Notices of New Books.

Mr. F. Leypoldt, foreign book-seller in this city, has just published a delightful little volume, neatly gotup, and worthy of obtaining here a popularity coult to that which it has in Europe. It contains equal to that which it has in Europe. It contains the letters of Felix Mendelssohn Bartholdy, the musical composer, from Italy and Switzerlan I, (and also from Weimar, Presburg, Munich, Paris, and London,) in 1830-32. The translation from the Gernan was executed for the English publisher by Lady Wallace, the mother of the late Sir William Don, a Scottish baronet, who turned actor. Next to the correspondence of Byron and Scott, these letters of Mendelssohn, written between the ages of twenty-one and twenty-two, may be taken as models of good, familiar writing upon the variety of subjects which attract a tourist's attention. Those from Italy are especially good, and all through the volume we find sensible criticism, not only upon music, but also upon sculpture, painting, and scenery. The snatches of personal action are given in the most natural manner. The whole cornondence was written without the slightest view to publication, and is better in one sense on that very count. A brief biography of Mendelssohn suitably prefaces the letters. It omits many leading particuars in Mendelssohn's career, and misdates others. For instance, the "Marriage of Camacho," a threeact opera, founded on an episode in "Don Quixote," and produced on the Berlin stage in 1827, is not menoned. Next, it is stated that he left the University in 1827, and went to England in the following year-whereas he did not go thither until April, 1829. No notice is taken of his visit to Scotland, and tour. through the Highlands, and the Hebrides, in the au-tumn of that year, though we owe his fine orchestral piece, "The Isles of Fingal," to his recollections of Scotland, and though, in various of the Letters now published, he alludes to his Scottish journey and to his Overture to the Hebrides, suggested by it, which he completed at Rome in Decemher. 1830., His oratorio of "St. Paul " is mentioned as having been produced at Dusseldorf in 1836, under his own special superintendence, but not a word is said of the great event of his life, its performance in England, (at the Birmingham Musical Festival in September, 1837,) also under his own direction, nor of his having also attended the Birmingham Festival in 1840, when his "Lobgesang;" or. "Hymn of Praise," a sinfonia-cantata, composed expressly for that occasion, was first performed under his own direction. The biography omits to say, that in 1811 the late King of Prussia named Mendelssohn his maitre de chavelle at Berlin. We are told that his oratorio of "Elijah" was produced in 1847, at the Birmingham Festival. As we happened to have been present, we can say, from per-sonal knowledge, that it was performed there a year earlier-namely, on Wednesday, the 25th of August, 1846, Mendelssohn conducting, and the chief vocalists being Madame Carradori Allen, Miss Maria Hawes, Mr. Hobbs, Mr. Lockey, Mr. Henry Phillips, and Herr Staudigl, the great basso. There were cight encores. On the following evening, at the second Concert of the Festival, Mendelssohn conducted his overture and music to the "Midummer-Night's Dream." The biographer's summing-up of Mendelssohn's character, professional and private, is truthful and terse. Mrs. J. Sadlier, of New York, has written several works of fiction on Irish subjects, or largely introducing Irish characters, which have great circulation in this county and in Canada. She has also translated extensively from the Spanish and French, and is, indeed, a highly accomplished as well as a gifted and original writer. As Wordsworth says : "A rerfect woman, nobly planned."

Her fictions may be divided into three classes Historical, as "The Red Hand of Ulster," and "The Confederate Chiefs ;" Irish, as "New Lights," and Maureen Dhu," and Irish-American, showing the Irish element in this country and in our time, as 'The Blakes and Flanagans," "Willy Burke," "Bessy Conway," and several other tales, of which "Old and New; or, Taste versus Fashion," is the latest and best. On this book the best criticism we have heard was from a lady who said, "I scarcely think that I am reading this story, for the people in it are so natural that I seem to hear them speak." It is a natural, unaffected, and probable tale, the incidents and characters of which have caused a lively sensational effect in New York, among the pseudo fashionists of Irish descent and aith, who, having risen from want, by industry, enterprise, and good fortune, get ashamed of their country and its religion, and, very properly, are ridiculed for their folly. "Old and New " has made a stir among the Irish aristocracy of New York. It has more incident, too, than its author has usually ment and determination must have been sorely tried when he dreaded to take the risks of the mere nav-gation in going in and in getting out, and that in this. Vital matter everything depended upon the management of his captains and upon the recollec-tion of their pilots. If it had been practicable to take the fide upon its flood, and be thus borne rapidly by the forts, within gunshot of the city, something might have followed, and in repassing the forts the ebb would have as-sisted the vessels to regain their anchorage; but it was deemed necessary to enter with the last of the ebb, because the channel would be then most dis-tinctly marked, and also because, in the event of grounding, the rising flood would aid in getting afloat. Fortunately, the tides were at their spring; the water was high; the bar was safely passed, and the channel gained without a gun from the enemy, al-though within easy range. Terry place has its weak side, and here the rebel engineers had neglected to command this entrance, which has not been used since the huks were sunk in it, and which they probably thought we should not attempt. Thence the Monitor, the Keoluk, and the Iron-side about the centre of the line, moved cautiously toward. Moultrie, taking the fire of that fort, of Sumpter, of Clummingge 'Point, and Fort Wagner, and creturning it, until they were brought up by the obstacles which were exposed to a rapid, continu-ous, and concentrated fire of the most formidable missile ever used against floating in to to they when disposed of the Keokuk most effectually. This ves-sel received ninety shots, a greater number than were thrown by all the iron-cladgduring the engage-mint, and sunk the next morning. The dispropor-tion of guns between the attacking squadron and the rebulaties, is made most clearly manifest by this fact. VALUABLE REAL ESTATE 1. tion of guns between the attacking squadron and the rebel batteries, is made most clearly manifest by this fact. The fire from the shore was not only terribly heavy, but most wonderfully accurate, lor, besides striking the Kcokuk nearly a hundred times, the slender smoke stacks of the monitors were fre-quently hit; one completely riddled, as well as their wheel houses, turrets, decks, and the little portion of their sides above the water. The Ironsides did not steer well in the tide way, could not be easily handled, and had to be snohored twice during the hottest of the fire to avoid grounding, which was narrowly escaped. To the outer group of torpedos, one of which exploded near the Weehawken, and of the adjacent obstructions on which the Patapsco hung for ten minutes, could be seen a line of buoys stretching from Sumpter to Sullivan Island, and apparently sustaining net-work and hawsers to foul screws, and farther up a row of piles extending probably from Fort Joinson to the middle ground. To have ventured to enter among these obstacles would have been to expose each and every vessel to certain destruction. It was five o'clock in the after-noon, the reconnoissance had been made, and the Admiral wisely withdrew his little fleet to its ancho-rage before dark, with certain alterior intentions for the morrow, that were not carried out, from causes not necessary to be mentioned here. Thus ended the tirs tessay of iron-clads against forts, rified guns, torpedoes, and obstructions. Both partices made the best use of their material. The rebel artillerists stood to their guns, and served them well, and the Admiral, the captains, the pilots, and the crews of the iron-clads, proved themselves quite equal to this extraordinary occasion. Let us hope that as this is the simple truth, it will be accepted as such by the country, and let us profit by the experience thus gained, and learn how we may close our ports to an enemy, even if he be iron-clad. a handsome COUNTRY SEAT, on the Media Rail-road, two minutes' walk from Gray's-lane Station, three miles from Market-street Bridge. Of "The Youth's Catholic Library," also published by D. & J. Sadlier, of New York, three volumes have been published, all translated from the French of Balleydier, and others, by Mrs. Sadlier. These are "The Pope's Nicce," "The Vendetta," and "Idleness; or, the Double Lesson." Each volume contains five or six stories, chiefly amusing, and faithfully translated. There are now in the press three corresponding volumes. also by Mrs. S. viz. three corresponding volumes, also by Mrs. S., viz: "Father Sheehy," "The Daughter of Tyconnell," and "Agnes of Bramsburg." The price of these plea-sant volumes, which are neatly bound in fancy cloth, is only twenty-five cents a volume. Mrs. Sadlier has the rare merit of never being dull or tedious. Mrs. Gaskell's story, called "A Dark Night's Work," which has simultaneously ran through All the Year Round and Harpers' Weekly, now forms the last-issued volume of that excellent series. "Harpers' Library of Select Novels." It has the merit of being earnestly, as well as simply written, and reads like a narrative of actual fact. The heroine is a certain Eleanor Wilkins, whose life is spent, and heart nearly broken, in the endeavor to conceal a murder committed by her father in a moment of sudmurner committed by her lather in a moment of sud-den passion.—The new novel, "Very Hard Times," which will run through Harpers' Weekly during the next seven months, is from the pen of Ohas. Reade, the novelist and dramatist. People ask, who is Mr. Reade? All that biographical dictionaries tell of Reads?. All that biographical dictionaries tell of him is, that he broke ground in a comedy called "Masks and Faces," which probably suggested his writing "Peg Woffington," a novel on the heroine of his play. He subsequently produced "Christie Johnstone," "White Lies," "Never Too Late to Mend," "Love Me Little, Love Me Long," &c. His latest is an historical romance, called "The Oloister and the Hearth," in which the adventures of the parents of the great scholar Erasmus are gup-posed to be related. To this, we have to add that Mr. Reade, now approaching middle life, is a Fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford, and also D. C. L., or Doctor of Civil Law in that famous university. His income from his fellowship is about $2,000 a year. He cannot marry, as a Fellow, without a special vote of his college. Usually the fellowships are vacated by accepting Church preferment, or by marriage. A Popular Life of St. Patrick, Apostle and Patron of Ireland, published by Messrs. D. & J. Sadlier, New York, bears on its title-page only the modest announcement "by an Irish Priest." This author, who has executed his task in a satisfactory and im-partial manner, judiciously distinguishing between tradition and fact, is a young Catholic elergyman who has devoted his leisure to the study of Irish history, literature, and antiquities. In his biogra-phy of the pious man under whom Ireland became a Christian country in the fifth century, he has not left one leading incident of his life unnoticed. Of course, he does not attach equal importance to each. It is surprising how much is accurately known of St. Patrick's career at the distance of nearly four-teen hundred years. His autobiography, or "Confessions," remains, as well as one of his letters, and contemporary writers took care to preserve recol-lections of him. His biographer distinguishes between what he wrote and what has been attributed to him. The 17th March, which Ireland celebrates as her Saint's day, was the day of his death, A. D. 465, and not of his birth. Armagh and Downpatrick claim the honor of having received his mortal re-mains, but the balance of evidence is in favor of the latter place containing his grave. The concluding chapters of this volume give interesting information about the early Irish Church, its faith, doctrine, and about the early frish Church, its faith, doctrine, and sacraments, and the condition and prospect of the Catholic faith in Ireland at the present time. The book, we may add, is singularly free from contro-versial points. All sects may read it.

Periodical Publications.

The May number of Harper's Magazine, received from Peterson & Brothers, completes the 26th volume of the work. Its readers will be glad to learn that the publishers have in preparation, and soon will issue, an index to the whole work, in which the articles will be arranged and classified under appro-priate heads, with the names of the authors. The May number contains thirty-one illustrations. The bides fashions, and a couple of whole-page facetia, entitled "Mr. Pigg's Picture Gallery." The Edi-tor's Drawer is unusually good this month. The number contains contributions from Harriet E. Prescott, Samuel Osgood, Louise Palmer, A. H. Guernsey, Louise Furniss, D. P. Thompson, Mary E. Bradley, George William Ourtis, Dinah Maria Mulock, N. G. Shepherd, Charlotte Taylor, J. W. De Forest, Caroline Chesebro, Egbert P. Watson, Marian C. Evans, Joseph M. Miller, B. J. Lossing, Anthony Trollope, and H. M. Alden.

The best articles are "Scenes in the War of 1812 The best articles are "Scenes in the War of 1812 Hull's Campaign," and "A Trip to the Caucasus.", We take leave to affiliate the latter upon Joseph Ni, Miller, Esq., of this. city, a gentleman who has travelled extensively and observed closely. His tour to, and beyond, the Caucasus was made in company with a Pole, who is a captain in the Russian service. Mr. Miller's style is rapid and graphic, and hurries the reader on, just giving him jime to see all worth seeing on the way.

[Before Mr. Alderman White.] Identified as Thierces. A couple of colored fellows, giving the fictilious names of Joseph Hilyard and Edward Dougherty, were ar-rested on Sunday night, by Officer Ferguson, on the charge of disorderly conduct. They were identified as Joseph Lane and Joseph Mann, charged with steading coats from the store of Mr. Joseph Shillinburg, on South street, above Third. The parties were arraigned before Mr. Alderman White yesterday. The cridence adduced was to this effect: A few days since three full-grown colored boys went to the store of Mr. S., under pretence of purchasing some clothing. About twenty coas: were shown them. After parleying for some time, they sud-denly rain from the store, each taking a coat with him. Mrs. S., the wife of the proprietor, ran into the street, nd cried "stop thicf." One of the fugitives dropped his coat; the other two got away with their plunder, high Constable Barton happened to be in the neighbor-hood, but the fellows were too fleet for him. On Saturday hut he landerstood they were at the honse of a man ramed John Bolden, in Boyle's court. The High Constable proceeded there, but was met at the door, and successfully resisted by Mr. Bolden, although he exhibited his badge of authority and told him his business. The officer received a severe blow on the side of the head, which blackened his eye. Mr. Bolden was arraigned before Alderman White for committing the assault and battery, and resisting the officer who was in the discharge of official duties. He was held in the sum of $200 to answer. At the hearing yesterday, the prisoners, Lane and Mann, were identified by Mr. Shillhourg and child. They were committed in default of $1,000 ball each, to answer. Samuel Glascow, Walter Morris, and Jeany Cannon, were arraigned before the same alderman, on the charge of the larceny of a watch, the property of Isaa G. Goines, who resides on Lombard street, near Fifth. The evidence held to await a further hearing.
