THE CITY.

GRAND OVATION TO GENERAL MEADE — Major General George G. Meade having sufficiently recovered from a slight attack of typhoid fever, recovered from a slight attack or typnoid fever, yielded to public pressure, and yesterday received his friends at Independence Hall. The aspred odi-fice was handsomely arrayed in red, white, and blue; the besutiful silk flag presented to the city by the officers and crew of the United States frigate Hartford being displayed on the United States frigate Hartford being displayed on the eastern wall. In Harttern being dapinged on the eastern wan the point of tasterul festooning this old Hall never looked more gay than on this occasion. It was evi-dent at an early hour that the place of attraction was going to be besieged by an immense multitude, and Mr. Ruggles, the chief of police, in perfecting his arrangements had to double his force of offisers so that the harmony of the proceedings might not be marred by any accident. Persons who have never been in a great crowd can form no idea of the pres-time and the consequent danger. No one knows this better than the chief and some of the reporters. The arrangements he made may be put down under-the head of admirable. At noon there were several thousand people in front of the building, and nearly as many in the rear. The windows and balcony of the American Hotel were filed with Indies, who testified their apprecia-tion of the event by the waving of handkerchiefs. point of tasteful festooning this old Hall neve

The scene was inspiring. It was well calculated to fan the spark of patriotism in every bosom, and to awaken the dense multitude to deeds of enthusiastic devotion to our country. A few minutes after 12 o'clock the members of the Select and Common Council, and Heads of Depart-Select and common connent, and arranged themselves, as ments, entered the Hall, and arranged themselves, as untal upon such occasions, in a semi-circular posi-

These interesting preliminatics having thus been so far conducted in a perfectly dignified style, and the urual rounds of applause having been given, MAYOB HENRY, in a citar tone of volce and firm, delivered the fol-lowing speech of welcome: GRNERAL MEADE: Your visit to the city of Philadelphia, although intended alone by yourself for the endearments of home, has afforded to your fellow-citizens an opportunity for a public recogni-tion of your signal services, and for expression of the grateful esteem in which you are justly held. For this purpose the Councils of Philadelphia have invited you to the Hall of Independence, and in their name I bid you the welcome that is due to every champion in our country's cause, but to none so filly as to the successful defender of the State within which this venerated edifice is reared. [Out-burst of applause.] Such civic testimonial of re-spect can but insdequately evince the gratitude of this community toward the able leader and the in-trapid soldiers of the Army of the Potomac-that army before whose conceded provess the foe qualled with instinctive dread as they confronted fits firm rarks upon the glorious heights of Gettysburg. [Renewed applause.] Twice in our country's anals has the Fourth day of July been of special note. The presence in which you stand, and the memorials that surround you, tell of the earlier day, when the inspiration of patriots gave forth from this hall that grand cread for all humanity, whose truths, passing the compre-hession of unbelief, finding acceptance, through the baptism of blood, as the Vital, essential tenest io our cational perpetuity. [Applause] to the memorable hours of the later suniversary the gratitude of those who now greet you can bear ready witness. The remembrance is still fresh of shough the fild every loyal heat sud bear pointed by their tread. [Applause] Memory can y et viridly recall the fervent thanks which ascended to the Giver of all victory and the shough the glad ertainty that the rebel invaders hard bear overthrow

A NARROW ESCAPE.—Yesterday morn-ing, about 2 o'clock, a fire cosurred at an old build-ing, No. 37 North Ninth attreet, used as a cabinet-maker's shop by a Frenchman, named Jacob Ave. The fiames were extinguished before they had got far under way, owing to a quick alarm given by Officer McGauley. The front window had a sash in it, but no shutters, and the floor was strewn with shavings. It was evident that some person had thrown a lighted match through the window, and the chavings took fire. The frames akimmed along the floor, and were fast taking hold on the stairway when they were discovered. Mr. Ave has his family reading in the country, and his daughter, aged 14 years, came to see him. Ave had occasion to go to his family, and left this girl in the third-story room of the Ninth-street building, with some food and a miserable bed made of shavings and wool. After the fire, when an examination was made, the young girl was found ascent along in this room. If the flaames had got fairly under way, there is no doubt that she would have been burned to death. efforts to maintain their just cause. After three years of incessant warfare, there is to day no less detarmination to preserve this Union, no less ability to effect that purpose, and no less faith in the sure result; than when rebellion first bid defiance to the Federal power. [Applause,] Again, General, I offer the sortial congratulations of your fellow-citizens, and their earnest wishes for your undimmed prosperity and honor.

Agam, tremersi, 1 oner the contrat congratinations of your tellow-citizens, and their carnest wishes for your undimmed prosperity and honor. GENERAL MEADS, In response to the eloquent tribute of the Mayor, said he could scarcely say how he felt, how much he was overcome by this unexpected honor, as he had come to Philadelphia to be a short time with his family. He thanked the citizens of Philadelphia, through their representatives, for this reception. Sometimes he thought that too much importance was attached to his humble efforts in behalf of the ULION. To his officers-brigade commanders, regi-mental commanders, and company commanders, but more particularly the herois bearing of the private soldiers, the great success of the army is due. [Great applause] If he had not the support of his soldiers, not all the military skill in the world could succeed. He desired that the creditshould be given to his army. After the battle of Gethysburg he fully appreciated the services of that strmy which is sometimes called uniortunate:. When the record of that samy be-conces fully known, it will appear that it is one of two ment geliant and determined that the world ever saw. [Renewed appluses] As a statistical fact, he would state that since March, 1861, not less that his efforts are sporenistics. [Applause, I The done. When the senson for operations commences, is will be this duty to again lead that samy be-field, ard he will tel greatly inspired when helmfows that his efforts are sporenisted. [Applause, I The general concluded his remarks by again returning the modum of an intended honor to the brave men who compose the Army of the Potomas. The main doorway was now thrown open, and the mode of spress pointed out by a detail of police. The might tile of population rushed steadily through the spartments, and the General was com-pelien to endure the public infliction of being shaken policiers in the mighty rush. They shook the hand of their commander with joy. He had a cheery

The residence of Mrs. Hall, 1733 Market street, was entered by thieves some time on Monday night and $70 in Ubited States Treasury notes, a gold watch, and a number of silver coin (Spanish) were stolen. An entrance was effected through the rear second-story window. The family were aroused and called the police, but none came. The reason may be assigned for this is, that the police are entirely too few in number. Our city has greatly increased in size and population since consolidation, yet there are not now as many police officers as there were ten years and population since consolidation, yet there are not now as many police officers as there were ten years ago. There ought to be at least 1,600 police officers on duty at the present time, instead of a lif-tic over 600. Burglaries may be committed almost with impunity in some parts of the eity-not be-cause the policemen are not efficient, but simply be-cause ther not enough of them.
