The Spotted Fever. To the Editor of The Press: Sin: An epidemic disease called Spotted Fever provalled extensively in many parts of New Eng-land, and in some parts of several other of the Ame-rican States, at different times between the years 1806 and 1815. A few cases of the disease occurred at Medheld, Massachusetts, about thirty miles from Boston, in March, 1806. The number was small, not exceeding twenty. In March and April 1807 it ap-peared in Hartford, Connecticut, and in several places on the Connecticut river ; also, in Williams-town, in the northwest part of Massachusetts, and the Green Mountain range. It disappeared during the summer, but returned the following winter, visit-ing, in some instances, the same places, besides many others in their neighborhood and in similar situa-tions. The disease followed a similar course for several succeeding years. It disappeared during summer, but returned the Winter, and for several years, until 1813, it became each year more exten-sive and more destructive. In some of these years is talso prevailed extensively in the interior of the States of New York and Pennsylvania. In 1812 the troops of the United States army suffered severely by it at various places in New York and Vermont. After 1813, the disease rapidly diminished, although it still continued de-structive in some parts of flaine. It finally ceased in the spring of 1815. The last place visited by it as far as my information extends, ywas Berwick, Maine. This concise sketch of the progress of the epidemic shows that it prevaled much less in sum-mer than in whiter, and the first months of spring. This epidemic secend scarcely to regard prost severely it was much less frequent through the att if does not appear that such were more fre-guently stacked than others. On the contrary, the disease seemed rather to select the healthy and vig-orus. It attacked all classes of persons, from child-hod to cld age; yet the proportion of cases and of the fordin the severe ase visited a place twice, and even threat times. Dr. Gallup remarks of the epidemic in Vermont, hat there are but few towns whose surviving inhathat there are but few towns whose surviving inha-bitants will not long with grief remember the win-ter of 1812 and 1813 for the loss of 20, 40, or 80 of their most valuable citizens, most valuable to society on ' account of their being in the prime of life. Of the causes of Spotted Fever no satisfactory account can be given. There was nothing in the habits of the disease, or the manner in which it proceeded from place to place to countenance the theory of conta-gion. There were two leading forms of the disease ; no was a simule fever of a menuliar obarseter the gion. There were two leading forms of the disease; one was a simple fever of a peculiar character, the other was complicated by local inflamation, but it still retained the same general character as the other. The more simple form began, like most other fevers, with coldness; most generally with distinct shivering pain in the head and back, and especially in the limbs, prostration of strength, &c. In the milder cases this was followed, as in other fevers, with some degree of reaction, manifested by heat, and afterward by sweating, but unless aided by proper remedies, the reaction was very imperfect; the cold-ness soon returned, with a peculiar want of action over the whole system.

some degree of reaction, manifested by heat, and afterward by sweating, but unless aided by proper remedies, the reaction was very imperfect; the cold-ness soon returned, with a peculiar want of action over the whole system. The surface of the body lost its peculiar elasticity, and had in its stead a torpid, half-codematous, doughy feeling. Near the close of life it was covered with a profuse perspiration. The shomach early become irritable, and rejected whatever was put into it, though without much vomiting of anything else. The prostration increased, and was accom-panied by violent pains in the back or limbs, which frequently changed from place to place, but without spasme of any kind. In many cases, delive came on very early. In most instances, as the strength of the patient shead. In the more severe form of the disease, this comatose state followed the first attack, without any intervention of a stage of reaction. The patient became insensible, and died in a few hours. It was generally in this severe form that the spota, or petcehic, appeared, which gave the name of potted fever to the epidemic. They were not, however; confined to the more violent, or to the fatal cases, but were cocasionally found in the com-paratively mild. When they did appear, the spots were generally small blotches, caused by blood extra-vasated into the cellular membrane under the skin, of a dark purple color. 'About the beginning of the year isly, the spotted fever to bas not assume a new form in many cases, by becoming complicated with some local inflamation; this was sometimes in the throat, producing a species of synanche, but its more com-inon seat was in some one of the textures of the lungs. The fever, however, still retained the same general character so before. There were many other varieties in the modifications of the spotted fever, and it assumed a greater diversity of forms and ap-pearances than most diseases. In whatever form it appeared, however, it exhibited the same general character of great prostration and deb
