philanthropist," presided at the dinner table. Major General Cadwallader (member of the City Troop), Brigadier General Owen, Brigadier General Hatch, Lieutenant Colonel Ruff, and other distinguished military personages, were jersent as invited guests. The speeches of the evening were felicitous and emi-nently patriotic. Mr. Samuel J. Randall, who was commanding officer of the Troop, expressed his high appreciation of the fidelity and heroism which cha-racterized their conduct from the time they left the city for Harrisburg. He assured the friends who had so generously welcomed the Troop home again, that the members would regard it gratefully, and perhaps it might stimulate them even more, when they know that whatever they might do is not for-gotien by those to whom a soldier always looks for aphause. ed at the o perhaps it might simulate them even more, when they know that whatever they might do is not for-gotten by those to whom a soldier always looks for spplause. Major General Cadwallader, in reply to the toast of the "Army and Navy," humorously remarked that he was usurping another's place, for how could one filly represent the army that had not smell gun-the was usurping another's place, for how could one filly represent the army that had not smell gun-the deeded of our noble soldiers and seamen, and argued the impossibility of defeat, when the Union had the services of such braves to command. I He complimented particularly the eavairy arm of the service, and was gratified at the fame and appre-ciation it was everywhere winning. Gen. Gwen answered for the "Army of the Poto-t mao." That army, he sold, was organized by a man, than whom none holds a higher place in the estimation of the soldiers-whose military capacity and kindness of heart had endeared him forever in the hearts of as brave an army as ever confronted a foe. [Cheers for Gen. McClellan.] Since the or-ganization of the Army of the Potomac it has to bound up before the world as composed of a rank and a file that is without a parallel in any country. It had met with misortunes, never with disaster. Gen. Hatch, Mr. O. W. Davis, Private Snowden, Col. Kellogg, Private Chas. W. Brooke, and others, followed in humorois and particito speeches. Mr. Barclay happily replied to the sentiment, "The Mothers, Wirea, Sisters, and Sweethearts of the City Troop." Gen. Cameron was expected to be present, but his absence was unavoidable. Sixty-eight mem-bers of the City Troop are serving as officers in the army and navy at the present time. CAMP OF INSTRUCTION OF THE VoluN-

 The second state of the second st CAMP OF INSTRUCTION OF THE VOLUN-TEER ENGINEER REGIMENT.—Some of the officers of the regiment of volunteer engineers now being raised in this city, went out on Saturday for the purpose of locating the camp of instruction. Seve-ral sites in the neighborhood of Hestonville and Darby were visited, but no selection, as far as we have learned, has yet been made. Both situations are equally healthy. Hestonville is more convenient to the city, but Darby possesses the advantage of a fine creek, over which experimental bridges might be thrown as exercise for the pontooners. It is pro-posed so to conduct the camp of instruction that the artificers, of which there are sixty-four in each com-pany, may themselves be enabled to direct the work of the privates of infantry regiments when employed in the operations of a siege. Each artificer will then become practically a non-commissioned officer with a squad of infantry soldiers under him; the pay of artificers from the date of enlistment being exactly that of a sergeant of infantry. The most imposing that came under our observation was the double funeral of Charles Mur-phy and John P. McFarland, both of whom were members of company B, Baxter's Fire Zouaves. They fell in the same grave. The members of the were buried from the Weccacoe Engine House, the members attending in a body. The heroes now sleep ide by side in the same grave. The members of the Weccacoe also attended the funeral of W. H. H. Crease, a member of Baxter's Zouaves. He died at Sharpsburg, Va., from disease contracted while on the match. Wm. K. Schrack, also a member of the Mechanics' Cemetery. There also took place the funerals of Patrick Car-ney, who died at Harrisburg, from wounds received u dettysburg ; Jacob Lower, 29th Regiment, P. V., killed at same battle ; Smuel B. Weigner, Serge ant Major 26th Regiment, P. V., and Henry Clay Nels-ser, of 26th Regiment, P. -This excellent organization, supported by private lonations and weekly contributions of the citizens — Insectement organization, supported by private donations and weekly contributions of the ditzens of the Eighteenth ward, is at present dispensing its benefits to the families of the volunteers who reside in the ward, who have enlisted for the defence of the State. Its benefits are extended to those who left wives and helpless little ones, and an aged father or mother, or a widowed parent dependent upon them. Four hundred dollars is a tpresent the weekly amount distributed. In order to support this fund, several of the clitzens of the ward, have pledged themselves for the sum of twenty-five dollars as a weekly contribution, while others, to the extent of the distores return to their families. It is managed and directed under the supervision of a committee of sixteen of the residents of the ward, who carefully examine all applications for relief.
