The expedition promises to be one of vast magni-tude, and tilly equal, if no nhoreseen event should intervene, to the great task it is designed to accom-plish. Many of the vessels here are of light draught, and this circumstance has led some to believe that a portion of the fleet will sail up the Savan-nah river. This seems to be the impression of the rebels, who have increased the number of their bat-teries at Fort Jackson, and other points near Savan-nah. On hand and constantly receiving PRICES MODERATE. It is evident, however, that the enery do not incomente preside destination of the expedition, or at least that they distrust their own speculative theories about it. They believe the most rulnerable portion of rebeldom will be selected; and from a prisoner who was recently captured near Fort Pu-laski I have learned that the chivalry expect Gen. Glimore will make a grand attack on Charleston and the rear, and that the movement will be preceded by an expedition to the line of the Charleston and Sa-vancah Railvoad, to cut off all communication and reinforcements between those of the road where the attack is anticipated. The third theory of this expedition is, that it is intrended for Mobile; that it is to be bombarded by the land and maxiforce—that is, by the flact off the harbor and the army which is to march overland from Pensacola, a distance of some forty miles. Those better informed in military circles repudiate this speculation, and profess to hope and believe that the capture or destruction of Unarleston and Savannah are intended by this movement. One im-portant feature connected with it, which should not be overlooked, is that a large negro force is to ac-company the expedition, which will be landed at various points where they can make coesaional rates and bring to their tranks the slaves who large-ly abound in the interior. It is said the army will be able to get sufficient supplies and an abund. ance of long forage in the valley of the Chickey and French Broad rivers. The position is one of the most advantageous on the theatre of this war. It is on the flank of Thomas' army. It threatens the enemy's communi-cations through Knoxville and Nashville. It is within thirty mills of Cumberiand Gap. It is on the East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad, which, we understand, will be completed to Longstreet's headquarters in three weeks, and thus, in case of emergency, bring the Army of Tennessee within supporting distance of Richmond. It is, in short, the sontrolling position between Lee and Johnson, and at the same time close enough to Kentucky for the easy invasion of that State whenever the signal may be given for such a movement. McLaws made inquiry as to the cause of this order, when he was informed by Gen. Longstreet that he (Gen. GENERAL MORGAN-HIS BROEPTION IN BIGHMOND. GENERAL MORGAN—HIS ENCEPTION IN RIGHMOND. On January S General Morgan had a reception by the suthorities at Richmond. Mayor Mayo wel-comed him, and General J. R. B. Stuart made one of the speeches. He spoke of his own and General Morgan's posi-tion in the service. Some people had gotten up the idea that they were rivals. If a desire to harm the enemy moat and advance the Southern cause could be called rivalry, then he expected they were rivals to that extent. He wasgled to know that the sleep-less blade of the gallant Kentuckian would soon again be fashing over the enemy in the West, with greater power and terror to the enemy than ever. Speaking was not his forte, and not at all in his way. The field, and not the forum, was his place. But, while the citizens of Richmond could not ex-pect a speech from him, he could not do less than to express the gratification he feit at the honor done the gallant Morgan. He was worthy of that honor, and it was not unworthily bestowed. General Morgan made a visit to Libby Prison-which is thus described: "General Morgan, on artiving up stairs, where the prisoners' most do congregate,' was immediately concucted into the presence of the 'author of the Maine Liquor Law,' the whilom,Brigadler General Neal How. An introduction took place, when Mor-gan observed with one of those inimitable smiles for which he is so noted, 'General How, I am very happy to see you here; or, rather, I should say, since you are here; I am happy to see you looking so well.' Dow's natural astuteness and Yankee in-genuity came to his aid, and he quickly replied, without apparent embarrassment, 'General Morgan, I congratulate you on your escape: I cannot say that I am gleased to see you here,' The conversa-tion then became general between the two, during the progress of which Dow admitted that his views of the South, its people, and their treatment of pri-sone: of war had undergone a material change for the better in the last few months.
