Union Mass Meeting will be held in the borough of Oxford, on Tuesday the 220 inst. It will undoubtedly be a grand success. The citizens have liberally offered their money and their aid; the ladies, not to be behind, have promised to furnish all the good things of this life to the hungry. Banners and fings have been purchased, and bands engaged (amongst the number Beck's Band, of this city). A committee of the influential men of the borough, appointed to invite the most eminent speakers of the country to address the meeting, have been singularly successful. The following gentlemen will be present: General B. F. Butler, George Junkin, D. D. LL. D., Morton McMichael, Esq., Hon. Henry Winter Davis, Hon. Alex. Evans, F. O. Brewster, Eeq., John Dolman, Esq., Hon. John M. Broomail, Hon. John Hickman, Wayne McVeagh, Esq., J. J. Creigh, Equ, and a number of other eminent men. The Baltimore Central Railroad will run special trains at half fare, and we understand all the Union men, and, especially, the ladies, of Philadelphia, are invited to attend on next Tuesday. It is expected to be the largest meeting ever held in the county of Chester. EDUCATIONAL. PROPOSAUS. AUCTION SALES. THE CITY. RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE. ARMY CLOTHING AND EQUIPAGE CEORGE A. After promenading the airles, and admiring the beauties of nanessure of religious sincerity, however infamous nading the aisles, and admiring the beauties of nature as there displayed, it was equally refreshing to enjoy the music, and the balcony seats were all filled every evening. This exhibition has created a much deeper interest in horticulture than was ever known in this city, and the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society cannot fall to repeat it frequently. The proceeds, which we are assured are very large, will be arsigned to the United States Sanitary Commission, who will use it in a manner which will make every visitor to the Academy feel that the price of his ticket was more than trebly returned. Last evening a new attraction was exhibited, in the shape of the trunk of a young tree from the battle field of Gettysburg, which stood on Culp's Hill, in the thickest of the fire, and is scarred all over with balls, besides having a hent ramrod still sticking in it. A piece of this trunk, seven or eight feet long, was cut down and presented to the Union League, who loaned it to the Horticultural Society. The new Girls' Grammar School, in the Thirteenth section, to be located on the Girard lot, at Sixth and Coates atreets, and for which $7,000 was appropriated in 1860, will probably require at least $10,000 additional, and will not be contracted for until this further appropriation is made. (COPY OF ORDER.) In the following paragraph he gives his opinion of and their uses to the traveller:

"We carried flowers with us all the way. No one knows the full ministry of flowers until he is exiled from home, wandering in solitudes, or, as in our experience, travelling among savage and desolate mountains, upon whose sides trees can find no nourishment, which lift their grim and shattered peaks, far up on either hand, around you. Everything is strange. No trees, no fields, no level places, no near distances? All is vast, remote, and unfamiliar. The mind is wholly unacoustomed to estimate or measure such heights or magnitudes. A thousand feet seem: to your unpractised eye not more than a hundred feet. You first two hours to reach a point that seemed scarcely amile from you. So vast are objects that a half a day's journeying past some grand mountain like Windgelle leaves it undiminished, towering up, against the sky as large and seemingly as near as when you looked upon it in the morning. Rivers are torrents. They do not flow. They bolt, plunge, boll with hideous rage. Even rivulets are white how the steepness of their fall. Birds there are none and insects few. Only flowers, then, remain their own proportions and with sweet familiar faces."
