THE LATE GENERAL JOIN SEDEWICK.-HORES, true, and kindly was John Sedgwick, and men loved him because he was lovable, not because he courted their affection. When I add that he was often stern to offenders, and was known to punish heavily for transgressions which most commanders looked upon leniently. I do not think it necessary to say that he was loved in spite of his severity, for I have always found, and I believe the rule is general, that soldiers are fond of the commander, be he captain or gene-ral, who compels their obedience. All the country knows that General Sedgwick was the most resolute of soldiers-distinguished especially for his indomi-table purpose in battle. I suppose he had more qualities in common with Grant than any other general. It was a matter of common regret in the army that he could not be induced to accept its chief command, which, it is well known, was twice offored him. Both officers and soldiers, I think, would have trusted him more than they could any one else. He was a man of large military views-not a showy leader, not impetuous; but the general who would have taken his army into battle with the most per-fect calmonos, and have held its line steady as Gib-raltar against the headlong assaults of Lee. Gene-ral Wadsworth, who was an unusually good judge of men and of military enpecity, said to me, just after the battle of Chancellorsville, that the best hope of the army lay in persuading. Sedgwick to take command; that he considered him the general of the broadest thiltary knowledge and ability that the army contained. Alns ! that to-day the army is bereft of both.-Cor.  ATEMPT TO BURAK THE EXEMPT'S LINES— WADNSG TO THE CHARGE.
 About one in the afternoon an attempt was made to break the centre of the comprise lines, or a least to recapture his outer works. General Judah's di-trision of Schofield's corps, and Nowton's division of Howard's corps, moving over comparatively level ground, succeeded, after a desportie continue to hold this, the commond, succeeded, after a desportie continue to hold this, but our own line being somewhat advanced, our ar-ticles from occupying it. Further to our right was were not so fortunate. Portions of Junesto commond, which, it is well known, was twice offered in motion of the built's division of planer's corps, in attempting to charge the rebels in front, were completed to throw themselves down an intest perpendicular bank and wade a creek waist deep, in mathempting to charge the rebels in front, were from the robel works.
