Among the lew agreeable variaties of camp life was a wedding some time ago. Oant. Thomas N. Thompson, 34th United States Volunteers, a native of Philadelphia, and brother to Capt. Lewis Thomp-son, 2d Dragoons, regular_army, who was captured at Gettysburg, found himself a wife in the person of Bits. Catalina H. Finggi a Spanish widow, and a lady of rare accomplishments. Although long a re-sident of the South, she is now, of course, decidedly Union in sentime INCIDENTS OF THE OLOUSTEE BATTLE. I have noticed extracts from the rebel press which state that in the Oloustee battle a Georgia regiment of regulars was bally cut up, and lost heavily in officers. 'A gentleman from Lake City, of much intelligence and apparent probity, came into our lines, a few days since, who tells us that this slaughter took place in a desperate hand-to-hand engagement with the North Carolina colored troopsored troops This is the first positive intelligence we have reas to what troops were opposed to, then North Carolinians in that encounter, the fiercest that took place during the day. This gentle-man states that the courage of the colored troops is acknowledged, but reluctantly, and that they are well treated. A badly wounded sol-dier met on the battle-field his old master, whom he had not seen for two years. The old master treated him kindly, took him to his own home, and so doubt will try to make him a friend. It is evident the policy of the South is fast changing in regard to colored troops. They have learned that it is far bet, ter by kindness to make them friends than by harsh usage to increase the ennity and widen the gulf between them. The evacuation of Pilatka was made in safety, and everybody and everything were brought away. PICOLATA, April 16, 1864. This place is to be strongly fortified, and, according o present orders and appearances, permanently held A large detail of men is at work constructing an earthwork, in the centre of which is to be built a strong block-house. This fort is to be surrounded by a stockade, and in every way made so strong and heavily armed that but two companies will be required to hold the place. A liberal supply of guns, well posted in a fortified position, seems to be the favorite policy at present. A REBEL SCOUT, or perhaps spy, was captured vesterday, a few miles or perhaps spy, was capsured yesteruay, a tew mines below here, by Lieut. McLevy and the hospital ateward of the 2ist U. He proissed to be on his way home from Finnegan's camp, to see his family, but was really sent out to get what information he could in regard to our forces at Pilatka. By adroit management Colonel Montgomery gos from him the entire object of his mission. Finnegan had been ordered some time ago to attack Pilatka and clean our forces out of there; but after feeling of our lines he concluded it was not safe to make the attempt. For same time past our cavalry had kept Diskinson's scouts at such a distance, that he was not able to get any news. about us. Across the river lives an old man named. Sanches, and though he has taken the oath of allo-Sance once or twice, yet he keeps a sort of infeli-gence office for the benefit of the rebels. The pri-soner's family live in Sanched's vicinity, and his business was to go home, gather up all the news he could, and return. But he will not be likely to see either home or Finnegan's camp very soon, for he is a hard specimen of a rebel. The Mary Benton has just brought us the startling intelligence that the transport General Hunter was blown up this morning, at nine o'clock, by a red in the channel. The calamity oc curred about ha f way between here and Jackson ville, and but a few feet from the spot where the Maple Leaf met the same fate only two weeks ago, The gunboat Norwich and hospital transport Cos-mopolitan had passed the place only a few moments before. How they escaped is a mystery to all here. The Hunter lay at our plat the night before the disaster, and received a cargo of hard bread, forage, army clothing, and camp and garrison equipage. The explosion took place directly under the boller. The boat was badly shattared, and sunk in about The boat was baily shattered, and sink in about twenty feet of water in a few seconds. vigation-steam-escape of the pirate would have been impossible. I trust that our merchants will, by all means, impress upon the Navy Department the necessity of substituting steamers for sailing vessels, and urge the Secretary of the Navy to have a steamer stationed at each of these islands. On the morning of March 1 a light breeze sprung up, and, as we learned that the pirate had shaped his course for this port, ("Santa Oruz,") we got under way. After six days' beating we arrived at this place, and upon our affival we learned that the pirate had been here, ocaled, and went to see the day pre-vious to our arrival, (6th March.)
