rattle, and I could not sleep; I was in agony all night, so that I could not rest; I laid in bed till morning, but did not sleep more than two hours all sight; I got up next morning, and went out and cut off some wood; while I was cutting the wood, every time that I would look down the road, the tears would begin to float in my eyes, so that I could not work; I would have to quit, and have a crying spell shout it.

would begin to float in my eyes, so that I could not work ; I would have to quit, and have a crying spell about it. After 1 got enough wood cut off to last that day, I went into the house to get my breakfast. After breakfast I started for Mount Holly, on the road from our own residence to Exprestown. Before I got to the forks of the road, by Franklin Deacon's, my heart failed me so that I had to sit down. I sat there for fifteen minutes in the joint of fence. When I got up the ground was wet with tears. I got up and started down to Exprestown, while I was talking with Wilson I hadn't the heart to look him in the isce. I started for Mount Holly. After I got to Holly I had to run ab ut from one place to another ; as soon as I sat down a few minutes the tears would begin to float in my eyes. I went to Pemberton with William Sapp. There was some yoong ladies there that I knew. I tried to make myself lively with them, but my heart was in my mouth and the tears were in my eyes, so that I had to leave them. After I had my trial, before Tim could get me to come out and say that I knew nothing about it, he wanted me to kill myself, for they was any was any to kill myself, for they was any was agoing to hang me. He found out that he could not get me to kill myself, for they was any was any to kill myself, for they was any was agoing to hang me. He found out that the could not get me to kill myself, for they was any was agoing to hang me. If for they was any kas the my could nick it on the edge, and saw the bars off, and take my blankets, and make a rope of them to get over the wall with. He has wanted me to coax mother to poison father to death, for she could do it better than what we could an one would take and put it into his coffee, and no one would know what was the matter with him.
