

infelligible account of the scientific department of the great London Exhibition of last year. In this Dr. Wells notices the fact; to which we repeatedly referred, that among the novel. ties of British invention, on that occasion, many are prints. The book, edited by Robert Chambers, s published by W. & R. Chambers, Edinburgh, and llso by J. B. Lippincott & Co., of this city. It is got up in the style of Chambers' Encyclopedia, now being issued by the same eminent publishers, and, like that great reportory of information, ought to be on provy reading man's book-shelf-the one nearest to his right hand. "The Book of Days" is as much superior to Howe's Every-day Book and his Tablelook, as a pine-apple is to a turnip, or a Newtown ter." This volume tells all about the first six months of the year. Another volume, including the second half of the year, will complete the work, which really is as nearly perfect as a book of the sort an be. There are over three hundred first-class vood engravings in this volume, most of them from Gould & Lincoln, Boston, have just published their "Annual of Scientific Discovery; or, Year-Book of Facts in Science and Art for 1863;" It is embellished with a good portrait of Captain Ericsson, of "Monitor" fame. This volume, like its pre-decessors, is edited by Dr. David A. Wells; a gentleobservable in his "Note on the Progress of Science for the year 1862. There is, also, a succinct and intelligible account of the scientific department

American patents were passed off as of English origin, and obtained prizes and testimonials. Dr. Wells states that in the English wood-working machinery of the Exhibition "there was not a single machine prominently exhibited which was not well known and in use in the United States for five, ten, fifteen, and even twenty years (in one instance), previously " We can add, from personal knowledge, that Wheeler &. Wilson's famous sewing machine, which obtained the first prize in that Exhibition, was pirated some years ago by a manufacturer in Glasgow, who actually sent in one of his copies to compete with the original American machine. Fortunately, this impudent attempt was frustrated, and the American Brothers, is edited by Mr. H. Drisler, Professor of Latin, in Columbia College, New York, whose addi-tions and revision have much improved it. Any tudious person could easily acquire the elements of Latin, by means of this book, without a preceptor. The double vocabularies are admirable. (Philadel delphia: Lippincoit & Co., and also T. B. Peterson.) The same publishers have added Sallust to their unique and beautiful Greek and Latin texts. It has been sunsa, wingreasen, by Mr. George Long, who had previously done the same good turn for Cæsar and The previously done the same good turn for Creaser and Cicero, but whose European reputation is derived; from his having ditted the Penny Cyclopadia. To the Catilina is prefixed a chronological table of the leading events of his life, concurrent with those of the con-spiracy by which he lost it, and the same is done for the Bellum Jugurthinum. Both of them are taken.

Harper's Greek and Latin Texts, of which fifteen volumes have appeared, is the neatest, cheapest, War," by J. Received edition of the classics ever pub-from Kritz, that most accurate of classical critics. war, by J. How was a start of the service of the valuable military and naval works which Mr. Van Nostrand, of New York, is publishing. Theauthor is thoroughly acquainted with his subject, and treats of the use of cavalry in ancient and modern warfare. Of course, he refers largely to the modern warfare. Of course, in feiters ingery to that campaigns of Napoleon, in which that arm of the service was greatly, and effectively employed. He-also treats of strategy and tactics (which are not to. be confounded), of rified firearms, of the charge of cavalry and infantry, of field service, of soldiers and officers, and, very fully, of horses and their equip-ments, training, food, and treatment. The volume, which is beautifully printed, contains 127 superior wood engravings. The opinion of a civilian on a military work cannot be worth much, but we can truly say that from no single volume have we obtained so much information on the art of war as from this. The chapter on arms is especially in-structive. The author has agreeably relieved his subject by historical illustrations and personal anec-dotes. (Philadelphia: J. B. Lippincott & Co.)
