THE ABANDONED PLANTATIONS. What greatly perplexed me was to decide what to do with the negro women and children, whom I could not get into military organizations. This diffi-culty was scon solved to some extent. Having found a line of magnificent plantations along the bank of the river, from Helena to Young's Point, which were described on the approach of our troops, after talking the matter over, I concluded to take posses-sion of these abandoned plantations, and lease them to Unionists, who would employ these men and women, and pay them suitable wages. It was in respect to this whole business that I thought—and so told the Sceretary—that I com-menced too late by a month. I lost no time in ap-pointing a commission, of which Mr. Field was to be the head, to take this matter in charge. In the instructions given them by me it was specified that the negroes should be kindly treated; be paid the wages named; that none under twelve years of age were to be subjected to field labor, but might be used moderately in other ways; that each tenant horses for which M aving one thousand horses for which he had no immediate use, generous-iy offered to loan them, to be paid for out of the pro-ducts of the soil. The Government was to be paid two dollars a bale for the coton raised, five cents a bushel for corn, and so on. Well, the first man who went into this was a bother of General Grant. He had just refured, and was coming down to see Grant, whom he had not seen for years. He went to work and got a hundred mules. I was or interiment on the bal of the the targend the sec-ment to work and got a hundred mules. I asked him how he was getting alobg. "Why," says he, "remarkably well. I have twelve hundred acres of cotton put in, and a thousand acres are up." I am now going to tell you an extraordinary case. We have leased between sixty and seventy planta-tions on that river. Two hundred negroes to a plant-tation. You see how many persons are employed there beside the children. It was so late in the season that it was almost too late to get the cotton in. Well, I prevented the de-struction of two plantations, but some of our West-ern troops did burn several cotton ging, and like pro-perty. All the ploughs, horses, catle, &c., which the rebels could not conveniently take on deserting these plantations were gathered up and properly distri-buted. But to.my story. would have been little abort of a minacle if Port Hudson had been able to withstand the siege long after the fall of Vicksburg. Vicksburg capitulated on the 3d instant, and a despatch of yesterday informs us that Port Hudson sur-rendered on the 8th. Up to the fall of Vicksburg it seemed to be admitted, even by the Yankees, that Gen. Gardner and his gallant little garrison had badly worsted Banks with all the force heccould rake and scrape about New Orleans, which no doubt exceeded ours two to one. But with the fall of Vicks-burg, which gave the enemy the advantage of the Mississippi to transport his troops from that point to Port Hudson, the reduction of the latter place in a very few days followed as a matter of course, and no intelligent person acquainted with the situation could have expected any other result. Fort Hudson is situated on the east bank of the Mississippi. in Louisian, one hundred and fifty from Vicksburg by the course of the river, and is distant one hun-dred and thirty-eight miles southwest of Jackson by land. It is, therefore, easy to see that no succor from our forees was possible, without almost the certainty of capture by the enemy, who could throw his immense arry in a very short time at any point on the river, and thus there was no alternative left, after the fact howard 1 privilege of subscribing at par ceases on the first of August next. It would be a good however, may not be the case, as Government may, be offered such terms for certain loans by a combina-tion of leading capitalists as will place her entirely beyond the necessity of asking for money. So it is better to take the present opportunity. The Go-vernment is doing her duty to us in the way of vic-tories; let us appreciate her efforts, and do our duty financially. So far from leaving, Tuesday was the day of their most active operations. Early in the morning two moni-tors, which had been higher up, dropped down to Fort Powhatan, where they were joined by seven wooden gunboats—the latter consisting chiefly of small schooners, mounting one gun, and intended for the navigation of crecks, inlets, and bayous. Finding the coast all clear of rebel soldiers and rebel guns, the enemy sent some one hundred and fifty or two hundred men ashore, and destroyed the rude earthworks which had been thrown up at the fort. They also fired some three or four rudely-con-structed buildings which had been built for the accommodation of the garison which down stream. After the fleet had retired some of our scouts came upon a Yankee soldier scorted in the bushes near the fort. Having covered themselves with glory, the vandals then returned to their boats, and the whole fictills moved down stream. After the fleet had retired some of our scouts came upon a Yankee soldier secreted in the bushes near the fort. I he cheerfully gave himself up, and said he had deserted especially for the purpose of be-coming a citizen of the great Southern Confederacy. He stated, further, that these movements on the James were all intended as a more diversion; that Dix was marching up the Peninsula and on to Rich-mond, at the head of fifty thousand troops. Know-ing this statement to be false, and believing that the fellow was a spy instead of a deserter, he was speedily sent to headquarters. He will in all proba-bility be honored with a slack-roope performance at Richmond. LATEST. ·

THE FALL OF VICKSBURG. THE FALL OF VICKSBURG. (From the Atlanta Appeal.) The most disastrous intelligence of the week was the announcement that Vicksburg had fallen. To those who were posted as to the true situation of affairs in that vicinity this was articipated by the authorities at Richmond days before it was an-nounced. The repeated calls of General Johnston for help, in the way ofsmen, munitions, and sup-plies, were, from some cause, disregated, and those who were sequainted with his true condition, as the authorities should have been, and others who ca-joyed no official channels of obtaining information, could have anticipated no other conclusion. From prudential motives of doubtful propriety the dis-couraging facts were suppressed, while such as could be tortured into encouragement were mag-mifted. The public disappointment, therefore, is greater than the true situation warrants. In the future, however, we shall deprecate and endeavor to disappoint, as far as possible, all attempts to mis-lead our own people. We believe them equal to any emergency, and if their zeal cannot be relied upon, even under adversity, to save the cause, all is lost. THE ENEMY ON JAMES RIVER. (From the Richmond Enquirer, July 1.) LATEST. LATEST. Two iron clad Yankee gunboats passed City Point yesterday, and proceeded up James river. Seven gunboats and transports remained two miles below the Point. The object of this reconnoissance is quite apparent. The vandals are anxious to find out what force is supporting the garrisons at Chaffin's and Drewry's Bluffs. We shall probably hear further of their movements to day.

The Courrie de Marseilles publishes a letter from Alexandria, giving an account of the events that have taken place in Madagascar, and stating in a more positive mamer than before that England was the cause of all. It says that when M. Lambert (the Madagascar Duke) Obtained the exclusive right of forming a company to work the mines of the island, the English offered him two millions sterling for his concession; but M. Lambert was too good a patriot to take the money; that a French company was formed " under high patronage to proceed to Madagascar, and induce the civilization of la-bor which aggrandizes as well as ennobles;" and that M. Lambert was on his way out with Com-mander Dupre on board the Hermone, and an ex-ploring commission. In the meantime, the English, who had refused to join this new company, declared that they would do all in their power against it. The violent death of Radama II prover what they are capable of, and every one attributes it to their intrigues. So long as they had any doubt of the realization of M. FROM JACKSON, MISS. JACKSON, July 15.—Another day has passed with-out any new development. The enemy has been firing incessantly, and has been shelling the city all the evening. Another division of Burnside's command reached Grant this evening. JACKSON, July 16.—The enemy kept up a heavy shelling all night. One shell passed through Gen. Johnston's quarters, without injuring any one. Grant was reinforced yesterday evening by one di-vision of Gen. Burnside's command. We buried one hundred and fifty-three of the ene-my yesterday. The Vicksburg prisoners have arrived at Brandon. There is still no prospect of a general engagement, but heavy infantry and artillery skirmising con-tinues.
