, loathsome as the bill of Egyptian plagues, and blatant as the bulls of Bashan, in many In the present discourse, it was his main purpose to consider the influence of Merchants. The influence ence of this class arose, in a great measure, from the fact that they combined a large amount of the intelligence of the world. Such small-souled, selfish merchants as could not see over a molasses hogshead or a bale of cotton, he did not take into the ac-count. It was true, our merchants were seldom educated in the higher branches of learning. The most of them started out with only a common-school education, of which the Phillipses, and Lawrences, and Girards were notable examples. But trade was as the merchant was most favorable to true intellectual peared. were broad as eternity and deep as the soul.

Speaking of the democratic character of our institutions, and the wholesome changes wrought out under them, he said that in other days a sword, or a helmet, had been the symbol of a noble family; but some of our most royal families might be honorably symbolized by a firkin or a yard-stick. It made no sort of difference how a man got a competency, if he only got it housestly—whether, by selling rags or imsymbolized by a firkin or a yard-stick. It made no sort of difference how a man got a competency, if he only got it honestly—whether, by selling rags or importing silks, sweeping streets, or building the rodund of a capitol.

But the influence of merchants was not only great in the financial and political world; it was potent in the Church. So, in the first place, because, as a class, they made up a large proportion of church attendants in our cities; and, when their wealth and activity were offered to Christianity, they made a glorious Church; ready for everything good, and always successful, though sometimes they had blighted that which they ought to have commended. If they set themselves against the plain proclamation of the Gospel, and refrained to hear anything that cut up their selfishness, or hurt their pride, or exposed their worldliness, then they turned the Church of God into a mere wholesale establishment. The independence, and consequently the usefulness, of a minister would then be gone. God forbid, he added, that the day should ever come to that church when, instead of sounding the trump of God's everlasting truth, the announcement would go forth that from its pulpit the "Rev. Dry-as-Sticks would harangue so many packages of dry goods."

His conclusion was an original presentation of the Scriptural question of "Loss and Gain:" What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"

This Bureau is desirous of ascertaining whether rified cannon can be made of wrought iron of sufficient and uniform endurance and economy to warrant their being preferred to guns of cast iron only, or of cast iron strengthened with wrought iron.

Proposals will therefore be received from any manufacturers of forged iron, to furnish a finished gun, or a block of metal from which the same may be finished. The said gun, when finished, to weigh about 10,000 pounds, to be made into a gun throwing a projectile of 100 pounds, as used in cast iron rified cannon of like weight; to be fired 1,000 times, with service charges of the same weight and kind of powder as used in the Parrott 100-pounder, viz: 10 pounds of No. 7, without bursting or wearing in such a manner as to cause apprehensions of bursting.

The quality of metal, price, and other terms, are to be stated clearly in the proposal forwarded.

The Bureau reserves the right to itself of accepting or rejecting any of the proposals.

The time for receiving the proposals is limited to thirty days from date; and proposals will only be received from persons actually engaged in the fabrication of wrought iron.

Saturday, April 4. call on the Professor, and obtain his opinion of my case. After he had examined me shoutten minutes, he frankly informed me that he could cure me and offered to give me a written warrantee of a complete cure, and in case of a failure to charge me nothing. This at first seemed an impossibility; but the trankless and earnestness of the Professor convinced me of his scientific accuracy in the diagnosis of my case. He disclosed all my sufferings and symptoms for five years past as well as I knew them myself. I will here state, for the way that I am perfectly cured. I further would state that more than four months have elapsed since my cure, and I have had no symptoms, and, therefore, feel confident that I am cured. I shall take pleasure in being referred to at any time, by any one suffering as I was, and any information of my condition previous to my cure will be freely given to any one at 1542 North THIRTEENTH Street. Pulladelphia.

N. B.—Professor C. H. BOLLES will publish, from time to time, certificates of the cure of chronic casesiwhich had resisted the treatment of the most eminent medical men for years.
