The Beginning of the Campaign.

There is no doubt that the Union army has advanced, and that hostilities, at least the ostensible preliminary to a general battle, have begun. The most important part of the news we publish is, that the Army of the Potomac has crossed the Rappahannock river, and that General Grant has overcome the great difficulty that confronted him. The march on Richmond is now begun, and cannot be abandoned for any reason. It has been tested and strengthened. Simultaneously with this intelligence we have a probable rumor that General Smith's forces have occupied West Point, on the Peninsula—a movement first possible to know, and conjecture is useless, whereas Lee, having abandoned his strong position on the Rapidan, will fall back upon the entrenchments which he has made, and it would seem likely that if Richmond is threatened with a heavy attack from the Peninsula that his retreat to Richmond is unavoidable. At all that is now possible, that the first of our decisive battles is very near, and that we are launched into a colossal campaign of which no one can prophesy the end or exaggerate the greatness.

Carthage and Mazzini.

Carthage had a magnificent reception in England, such as, with all his hierarchical prejudices, John Bull would not have vouchsafed to any potentate, be he King or Kaiser, in the world. He was greeted by all classes, degrees, and opinions, greeted him with an earnest, because heartfelt, enthusiasm of admiration, and in London especially, where the great and noble home of a great conqueror, returning home with a prisoner captive to his arms, than a plain, unpretending man, who distinguished the and the instant rank, who in 1801, after he had brought the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies under the empire of Victor Emmanuel, and bears himself with every mark, unspurred by honors and unbroken by suffering, as if he had never done, as far as the world's history records.

It is worth notice, as an instance of popular unconscious inconsistency, that among the guests who were invited to the banquet on the Isle of Wight, (where Mr. CHAS. SEELY, M. P. for Lincoln, placed his residence and its resources at the great Italian's command), one of the most demerited of the nation was present. It was not even until the evening of the 20th, that the name of the man was known. It was not until the evening of the 20th, that the name of the man was known. It was not until the evening of the 20th, that the name of the man was known.

"Driven Out of England."

A letter to the Evening Post, from London, written by an intimate friend of Garibaldi—Mr. KARL BLICK, probably—English states that the General left England last night, and that he is driven out of the country. The letter is written in a tone of indignation, and is full of the most bitter and unparliamentary language. It is a letter which, if it were published, would do more to injure the cause of Italy than any other thing that could be said. It is a letter which, if it were published, would do more to injure the cause of Italy than any other thing that could be said.

Those who are pulled by imaginary horrors, and have become weary of the excitement of fiction, should read the report of the late trial of the "Confederate flag."

LETTER FROM "OCCASIONAL."

WASHINGTON, May 5, 1864. Who doubts that our beloved country will triumph over all her enemies, and that she will emerge from the trial which she is now undergoing, as a more united and more powerful nation than ever before? The answer is, "Yes, she will." The answer is, "Yes, she will."

Rome, where, in February, 1849, he became acknowledged chief of the new Republic, and was elected by the government. A French army, overthrowing the old arrangement, restored the Pope, and Mazzini again had to fly to England, where he has for the most part devoted himself to the publication of his political principles. He has been repeatedly accused of complicity in plots against NAPOLEON III., who, he thinks, is the most formidable foe of the republicanism in Europe. He has been tried and condemned, but he has remained within her confines. No doubt, the demand will be complied with, for Switzerland is feeble against France, as no power has a better right to know that Mazzini is a man of high character, and that he is a man of high character, and that he is a man of high character.

Attempted Raid on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad is not at all interrupted, but it was threatened for a time. A French army, overthrowing the old arrangement, restored the Pope, and Mazzini again had to fly to England, where he has for the most part devoted himself to the publication of his political principles. He has been repeatedly accused of complicity in plots against NAPOLEON III., who, he thinks, is the most formidable foe of the republicanism in Europe.
