The Presidential Nomination. The Independent specifies the qualities the Union candidate for the Presidency should possess. They should be, in its opinion, a sublime allegance to God, Liberty, and Human Rights; a native capacity to govern; will enough to break through common men's impossibilities, as through egg shells; incorruptible integrity. The man thus qualified should be the candidate, it argues; but while we admit the argument, we do not think the Independent has lessened the difficulty it assumes to exist. The very great number of firstclass men who are thus universally gifted would embarrass the most sagacious of conventions. The Independent seems to take it for granted that all these fine qualities are very rare, but it will learn better by the time the convention meets. North," Mr. BEECHER, himself, would make no or dinary President-we have had several Presidents who have been, in every respect, his inferiors-and has no enemy bold enough to deny him the possession of those virtues the Independent eloquently enumerates. But this natural fitness for the position is not singular. Wait till the time for the Convention approach. es, and we shall read in the newspapers of so many men perfectly tulfilling the conditions of the Independent that we shall all be delighted and bewildered. There fore, while we warmly approve of the spirit of the fine article in the Independent, we do not exactly see its practical value. The Tribune compliments it very highly and justly. Yet it seems to us that to gravely and elaborately announce that we should have the very best man we can get for a candidate, is much the same as assuring the world that if it is virtuous it is sure to be happy. It will do no one any harm, how ever, to give respectful attention to the following impartial paragraph, for that two and two make four is none the less true because it is not new:

Cause it is not new: "We hope our many readers and out brethren of the prices will give head to tness suggestions. If the time is ever to come to this suggestions. If the time is ever to come to this suggestions. If the time is ever to come to this suggestions. If the time is ever to come to this suggestions. If the time is ever to come to this suggestions. If the time is ever to come to the substantian strongest, bravest, hest man, and no other, we be-lieve that time draws night. And what shall hinder us from such a choice? Such is the comparatively unparties a state of the old parties, such the general unability of purpose among all loyal and patriotic citizens, that the batton is likely to no freer in making its nomination for the next sanvass than for any previous presidential struggle for many years. With no old political favorites to be necess-sarily rewarded-no oid detta to be exitted with for-mer placemen and continuous office secters—no un-avoidable bargains to be make with balance-holding income to the store and such that the and entimer placement and continuous and references—ho un-avoidable bargames to be made with baiance-holding factions—no needful consultations with the ancient and dry-totted i-boby meu of albacy and Washington —no enemy.domestic of foreign, restectable enough to be compromised with—no other. by .et to be promoted than the interests of the country—why should there be a committai to any other caudidate than to the best man for the highest place? Nor, this time, can the usual plea of 'arai-ability' be used as the appo-logy for putting saids the filedest man for some one more accidentally unable, because more politically influential. We believe—nit over assigninely, as we hope—that the logal party will be strong enough at the next election to carry its candidate, whoever he may be. The true Presidential campaign, therefore, rather than after the nomination. It will not be so hard to elect the best candidate as to nominate him. This is a reason which not only justifies but urges an early survey of the entire field. Let loyal men units, specify and heartily, upon the one and only object of choosing THE BEST MAN. "Who, then, is he? Let apper winded citizens object of Who. then, is he? Let sober minded citizen

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 18, 1864. Who will be the Presidential candidate of the opposition to the war? We are only interested in this question as students of events, for it is very sure that no radical Unionist will be consulted in the selection. Never before has any party been put to such straits, not to count the odium that has settled like a thunder-cloud upon the so-called Democracy, which may burst any hour upon their ranks in a tempest of wrath, in consequence of the unbroken sympathy of their leaders with the rebellion. The difficulty of securing a really strong man to carry the fated responsibility of such a candidacy is patent and principal. A nominee may doubtless be found, for there are those always ready to accept such an cordance with the provisions of this act and the law to which this is an amendment, further drafts honor, even if it is conferred in the face of certain defeat.
