Vols, known as, Collis's Zouaves. Corporal Cathcart was the son of the late John Cathcarf, Esq., of this city; was twenty-two years of age; was a young man of fine habits and sound moral character, beloved by all his comrades in arms, and distinguished in the army by courage and good conduct, and by the possession of all the manly and soldierly virtues. He was shot three times— twice through his left leg, above the knee, and once through his left shoulder—and lie on the field five days and nights before found. When found, his leg was amputated, and death followed. He was an orphan, having neither father nor mother; was the nephew of the Hon. Charles Naylor, and is the sixth of his family and its connections who has laid down his life for his country in this war against therefels. How many more of them, now in the field or yet to be there, are to be offered up, He, to whom the fu-ture is as the present, only knows. At the breaking out of the rebellion, he threw himself partiotically into the ranks of the defenders of his country, and as a member of a corps of engi-neers, did valuable service in the construction of military works in the Department of the South, es-pecially at the siege and reduction of Pulaski. Mr. Soott died at the early age of 23. At the age of 19, he had entered upon the active duties of life, and the works he has left behind him will remain an enduring monument toithe maturity of his judgment and skill at so early age of of his history. In the social circle or in the sacred confidence of friend-ship, he was one of the most delightful of friends and skill at so early a period of his history. In the social circle or in the sacred confidence of friend-ship, he was one of the most delightful of friends and skill at so early a period of his history. In the social circle or in the sacred confidence of friend-ship, he was one of the most delightful of friends and companions; but under ordinary circumstances, he was reserved, and especially cautious in the ex-pression of his views ; but what he did say-whe-ther as to facts or as professional opinions—was al-ways reliable. Under a singularly refined taste and gentle spirit, lay a substratum of courage and de-termination that nothing could daunt or turn aside, but his mind was so well balanced that the latter was always in strict subordination to the former. Whatever he atter exhausted. Nothing could ex-tort an d contantum opinion from him, not even the fear, so galling to a sensitive mind, of having igno-rance imputed to him. Every question that was worthy of an opinion was thoroughly weighed and digested—and his opinion thus formed was clear, practical, and decided. An accomplished mind, a noblesoul, a gentie spirit has gone from us. May the thought that the mea-sure of his days was filled with usefunces, that the erowning act of his li BURGEE to be a delusion.
