New Publications.

Amid the unusual activity in the book-trade this zeason, Ticknor & Ffelds, the well-known Boston publishers, are not behind any of their competitors The books issued by this house are beautifully got up, and, as large as their list has grown, there are up, and, as large as their hat has grown, there are few works in it which have not been successful, be-cause they deserved to succeed. A few days ago, we noticed Longfellow's new poems ("Tales of a Wayside Inn"), among which are some of his best productions-always excepting "The Song of Hiawatha," which is the epic of A few days ago, we noticed Longfellow's new poems ("Tales of a Wayside Inn"), among which are some of his best productions-always excepting (The Song of Hiawatha," which is the epic of America, relating the legends of her aborigines. We have before us another volume of poetry, also by a New England man:--"In War Time, and other Times," by John Greenleaf Whittier, the Quaker poet. It is not a very large volume, but it contains much that is thoughtful, poetical, and pa-trictic. Of thirteen lyrics, "In War Time," we would select the following as very good: "To Englishmen," "Astrea at the Capitol," "The Proclamation," and the noble narrative en-titted "Barbars Frictshie,"-the last does honor to Stonewall Jackson, a brave though mis-tsken man. Among the Home Ballads, we would point out "Cobler Keesar's Vision," and "The Countess;" and every one of the Occa-sional Poems is very good. Mr. Whittier sings bravely of the war, and its great issues. Besides, of all American writers, he is the poet of nature, he has closely Observed her at all seasons, under her. When speeking of the country, his poetry is panking. One prevalling fault in his versification-a tendency to make bad rhymes-he does not ex-hibit, in this volume, so much as on previous occa-sions. But he bas not wholly corrected it. We hibit, in this volume, so much as on previous occa-sions. But he has not wholly corrected it. We cannot accept such rhymes as cannon and pennon, oath and south, human and common, joined and behind, and so on. Is this carelessness, or is it an inherent deficiency in distinguishing the delicacles of sound? In rhymtd poems there should not be found bad riymes, except when the author evidently has a rt ymer, except when the atthic voted by as a purpose in making an apparent deficiency. "Meditations on Life and its Religious Duties," translated from the German by Frederica Rowan, is a book which we find vis a vis with (The Thoughts of the Emperor M [arcus] Aurelius Antoninus," translated by George Long. It will be not prolit-less for the reader to compare the religious thoughts f the Christian with the philosophy of the Roman These writers speak of the soul, but Dr. I. Ray, in his "Medical Hygiene," treats almost exclusively of the body, upon the health of which depends the strength of the human mind. The author treats of Medical Hygiene under five heads : As affected by Gerebral Conditions; by Physical Influences; by Mental Conditions and Influences; by the Provides of the Times, and by Tendency to Disease. Fresh air, exercise, avoidance of over-labor for the brain, and, above all, temperance in eating and drinking, have a very strong advocate in Dr. Ray. His book, ndeed, is a practical essay upon modern modes of life, and truly instructive and readable we have found it.

German literature is largely becoming naturalized among ui-partly through translations. Some months ago, Ticknor & Fields published a transla-tion by O. T. Brouks, of Jean Faul Richter's months ago, Ticknor & Fields published a translation by C. T. Brouks, of Jean Paul Richters. And the Internet in this wide models at the second state of the rough and a vertice of the Pour, Firmian Stanislaus Siebenkäa," This translation is by E. H. Noel, and it is suitably prefaced by a biographical sketch of Jean Paul, taken from Carlyle's well-known article upon him, in the Foreign Review, in 1830, which must not be confounded with a previous article on the same subject, in the Edinburgh Review, from the same subject, in the solutions during to a translation is by E.  It may be remembered that the volume of funereal poetry, "In Memoriaw," was written by Tennyson after he had lost the friend of his youth, who was to have becord his sister's huebend. This young man, Arthur Henry Hallam, son of Hallam the historian, the hallow the trans of the researd of the probably would have been a shining light in Britiah literature. The volume contains memoirs of young Hallam and of his brother, who also did outcoes, for 1863:

An appeal on writs of certiorari will be made to a higher tribunal, when there will probably be a dissertation on that part of the law referring to an imprisonment not known in the county of Philadelphia, unless the County Prison, Peniten-tiary, or House of Refuge may be considered as so many houses of correction. Instead of 60 cents, now spoken of, the duty upon American spirits above proof should be at least $1 a gallon. This may raise so large a revenue that the galling duties upon necessaries, which it takes an army of officials to collect, might be dispensed with. So thinks ONE IN THE TRADE.

Edwin Forrest as Hamlet.

In recalling the stilted mannerisms, the far-fetched readings, the forced oncerts, the extravagant bom-bast, and ludicrous affectation, of some of our Ham-lets, we are led to exclaim. THE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY .- AN IN-

THE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—AN IN-TERESTING DISCUSSION—STATE 'OF THE OROPS.— Yesterday morning the Philadelphila Society for promoting Agriculture, held a regular stated meet-ing, at their rooms on Walnut street, Oraig Biddle, Erd, president, in the chair. A photographic repre-sentation was presented to the Society of the Agricultural College, near Bollefonte. This institu-tion owns 400 sores of land, and the school can comfortably accommodate 400 publis. A mong other donations was a large specimen of syptum, from which plaster for manuring purposes is obtained. It was stated, in the course of a slight discussion as to the merits of plaster as a manufe, that the old deeds of Lancaster county forbade the use of plaster, on the ground that it exhausted the soil, and the crops were diminished. The farmers of that county, as those of other counties, have grown more intelligent since, and adopt plaster as a good manure. Another member remarked that a certain establishment in this oity sold plaster mired with-manues.

[Before Mr. Alderman White.] John Smith. Among the motley groups arraigned yesterday, before the police magistrate of the Fifth ward, was an individual hatless and aboeless. He was picked up in the street by an officer. The prisoner was a bad imitation of humanity. Rum and dissipation of various kinds had done their work. This poor miserable fellow-creature, to bide his own shame from well-to-do relatives, gave the convenient name of John Smith.

CILLETTE & SCOTT,

ing, and a variety of his compositions, original young, and a variety of his compositions, original and translated, nearly all of which indicate great ability as well as varied knowledge. One fragment in blank verse, (pp. 80-85.) is dated 1820. If this date be correct, Arthur Hallam may be accounted a more precocious poet than even Chatterton. Indeperdent of references in that poem to travel in Italy, perdent of references in this point to travel in reary, and talk about it and about Wordsworth with "a dear companion" of the gentler sex, it is impossible that a boy of eleven, which Hallam was in 1820, could have written these lines. He visited Italy in 1827-28, and the poem in question cannot be earlier than the latter date. This would make him seventeen, and few persons have ever written half so well at that age-certainly neither Byron nor Moore, whose early forts are generally feeble and diffuse.

A volume of essays, entitled "Excursions," by the late Henry David Thoreau, chiefly collected from the Allanic Monthly, is remarkable for the fact that the biographical sketch of the author, by R. W. throws the rest of the book into the shade; it is one of Emerson's best studies. Mr. manue; it is one of Limitson's Dest studies. Mr. Thoreau, though an eccentric, had considerable ability, and few writers have described nature with auch vivid truth. His "Walk to Wachusett," "The Succession of Forest Trees," and "Autumnal Tints." are as much tinted and colored as if the author had set his palette, and used a pencil instead of the pen. Who, among the multitude of readers, does not rejoice when a new volume by Oliver Wendell Holmes comes into his hands? Here we have Holmes could be atlantia," consisting of ten "Soundings from the Atlantia," consisting of ten uty in the uty which have already done yeoman's duty in the Atlantic Monthly. Of these, the most touching is." My Hunt after 'The Captain," the most instructive being the escays on Photography, attificial limbs, gpropos of Palmer's patent leg, and the human voice. This is a chapter, too, relating a "Visit to the Autooras's Insuring that grain be read with pleasure. As for Dr. Holmes' exposition of Photography and the Stereoscope, we will say that never was science made so intelligible to the multitude.

Days and Nights on the Battle-field," by Carle ton (was correspondent of a Boston daily paper), is published to day, by Ticknor & Fields, and will cer-tainly obtain great popularity among young people. Carleton has seen a great deal of the stirring and varied scenes of the great war which now seems apnea scenes of the great war which now seems ap-proaching its end, and graphically describes much of what he saw. Here, in fact, is a popular history of the war, up to the opening of the Mississippi.by the great naval victory at Memphis, which "children of a larger growth," as well as boys, may read with advantage. A glossary of military terms is given, as well as eight fine engravings on wood, and fifteen diagrams of battle fields and other encounters. diagrams of Cattle news and once the design of the seen later Cattering concludes by saying that he has seen later engagements (at Antietam, Fredericks and hints engagements (at Anteram, required, and hints Gettysburg,) than those here a refeed, and hints that he may write another volume, narrating them. Its ought to common and it at once. The ought to common and it at once. The ought to common and the several new works, among which are A Boy's History of England, by the Rev. C. Kingsley ; The Hillyars and the Burtons, by Henry Kingsley; a volume of poems, by Robert Browning; Looking toward Sunset, by Mrs. L. M. Child; Poems, by Dora Greenwell; Washington Irving's Sketch-book, in blue and gold; a new edition of Mrs. Lee's Life of Jean Paul; Shakspeare's Sonnets; Life of William Hickling Prescott, by George Ticknor, the historian of Spa nish literature.

School Reform.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 2, 1863.

To the Edilor of The Press: SIR: Your truly sensible article, the other day, in advocacy of the adoption of the "one-session" sys-tem for our public schools, demands the hearty assent of every studious observer and admirer of that great national institution; the increased beneficial results flowing from the adoption of such a system seen to the writer to be so obvious as scarcely to require presentation to the reflecting mind. Dr. Winship, who has, I believe, become "standard au." thority" on "Muscle," states that when he limited his practice to a very short period (I think half an hour) each day, he gained strength and development much more rapidly than when straining and taxing his body for hours upon parallels and perpendicu-lars. The same general laws of development and contraction that govern the physical govern also the mental: the mind is well as the DOdy, for the maintenance of its natural vigor, must have its time for sorted its mind is upon the the the source of the maintenance of the source of the the source of the source of the source of the the source of the source o pose; where one or the other of these transgresses upon or absorbs the time of the other, a law is vioated, and nature admits of no plea or estoppel in hindrance of the enforcement of her penalties. One of the principal objections offered I believe to the "one session-a day" system is the fact that it will "unloose" the thousands of school children, and send them into the public streets, where it is alleged their noise will be intolerable. This objection must needs proceed from age-advanced single ladies and gents, better known as old maids and bachelors, and should have no weight in the regulation of an institution which they do not seem inclined practi-cally to encourage. Children must play, will play, and ought to play. The only question is, shall they be allowed to recreate in day time when they can see, or at night when their stray balls are liable to be stopped in their aerial progress by somebody's eye, forcing the sublime subject of astronomy into sud, den prominence; or it may be you are brought to a premature hait by an excitable sensation in the masal organ, implicating the heavy end of a misdl reoted shinney, suggesting the unoharitable wish that some two-sessionite controller had been your substitute just then, in order that he might "see it" in the zame light that it struck you? Oge session a day, which should be limited to four bours myoided see, or at night when their stray balls are liable to
