THE TONAWANDA .- The double-turreted THE TONAWANDA. --- The double-turreted United States steamer Tonawands weighs twendy-three hundred tons. The work of moving this "strong arm" of the national defence to the sectional dock progresses very well, under the power of a hydraulio engine. If the weather should be fine to day, this great steamer will be fully placed upon the sections and speedily floated into the Delaware. The process is slow, but a most excellent way of launching a heavy vessel. Large numbers of persons have been in attendance as spectators.

THE POLICE.

THE POLICE. A Sad Picture. Officer Adams has in his care two little children, brother and enter, respectively aged five and six years. The Northern Home for Friendlews Children will receive these strangers to day. The history of this case is one of many affecting illustrations of the misery produced by the hell-engendered rebel-lion. These fittle ones formely lived with their grandfather in Richmond, Va. He was weathy, and owned an extensive saw-mill. The children were nursed in the lap of luxury. Less than a year since the mother was compelled to come North, to escape the tyranny of the oppressor. She brought her two children. She was furnished with funds, such as could be obtained, to support herself with, until her father should arrive. He was expected to follow in a short time, but in the attempt was sized by the rebel government and made to work his mill for their use. The money which the unfortunate woman had rau out in the course of time, and shi-became destitute. Her disappointment crushed her spirits, and finally a rapid consumption set in. A few benevoient ladies becoming aguainted with the distumatances of the case, provided for her her trait is that it would be better to send her to the Pennsylvania Hospital. The lamp of her life is flickering in the socket. Her existence on earth my be reduced to hours. The children, having no ne to properly care for them, were placed into the reody officer Adams, who will find them room orday, probable, in the Mortern Home. The curse of the dying mother upon Jeff Davis will have to be met by him at a tribunal from which the dirst rebel was huide in the enders perdition. The prayers of intant hips will temble.

JEWELERS Jewelers Will and it sufficiently adhesive for their use, as has been proved.
