EUROPE. The Approaching End of the American The most ardent friends of Secession are admitting that the project of eatablishing a separate Government in the South never was no gloomy as now. Even The Times seems half inclined to sound the retreat; and to seek reluge in the Federal lines. The period has nearly arrived for resorting to the well-known expedient of publishing contradictory articles in contiguous columns, with the coosoling certainty that nome at least of the views advocated will turn out tolerably correct. The riots in New York will serve to distract public attention for a few days; but, tupless we greatly mistake the character of the events which have lately occurred in America, the failure of the South is due not to any temporary difficulty, but to permanent causes. And, therefore, no time should be lost by those who have hitterto supported the South in this country in placing themselves where they may see things in their true light.

It is a fact universally admitted that the Southern Rebellion has been admirably managed. From the time when the first gun was fired against Fort Sumpter until the present moment, the very ablest mea in the South have been at the head of affairs. No one denies the remarkable ability of Jefferson Davis and his colleagues, or that the military and awal officers selected by him have amply justfied the wisdom of his selection. The plans of the Confederates have been made of such resources as they could lay their hands upon. On the other hand, the Northern Government have been guilty of grievous mistakes. In the beginning they had no serious belief in the reality of a gigantic rebellion. An army was to be created, and the officers who were to command were without experience.

No one who looks back upon the manner in which the war-has been conducted by the North, can fail to admit that there has been the grossest misman-[From the London Daily News] without experience.

No one who looks back upon the manner in which the war has been conducted by the North, can fail to admit that there has been the grossest mismanagement of great resources, and the most unfortunate selection of officers to command the troops. The natural results of incompetency followed. Armies have been defeated, the country has been invaded, and the capture of important points has been delayed. But the Northern people, in spite of everything, persevered. The result now is that their armies are commanded by such men as Grant, Rossorans and Meade, all of whom have proved their capacity, and that, instead of suffering defeat or being compelled to stand fast, the armies of the North are constantly advancing. But how is this?

The Southern armies are still commanded by Johnston, Beauregard, and Jefferson Davis. The lines which they have to defend are more restricted, and, therefore, they are in a better poettion for rapid concentration, while the Northerners are farther removed from thir base, and, therefore, more exposed to be attacked separately. Nevertheless, we find that almost on the same day, and that the 4th of July, the whole Confederate line, from the Potomac, on the east coast, to the Mississiph, has been compelled to fall back. By no inglorious ruse, by no sudden surprise, but by months of warning, as to where the attack was to be made, has this calamity fallen upon the South. allen upon the South.

The same generals and the same statesmen who blanned the re-hellion, and whose ability paragraphs. The same generals and the same statesmen who planned the rebellion, and whose ability, perseverance, and gallantry have extorted the admiration of their enemies, are still at the head of affairs. And yet they have failed to arrest the North—the men who are said to be merely fighting for an idea, or for the vain ambition of extended empire. How is it that the arms of the South have thus suddenly become paralyzed? Had it been possible, does any reasonable man suppose that Gen. Johnston would not have relieved. Vicksburg or Port Hudson? How is it that Bragg should have chosen the same moment to retreat before Rosecrans, and thus place the chief line of communication between the East and the West in the hands of the North?

How was it that at the same moment, also, Beauof communication between the East and the West in the hands of the North?

How was it that at the same moment, also, Beauregard should have tound it impossible to prevent the landing of the Federals on the islands near Caarleston? How is it, finally, that at one point at least the Confederates, under their ablest General, Lee, should not have succeeded in defeating the army of Meade, inferior in number and inferiorin discipline? If the past history of civil war proves anything, it proves that, so long as the affairs of the South are conducted by Jefferson Davis and his friends, failure, if failure comes, cannot be due to any want of ability, or of the kowledge how to make the best use of resources. The weapon may break in the hand of the South, but so long as it can be wielded it will be wielded with the most consummate skill.

But the simple truth is that the weapon has broken, the resources are exhausted. And the ability of the Southern leaders is the most conclusive proof that such is the fact. Reculer pour mieux sauter is an excellent maxim, but it has no application now.

It has often heen said by those who had most profoundly considered the peculiar characteristics of the rival parties in America, that the break down of the Confederacy would not be gradual, but sudden. It would be the failure of thoroughly-able men, who perfectly understood their own resources. They would fail, not because they had taken a false step, but because they had no means to carry on the struggle. The ablest general in the world may be compelled to aurrender because he cannot obtain men, food, or ammunition, and the abler he is the more sudden and unexpected should be his capitulation. It is thus with the Southern Government.

So long as they had the means of recruiting their armies, they stood their ground against their adverand unexperted should be his capitulation. It is thus with the Southern Government.

So long as they had the means of recruiting their armies, they stood their ground against their adversaries—nay, by skillful management, they seemed to multiply their numbers. But now that the fighting population is exhausted, they are compelled to yield along the whole line. But if it be true that the resources of the South have failed, it is vain to expect any permanent revival of success. It is of course possible that the North may still suffer partial defeats. But there is no doubt that if they persevere as they have hitherto done, they must before very long achieve a permanent victory, and dictate their own terms.

THE LONDON TIMES ON THE NEW YORK RIOT.

Whose turn will it be next? all the Southern their own terms.

THE LONDON TIMES ON THE NEW YORK RIOT.

Whose turn will it be next? all the Southern ports have tasted the stern resilty of war, and a few of the critica also. New Orleans, Charleston, Savannah, Richmond, Nashville, and the Federal capital, have all seen, heard, and felt war. The invader was quickly driven out of Getrysburg, but now an enemy within the camp has appeared at the virtual metropolis of the North, and one not to be expelled in a day. The question is still to be settled, and it would never have been canvassed in the streets of New York had it not existed long indoors. The Federal Government wants a Federal army, and will have no militis. But the Federal army must be recruited by a conscription, and that cannot be enforced in New York without the aid of Federal troops and martial law. Martial law there is martial law everywhere else, and is equivalent to a military despotism. It is impossible for Englishmen to deny that the leaders of this mob have a good deal to say for themselves. There is no such conscription in this country, unless such a shadow as the mi itia ballot or such a memory as the press-gang should be alleged to the contrary. We have been so greatly in want of men as to bring upon ourselves a gross insult from the United States by some alleged attempts to enlist British subjects within their territory; but for at least half a century no British subject has been once compelled to fight, by sea or land, against his will by any British law or authority. Our army, not a slight one in proportion to our numbers, and with work far beyond that of any ether army, is to a man a volunteer force. No wonder, then, that the idea of a forced conscription should be new and distanted to the Irish immigrants at New York, who were, of course, prominent in this disturbance. There is no Irish grievance of this kind. On the contrary, the national pride has been touched by the hesitation of our Government to accept the services of our Irish volunteer corps. The truth is, there is no doubt tha each.

There seems to be very little work doing at Port.
Richmond at the present time. It would, perhaps, be well for the ignorant class of people in that section to keep cool during the hot weather. [Before Mr. Alderman McMullin.]

So, then, the question between the sovereignty of the State and that of the Union is not conit of the State and that of the Union is not conit of the State and interpretation of the State and that of the Union is not conit of the State and interpretation of South. It runs through States, cities, institutions, classes, and races. The great experiment answered so long as it was untried. Everything is perfect till it is tried. Be it armor of men or ship, be it engine or harness, or device of any kind, it shows well till it has to stand the strain of actual work, the blows of the foe, or the buffeting of wind or wave. The hour of trial has come, and in the greatest city of the Union and the State, if not themselves in collision, yet so ill-agreed indoors that the question is fought in the streets, with carnage and destruction. We trust this pleasant state of things will be duly reported in Ireland, in order that every Irlahman may know that upon setting foot on the quay of New York he is, liable to be marched off to some hill pass, or earthwork, or swamp, where he will be passed at once to the front, and have an even-chance of being shot down or maimed for life. That is the law, if President Lincoln, his Cabinet, and the Congress be right; and, if it is not the law, it will cost a few cities burnt to the ground and a few populations decimated to rectify the mistake.

Suspicious.
A little Italian boy, giving the name of John Mulravey, was arrested in a railroad car yesterday, with a considerable amount of money in his possession. On being asked about it, he said his father had given it to him to buy some clothing. The story was not believed. The youth began to equivocate, and exhibit symptoms of alarm. He was placed into the custody of day sergeant Burmall, who arraigned him at the Central Station last evening. It was pretty well ascertained that the boy had not come possessor of the money honeatly. He was committed to await a hearing. The detectives are trying to find the owner. Ing to find the owner.

(Before Mr. Alderman White.)

The Effects of the Heat, of Course.

Yesterday afternoon two men, Thomas Hartigan and Mikey King, were arraigned before Police Magistrate White. It appears that they had been working off the superfluous steam of the temperature by a mutual ingagement at fisticulfs, on Spruce street, opposite Laurel, below Third street. King had Hartigan down, and King's wife, with another woman, was beating the latter. This energetic adjustment of affairs appears to have been occasioned by a former dispute of some standing. As King was driving down Spruce street, he was addressed by Hartigan, answered with a blow, and was repulsed with one. King was held in $500 ball to answer at court the charge of assault and battery. Hartigan was likewise held in ball for the same amount. General Meade.—A correspondent of the London Star writes from Hagerstown, Md.:

"I was so fortunate as to be personally introduced to Gen. Meade. He was sitting with Gen. French at the United States Hotel. He is a very remarkable-looking man—tall, spare, of a commanding figure and presence, his manner easy and pleasant, but having much dignity. His head is partially bald, and is small and compact, but the forehead is high. He has the late Duke of Wellington class of nose, and his eyes, which have a serious and almost sad expression, are rather sunken, or appear so, from the prominence of the curved nasal development. He has a decidedly patrician and distinguished appearance. I had some conversation, and of his recent achievements he spoke in a modest and natural way. He said that he had been 'very fortunate,' but was most especially anxious not to arrogate to himself any credit which he did not deserve. He said that the triumph of the Federal arms was due to the splendid courage of the Union troops, and also to the bad strategy and rash and mad attacks made by the enemy. He said that his health was remarkably good, and that he could bear almost any amount of physical fatigue. What he complained of was the intense mental anxiety occasioned by the great responsibility of his position. He said that the enemy had retreated to Williamsport and that helphorhood on the Potomac; that, in its present condition, they could not cross the river, and that feen Lee was getting as much of the plunder as he nad recently seized in Pennsylvania across the river in flat bottomed boats called acows." "But to return to my narrative. On this morning of July 6th; we were awakened about four o'clock by the noise of wagons passing our door, and, as they continued to pass rapidly and in great numbers, we arose, and dressing hastily, went out and inquired the cause of the movement. We were told that Yieksburg, had surrendered on the 4th, and that this was the baggage train of Johnston's army, which was behind in full retreat. And sure enough, all day the troops were marching hastily by, foot sore and weary, often stopping to beg a piece of meat and bread, and always pillaging the orchards and gardens in their way. One youth, I suppose of fifteen, I heard exclaim, as he passed my gate, 'Oh, my country, how I suffer for you this day!' Alas, poor, miscrable, deluded fellow!

sert that, could they have believed that war between the sections would actually take place, they never would have consented to a separation. But the demagogues, and those whose fortunes could not be injured by the result, preached up the doctrine of 'peaceable secession.' 'There can't be war,' they said. 'The Federal Government must listen to our commissioners, and meekly subject to a separation.' Commissioners were actually sent to Washington, and, woman as I am, I wonder they were ever permitted to return. So they deluded the people with this tempting bait of peaceable secession until the time for retraction was passed. It soon became dangerous for any one to express an opinion contrary to the prevailing sentiment."

LAZARUS AND DIVES.—The nearo soldiers, writes a correspondent from Mississippi, receive $10 a mouth, and they can buy such things as the sutter has to sell, and for the first times in their lives do they taste butter and cheese. This is saying a surprising thing of a class of laborers or whom distant and proud cities depended for their commercial prosperity, and the whole of the civilized world for fully one half its clothing.

What wonderful changes do we behold!

Our lisping daughter was born while the masters of these soldiers enjoyed every comfort, and in particular, ice, but now they are as destitute as ever were their slaves.

of these soldiers enjoyed every comfort, and in particular, ice, but now they are as destitute as ever were their slaves.

Let one imagine to himself, a planter standing on the opposite bank of the Mississippi and beholding the camp of the 11th Louisiana. No hostile foe dare approach, for there are iron-clads near, and without them they can give a sturdy battle. The planter may not only sigh that they are his slaves no longer, but also sigh for what they enjoy. At a distance he may see—be cannot draw nearer. Naturally will the mind think of Lazarus and Dives, and recall the following passage:

"And in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torments and seeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his bosom. And he cried and said, father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus that he may dip the tip of his floger in water, and cool my tongue, for I am tormented in this flame. But Abraham said, Son, remember that thou in thy lifetime receivedest thy good things, and likewise Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented. And, beside all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed," &c. The rest of the chapter is worth reading, in fact, and while one is about it he might read the whole Book.

"The Fust Creeterer."—A friend of ours, who has just left the Union Arkansas troops, tells many curious incidents. Here is one of them:

Kansas Man. "What regiment do you belong to?" Private in 1st Arkansas Cavalry. "The Fust Creeters."

"The First Creeters."

"What?"

"The First Creeters."

The Arkansas soldier pointed to the horses ("orseters"), and at last made our friend understand that he belonged to the 1st Arkansas Odvalry.

It is further said that the infantry boys say they belong to the "walking regiment," and the artillery men are "cannon" soldiers.—Leavenworth Conservative.

MOVEMENT IN ARKANSAS.—It is reported that General Franklin Steele, with a large army from Vicksburg, has arrived at Helena, and will at once enter upon the business of "cleaning out" the fragmentary insurgents left in Arkansas.

General Steele is just the man to head an enterprise of the character indicated. He would have taken Little Rock long ago if, just as he was ready to move upon that place, General Curtis had not ordered him, with his division, to Pilot Knob, which was not at that time even threatened by the enemy. There are probably not ten thousand effective rebel troops to be found in the State of Arkansas at this time. Price has a brigade or two at Des Arc. Marmaduke has a couple of brigades at Jacksonport; Dobbins a small command at Moreau, a village between the White and St. Francois rivers. There are less than five thousand at Little Rock.—

HABEAS CORPUS CASES—ENLISTING MINORS.

The court met yesterday pursuant to adjournment, and proceeded to hear a number of habeas corpus cases of enlisted minors, and receive the returns of the Grand Jury. Most of these cases of enlisted minors were disposed of by the discharge of the boys on proof of their minority. Among them were four boys who had eloned from Girard College and enlisted in the 19th Regiment Pennsylvania Cavalry, Col. Cummings. Their appearance indicated that they were not over sixteen years of age, and their enlistment speaks very ill for the recruiting officer. In fact, most all the cases that come before the court now are of this character, and it is difficult to understand why officers will persist in receiving them, when it is well understood that they will be discharged the moment their cases are brought to the attention of the court. It was understood that a charge of assault and battery would be preferred against the superintendent, if an alderman could be found to hear the case. The young men would not have to go very far to find an alderman that would do almost anything. The nuisance of immoral people loitering about the squares is bad enough, but when they shock public decency grossly they ought to be removed, as was the case yearstenday.

They were Portuguese. The crowd of rioters also beat-two men on Richmond street, and smashed the windows of a store on the pretext that the proprietor had sheltered one of the assailed men. Curran was ordered to find bail in the sum of $1,400 to answer; the other three in the sum of $600 each.

REOPENING OF
PENISTAN'S VAULTS,
AT 439 CHESTNUT STREET.
TO MY PATRONS, FRIENDS. AND THE PUBLIC GENERALLY.
On SATURDAY, August 1st. 1 Open, my new establishment, the spacious Store and Vaults of No. 439 CHESTNUT Street, for your approval and approbation, where I trust I shall merit a continuance of the liberal patronage I bave hitherto always received from your hands.
In view of a misunderstanding that I am told exists in the minds of many in regard to the sudden termination of my business on the S E, corner of Third and Chestnut streets it is hoped the following brief facts will explain: On the night of June 23d, during my absence from the city, I was forcibly dispossessed by my reputed landlord, and my stock placed in the streets. As I was justly in possession, I have sought redress for the outrage in the law courts of Philadelphia.

Respectfully yours,

JUNE E FIRE FIRE FIRE FIRE! FIRE! FIRE! FINE CUT CHRWING TORACCO IN BULK.—Anderson's Solace, Hoyt's Sunnyside, Dean's Golden Prize, Dean's Philadelphia Fine Cut, Honey Dew, Michigan, and Pride of Kentneky, for six cauts per ounce.
