What the Election has Shown.

We know the result of the election held on Tuesday last. It would be well for all to ponder its meaning. The election of Andrew G. Curtin as the Governor of Pennsylvania has, perhaps, a more significant meaning than is attached to the election of any individual to the same high office—a glorious significance, that redounds to the honor of our noble old Commonwealth, and augurs well for the future of the Union.

It was a contest between the Union and the traitors of the South. It was a contest between the Union and the traitors of the South. It was a contest between the Union and the traitors of the South.

THE ELECTION.

Very few candidates in the election on Tuesday were elected yesterday.

Various rumors were started during the day, but nothing could be traced to any reliable source except what is given in our columns this morning. The Copperhead candidates manifested occasionally during the day some signs of hope; but, on inquiry, they proved to be only attempts to galvanize a hopeless cause.

We have revised our figures carefully—comparing the returns as they have been received with the vote of last year, when our candidates were defeated by about 3,000.

Let it be considered what a very small portion of Mexican territory has been conquered and is occupied by the French army, and at what expenditure of blood and treasure. Of the whole twenty-five States comprising the Republic of Mexico, only one is in the hands of the French.

It is eighteen months before all the boasted valor and skill of the French army could be expended in the conquest of the City of Puebla, which is half way between Mexico and the sea.

As to the second, that, if necessary, he is maintained on the throne by European aid—this is a very old story, and has been known how it is to be done, or by whom. The Emperor of Austria, who is MAXIMILIAN'S sovereign as well as brother, permits him to rule as he pleases, under the condition that, at the same time, he relinquishes all claim to be considered one of the reigning family of Austria, and whatever the result may be—that is, if deposed from the throne, he is to be banished from all right not only as a Prince, but as a subject of Austria.

Moreover, MAXIMILIAN at once will cease to draw any money from the public treasury of Austria, and will not receive any military or naval aid from Austria.
