Mysterious Abduction of a Lady.  A REIGN OF TERROR IN ILLINOIS.—The Spring- field (Ill.) Journal gives the following particulars of a singular affair:  "A private letter from a lady at Richview, Washington county, in this State, gives the particulars of a most mysterious outrage which was perpe- trated at the residence of Mr. M. A. Linton, re- siding about four miles from Richview, on the night of the 5th inst.  "The writer says that a party of thirteen men, disguised by handkerchiefs tied over the lower part of their faces, and armed with navy revolvers, pre- sented themselves at Mr. Linton's house about half past two o'clock at night and demanded admittance. When refused they threatened to break down the  DEDICATION OF A NEW "SOLDIERS"  HOME!—INTERSTING ExerCIBES.—On yesterday morning the building at the corner of. Even before the act of 1724 was passed, when the English statute of Charles II, in force in this colony, was in almost the same words as our present act of 1724, and that no legislative prohibition has ever been passed since that act; that no conviction even took place in the seventy years that the act has been regarded as a work of necessity. 2d. The act expressly allows the dressing of victuals in bakehouses. 3d. The act expressly allows the delevery of milk and the necessaries of life before nine o'clock in the forenoon 4th. That this is clearly a work of necessity, which is admitted by the decision of the Supreme Court in a number of cases, Counsel further contended that, if a contrary construction was given to the set, it would prevent fresh press or meat from being furnished on Monday, as the dough the transfer of the set, it would prevent fresh press	with sales at $36 % ton for let No. 1. as a man who had taken supper at Mr. Linton's the same evening under pretence of having lost his way to Hayleton, the next town.  "When admitted the party demanded Genevra, a daughter of Mr. Linton's by a former marriage, a beautiful and amiable girl of sixteen years of age, who had just returned home from a boarding school in Ohio. She having just run down stairs to see what was the matter, was seized by three rulfians, and told that she must go with them, dead or alive. Her father was totally unarmed, and powerless to defend her. The girl was dragged to her room, and after having been allowed to dress her self, was forcibly carried to a bugy and driven off. As she was borne out at the door, she turned towards her father, raised her hands, and exclaimed, "Oh, God!"	this was not a work of necessity, as contemplated by the act, and cited a number of cases to sustain his position.  The court held the matter under advisement. Edward H Weil and Henry M Phillips for defendant; Wm. B. Mann for prosecutor. "He party of eight men were left to guard the house till daylight, to prevent any alarm being given. During the night they paced around the house, knocking at the door, looking in at the window, rattling the glass, and taunting the wretched inmates by asking them how they liked evening calls, &c. No clue has been obtained to the abductors, or to the source taken by them, although a stranger whom Mr. Linton met at a store in Richview the same day is suspected to have been one of them. Another statement is to the effect that a woman who had been prowling around the neighborhood for some time past was one of the abducting party." Mr. Linton is a Quaker by profession, and it was well known that he was unarmed.  "For some time past as perfect reign of terror has prevailed in the region referred to above. worked, and therefore physically prostrated, she returned to her residence on Sixth street, above Poplar, on the evening of that day, and gradually sunk into a state of paralysis. On Sunday morning her speech momentarily revived, and she said something about the "Soldiers' Home." This was all that could be understood. It was evidence, indeed, that the ruling idea of taking care of the invalid soldiers, by which she was actuated in life, with all the noble, holy impulses of the heart of a true and patriotic lady, was still atrong in death. Nies Ross was the embodiment of all those feelings of refinement that adorn the female sex, and which make life sgreeable. If she had enemies, she possessed Christian virtue enough to forgive them all in the hour of dissolution. It may be truly said that she was the very life or the preservation of our national existence. Soul of the Cooper Shop Hospital, where for many weary hours she watched with sleepless care and solicitude over those under her charge. Many a soldier, who was fortunate enough during the last two years to come under her kind attention, will shed a tear to her memory when he learns of her demise, which has taken place so suddenly. It is hard to realize the fact that she is dead. It seems that she still lives—she does live in the history of good deeds. There are thousands of people in Philadelphia, who will ever fondly cherish her in their memory.  Funeral of Capt. Walter S. was no military display, all such demonstration being purposely avoided. The clergymen present included the Rev. D. Washburn, Rodney, Morris, and Diehl. The body was conveyed to South Laurel Hill Cemetery, and received the following tribute from Rev. D. Washburn:  The teacher of this young hero's boyhood may claim the privilege of dropping a memento over his grave before it finally shuts his manly form from our sight. It is no common funeral that we attend on this hallowed pilgrim's day. A regiment of common men cannot fill the place vacated by this youthful hero's death. His unselfish heart was always the fountain of almost romantic devotion to his mother, of all dutiful affection for his father and brothers, of spontaneous self-ascrifice for others, and fonble emulation among his comrades. years past I have watched his opening career with admiration, and when the war broke out, he being as yet searce 21, was not surprised to see him, under the impulse of native ardor, enthusiastic in his country's cause, and fearless of all danger, reaching over the heads of able seniors, plucking the wreath of deathless fame from thehand of America's guardian spirit. At Springfield, before Richmond, and at Gettysburg, his gallant daring left a glorious record of the most trilling incidents—all unatudied—the simple outworking of the soul within him, whose very instinct was excellence itself. From very childhood he possessed unconsciously the feeling which the poet has endeavored to express in the familiar words:  "Lives of great men all remind us We can make our own swiftme, And departing, leavy behind us Foot-prints on the sands of time." painful illness, from the effects of typhoid fever. Although quite a young man, Mr. Madara had attained a position as a telegrapher of the first class, and occupied important positions in the American Company, both at Baltimore and in this clity. His services at the commencement of the rebellion, in the former city, were of the most important character to the Government, as well as to the press of the country, and his able management of affairs at that difficult period marked him as a man of no ordinary ability. His private life was unimpeachable, and his amiable and generous disposition gathered around him a large circle of friends to mourn his decease.  A meeting of the telegraphic operators of this city was held last evening to testify their respect to the memory of the deceased. The meeting was largely attended, and composed of representatives from all of the various companies of the city.
