New Jersey Annual Conference of the M. E. Church.

[Reported for The Press.]

THIRD DAY.

BRIDGETON, March 5, 1864.

Yesterday afternoon a very interesting sermon was held in the Commerce-street M. E. Church. The building was thoroughly packed in every part with an expectant audience. It was the time set apart for the "annual missionary sermon," which, on this occasion, was to be preached by Rev. S. Y. Monroe, a leading member of the Conference. The text selected was: "The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few."

We will not attempt an analysis of the sermon. Let it suffice to say that it was full of solid thought connected with the great interests of missions, intellectually illustrated, earnestly delivered, and impressively enforced. The Conference was asked to contribute $20,000 this year—an advance of several thousand, over last year—and it was announced yesterday that it had been contributed, with nearly a thousand to spare.

In the evening the anniversary exercises of the Conference Missionary Society took place. Speeches were made by Rev. G. R. Morris, Rev. T. Lawrence, T. Hanlon, of this Conference, A. Atwood, of your city, and Cornelius Walsh, Esq., of Newark, N. J., one of the managers of the parent society. The speeches were exceedingly varied, both in matter and style, but were appropriate, earnest, and soulstirring—some of them eminently so—and the vast audience testified by listening with the deepest attention until a very late hour.

Conference opened this morning, in the usual way, by Rev. E. Page.

A preamble and resolutions were introduced, discussed, and disposed of, by which the presiding officers of both branches of the Legislature, designed to secure further legislation to protect ministers from prosecutions when solemnizing marriages in the case of minors, when the parties make oath that they are of age, the minister being authorized in such case to solemnize the rite.

After some unimportant matters, S. G. Bennet, Nathan Hewitt, Richard Moore, colored; Richard Skinner, local preacher, were elected to Deacon's Orders, and Israel Broughton, local preacher, to Elder's Orders.

Conference resolved to hold its next session in the Grove-street M. E. Church, Trenton, N. J.

A commmunication from Dr. Johnson, president of Dickinson College was read, showing the great prosperity of the institution—as amidst the struggles of the country, and the great drain upon the population of the country to carry on the war.

Rev. Jr. Brindle, of Salem, high on the Union of New Jersey, represented his field of labor in a very humorous manner. He stated that "his place of worship was an humble structure, costing some two hundred thousand dollars; his congregation being very quiet, none of them ever running out during the services. Would they not like to run out?"] He had never seen any of his congregation smile. [Voice—"Have you seen any of them lately?" And the question seemed to be interesting, and very attentive to the Word. But, to keeping his humor, he gave a very interesting account of his labors among these unfortunates, and the Conference passed a resolution recommending increased contributions to be provided for public worship in the future.

The Bishop addressed the Conference upon the duty of its members, according to the Church Discipline, to attend to the spiritual interests of baptized children, after which a free conference was held in relation to the matter, which resulted in making a deep impression as to the importance of taking care of the children.

Trustees of Pennington Seminary made their report, showing its great prosperity, and asking for an enlargement of the building. H. B. B.

THE POLICE.

[Before Mr. Alderman Beitler.]

Alleged Larceny.

On Saturday afternoon, two persons, one beyond the middle age of life, the other a boy whose moral culture had been neglected, were arraigned before Mr. Garton, of the First district, on the charge of the larceny of a pocket-book containing the sum of nearly one fifty dollars, the property of Mr. Henry Coddington, a rag and paper dealer in Jayne street, above Sixth. The defendants had sold some rags at the store of the prosecutor in the city. While he and the elder of the defendants were examining a lot of rags the pocket-book disappeared. The lad and person named were both held, but contained it he was searched, but not very minutely. The pocket-book could not be found. The lad gave a ludicrous account of his doings, and displayed a dogged silence when questioned by the magistrate. The defendants were committed in default of $300 bail to answer.

[Before Mr. Alderman Kennedy.]

Harness Recovered.

On Saturday, a man giving the name of William Wilson, was arrested on the Delaware front, near Chestnut street on the charge of stealing two sets of harness, of which the latter gives a satisfactory account. He was committed. The harness awaits an owner at the station house.

THE COURTS.

Supreme Court at Nisi Prius—Judge Woodward.

IMPROVEMENT COMPANY.

The Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company vs. The Beaver Meadow Railroad Company.

In this case, which was fully argued a few days ago, Judge Ludlow charged the jury at length and able opinion. We have but space for a brief abstract, setting forth the conclusions at which he arrived.

The Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company had filed their bill in equity, claiming, among other things, the right to construct a railroad, commencing along the Upper Lehigh, from the head of their navigation, at or near Mauch Chunk, to the Susquehanna near Penn Haven Junction; and, in effect, they allege, that, in April last, they entered upon the premises, and staked out a railroad between these points, preparatory to proceeding to construct the same, without any necessary condition but they claim "that the Beaver Meadow Railroad and Coal Company, in order to defeat the said intentions of your orators, have recently taken possession of the ground on which your orators had located their said road, and now occupy the same with large bodies of workmen, who are engaged thereon, under the directions of the said Beaver Meadow Railroad and Coal Company, in grading the same for the purposes of laying down a third track of railroad from Mauch Chunk to Penn Haven, without authority of law, and in violation of the rights of your orators."

After referring to the various acts of Assembly controuling both companies, the Judge held that more than the public interests, as well as the interests of these respective companies, by enabling all the new sidings of the Beaver Meadow Company, above the turn-hole, be placed upon the west side of their main track, for the purpose of enabling them to transfer their main track eastward at points where such transfer will facilitate the introduction of a siding on the west side, and to enable them to bring their main track at such points within eight feet of either track of the Lehigh Company's road. That they may be located so as to leave the walls and embankments they have already constructed for purposes of sidings on the east side of their track, so far as these are within the lines of the railroad located by the said Lehigh Company, at a valuation to be agreed on between the two parties, or by men mutually chosen by them, with power to choose an umpire; and that the Lehigh Company expend an amount equal to that valuation in the construction of sidings on the west side of main track of Beaver Meadow Company.

The effect of all these rulings is:

1. To establish the plaintiffs' right to build the railroad they have located or begun.

2. To establish the right of defendants to build all necessary sidings, and that the projected sidings are necessary.

3. That siding No. 1 is well built where it is, but is not to be extended to the bridge.

4. That the old bridge and the track leading on to it from the north are to be left as they are, subject to such repairs as defendants may choose to place upon them.

5. That all new sidings above the turn-hole be built on the west side of the tracks of the Beaver Meadow Company.

6. That the plaintiffs be uninterrupted in building a bridge at the turn-hole, and their road as located, but that they compensate defendants in the manner prescribed for the labor and material of defendants which they appropriate.

The opinion concludes as follows:

I do not suppose that these conclusions are as well for the parties as they would have done for themselves, if they had accepted the suggestion to consolidate their capital and their energies, which they are the best I have been able to reach, after a candid and patient hearing and consideration of the whole case. Counsel will prepare a decree for a special injunction, to issue in accordance with this opinion upon plaintiffs giving bond, with security to be approved by the prothonotary, in $20,000, and each party will pay their own costs.

In the other courts, on Saturday, nothing of interest was done.
