WEDNESDAY, JUNE 29, 1864. ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

The Operations Before Petersburg on the 22d, 28d, 24th, and 25th-Position of Our Army-Foster, Repels an Assault-Disaster to the Vermout Brigade—Sheridan's Battle—The 2d Corps Nearer the Enemy-Mysterious Movements of the Rebels—The Artillery At-tack on the 18th Corps. POSITION OF OUR ARMY.

Our lines extend from above Petersburg on the right, around that place across the Jerusalem plank road, crossing it about two miles below the city, and from thence gradually approaching the Weldon Railroad. The left is probably about five and a half miles from Petersburg. THE ASSAULT ON FOSTER.

On the night of the 22d the enemy thought to dislodge General Fester from his position on the north side of the James opposite Jones' Neck. They moved down upon him. He moved out upon them, made a bayonent charge, drove them away, and then opened his batteries upon them. The navy taking the cue, threw mangling machines, in the shape of 15-inch shell, at them. This caused them to retire still further. This afternoon the rebols were impressed with the idea that we had remained quiet long enough, and that it was their bounden duty to disturb that quiet. Sixteen guus opened on the line, and sent shell flying in all directions with an utter disregard of life—so much so that not one was taken, nor was anyone injured. The look-out tower also annoyed them in the morning, and they shelled that, much to the disguest of the 1st New York Mounted Rifles, into whose camp most of these missiles fell—Tribune. THE VERMONT BRIGADE OVERWHELMED. On the 23d the Vermont brigade of the 18th Dividon, 6th Corps, advanced upon the Weldon railroad, and obtained possession of it, with very little effort or loss, but were attacked immediately by an overwhelming rebel force, and repulsed before any upport could reach them. Their loss was severe. The enemy seem to have anticipated the movement, and arranged their lines to completely surround the whole brigade. This accounts for the very heavy loss in prisoners that they are said to have suffered SHERIDAN'S CAVALRY—THE BATTLE ON THE JAMES RIVER. The attack on Sheridan on the 24th, while marching from White House to James river, was a very determined and bloody affair. The enemy knew of his presence at-White House, suspected his intention of marching across to the James, and made what they considered ample arrangements to capture his gups, trains, and most of his command. The full details of the affair have not yet transpired, but it is known that the enemy fell upon the brigade composing the rear guard with great fury, and at first threw them into much confusion.

They immediately rallied to cover the movement of the train, and held the enemy's cavalry and in-fantry in clock until the balance of the command could be brought to their support, when a general battle ensued between our mounted and dismounted cavalry and the cavalry, infantry, and artillery on the part of the enemy. Sheridan acted on the de-fonsive, and repelled several of the most desperate assaults that could possibly be made. His light artillery was brought into play, and was dmirably served. The fighting was at short range, and grape and canister were used with terrible ofect. At the end of the conflict he succeeded in beating them of, though greatly superior in number, and resumed his march to James river without the loss of a guittor a wagon.

The wagon tain alone was six miles in length, which, added to our force of cavalry, comprising some six thousand horsemen, made a line of about twenty miles, marching two abreast. To accomolish this with a large force of rebels in the rear. required great skill and coolness on the part of General Sheridan, and the officers and men under his command; but with the aid of the gunboats the affair was accomplished, with a loss in killed, ADVANCE OF THE SECOND CORPS-REBEL WORKS OCCUPIED-MYSTERIOUS MOVE-MENTS OF THE REBELS. Our lines were to-day (June 21) advanced about half a mile, and our troops now occupy the breast-works held by the enemy last night, and evacuated by him early this morning.

The movements of the rebels have been of a mysterious character of late, and it is not yet definitely ascertained what they are driving at. Yesterday A. P. Hill's and Longstreet's forces were in our front, but by observations made by the Signal Corps it is evident that a general movement to our left has been going on to-day. Whether contemplating a flank movement by us in that direction or designing one himself, the enemy has certainly had a busy day of it, which, up to this hour (midnight), has eventuateu in no demonstration of importance, though we have been and are quite prepared for such, while quietly resting on our arms.

The quiet is most acceptable to our troops, inas-much as the weather to-day, as yesterday, has been the most sultry and oppressive of the season, and coupled with the clouds of dust which hang over every road and nathway, combine to make it as uncomfortable as possible. Portions of the 5th and 6th Corns have, however, been active in managuring might be made by the enemy, either on our flank or

As mentioned in my last despatch, Beauregard's forces are again in our immediate front. A portion of the Richmond City Guard were to-day taken prisoners. They are decidedly superior to the general soners. They are decadedly superior to the general run of rebel captures, and appear much as our own city militia do in point of dress and gentlemanly bearing. They evidently regarded their capture as a part of the play in which they had not engaged to THE TERRIFIC ARTILLERY ATTACK ON GEN.

About 7 A. M. on June 25th several rebel batteries on the Bermuda Hundred side of the river simultaneously opened fire from the heights upon the troops in the level land immediately in front of Petersburg. Sliells of immense size were thrown at the rate of one every two seconds all along our works, shricking awfully through the air and bursting with a noise like thunder everywhere. Seldom has such an angry fire been heard. Having few pieces of artillery which could cope with those used by the enemy, there was no alternative for General Smith but to set these at work and quietly wait until the fury of the rebels should ex-haust itself. Directing his infantry to remain well covered in their entrenchments, which are strong and well protected by traverses against an enfilading attack, as this mainly was, he got about welve long-range pieces in position, and for an hour and a half the battle went on. The enemy had at east forty pieces in operation against our twelve. Singularly, however, in spite of the rapidity and terribleness of the firing, very little injury was done to our men. Several shells burst plumply in the idst of the tents at General Smith's headquarters and fragments, in one or two instances, came disagreeably near the staff officers. One of these behind a breastwork, scattering and breaking and bending them, sending one piece high into the air, where it turned end for end and came down with such force that the bayonet was driven its full length into the soil. Presently the rebels tire of this exhaustive work and essay an infantry charge upon our advanced line of rifle pits, supposing, tless, that our troops must be dreadfully cut up and demoralized by their firing. They reckon without their host. Our men have escaped infurv. and feel splendidly at the impunity with which they have received the shower of iron. Therefore, they are ready to meet anything that comes, and feel insulted almost at the paltry numbers that are now rushing over the eat-field in front of them, loudly beering, or rather howling, as is the rebel custom, while with charged bayonets they make the onset. The thin line of skirmishers in advance of the breastworks raise themselves from their rude pits and deliver a feeble and scattering fire, which stops the progress of a few of the rebels.

The rest advance steadily, regardless of their fallen comrades, passing the pits, and leaving many of our skirmishers prisoners behind them. They do not know the fate which is to meet them in an instant more. Behind the high wall of earth which they are rushing upon so bravely and with confident yells, there are thousands of stout-hearted Union soldiers who have determined not to throw away a single shot. The rebels are within twenty yards of the breastwork. A second more and the gallant men of Colonel Henry's and Colonel Cullen's origades, of Stannard's division, fringe the inner side of the parapet, and a sheet of fire and smoke, covering entirely the robel line, bursts out with a single clash, withering the graybacks like leaves are withered by fire. The survivors crouched at full length among the thick growth of oats. Not a man of them attempted to return, but lay as still as he could among his bleeding dead and wounded comrades. It was an easy matter now to take the living. Our men crowded upon the parapet and alled upon them to surrender, pointing the demand with levelled muskets. In this way 160 prisoners were captured unwounded. A large proportion were boys, and several, not more than eighteen years had nevertheless been three years in service ARMY OF THE TENNESSEE. I can never forget the peculiar impression photographed upon my mind by the swelling of this historical anthem of Freedom's first battle, as it grandly sailed over Pine Mountain. My reverie was soon disturbed by the sudden roar of many hatteries belching out their savage peals with fearful rapidity from both sides, and for several minutes quite an artillery duel was induged in, interspersed with short rolls of musiketry. It was curious to watch the rebel guns, as the smoke fazily curied from the cannon's mouth, while the solid shot whizzed and shells shricked over our breastworks.

The subjoined letter from John B. Floyd'to ex-The subjoined letter from John B. Floyd of the President Tyler has been sent to us by Captain Charles S. Greene, of the fist Pennsylvania Regiment. It was found a few days ago, by one of this bave officer's men, near Petersburg. The original can be seen at this office. It will be found to be brave officer's men, near Petersburg. The original can be seen at this office. It will be found to be a very important document in the history of the war. All independent-minded persons will admit that the tone of painful indignation with which Floyd repudiates the charge of embezzling the "Indian Bonds" is not without its honesty; and, as a consequence, his accusation of deliberate perjury against the authors of the impeachment cannot but bring disgrace on certain honry, politicians. But circumspection should be used in crediting the statements of an arch traitor. It should be remembered, however, that the impeachment for embezzlement fell to the ground from the want of decent proof to sustain it; and generally speaking, more confidence is to be placed in the words of arch traitors than in those of hoary-headed politicians. Floyd alleges his suspicion that the 'Cabinet which he left urged on his accusers, in order to appease the political malice of the latter. If the suspicion was well founded, what can be thought of the honor of that Cabinet ! That it had not the first instinct of honor. Buchanan and his Cabinet must clear themselves of this insinuation, for the accuser was one of them. The letter makes it clear what its author did to spur on rebellion. But who is the Mr.-Hughes spoken of in the opening paragraph? Is it Frank Hughes, of Pottsville, or his nephew, John Hughes? We commend a careful perusal of the letter. We give it literatim et punctuation.

ABINGDON, Va., Feb. 8, 1861.

EX-PRESIDENT JOHN TYLER—My Dear Sir: I cannot express to you my grateful thanks for your kind letter. I would have answered it sooner, but that I thought it probable I might see you in Washington before this time; upon reflection I thought it best to remain here for a few days until I could learn through Mr. Hughes the exact state of affairs in the city.

through Mr. Hughes the exact state of attairs in the city.

I doubt whether there ever was in any country, at any period of history, a more monstrous, malignant, and indefensible proceeding than this against me. The presentment and indictment rest upon the boldest perjury, if any facts have been prefended as the foundation of their proceedings, and if not, then the precedent of the proceeding criminally against an officer or a man, to avenge a political act, is altogether the most dangerous part that has transpired. I was fully aware of the perilous path upon which I embarked when I quit Mr. Buchanan's Cabinet. I knew my course was obliged to bring to a dead halt the subtle policy which was quietly preparing I knew my course was obliged to bring to a dead halt the subtle policy which was quietly preparing for coercing the South into submission, or that it would precipitate the catastrophe so as to unite and arouse the whole South instantly to a sense of their danger. In either event I saw plainly enough that no human effort would be spared to inflict venge-ance upon me. I had not, to be sure, thought of its taking the shape of a universal prosecution—but I would not have been deterred from the course I took even by the certain prospect of death itself.

I have the consolation to believe that my course roused the South to take those measures of self-defence in seizing upon the forts, &c., which, if delayed a short time longer, could not have been accomplished but with immense sacrifice of I fig and money. Individually, I dery the malice which pursues me, and am content to allow the developments of the future to justify me in the minds of all fairminded people.

of the little to justify me in the minus of at lair-minded people.

One of the most painful accompaniments of these proceedings to me, is a suspicion which I cannot repress, that the Cabinet has had something to do in urging this on. They are obliged to show their fealty and zeal for their new Abolition allies by offering them a sacrifice of one who had done so much to snatch the prey from their jaws. It would be an inexpressible source of satisfaction to me to know that those whose opinions I value understood the motives which prompt the action against me, and understood also the causes which have led to them. I would esteem it a great favor to hear from you.

With sentiments of the highest esteem and regard,

Lam, very sincerely, your friend,

JOHN B. FLOYD.

"AN ENGLISH OPINION OF GENERAL GRANT."-The London Daily Telegraph, edited by Thornton Hunt, a man who during the present rebellion has omitted no opportunity to manifest his hostility to the Federal Government, speaks as follows of General Grant, whom the writer a year ago considered as inferior in military capacity:

No vulgar man, no mere idol of the hour, is this Ulysses Grant, who by sheer hard work and honest fighting has raised himself from a postition of obscurity to one of almost unlimited command—who has, if some reports concerning him be true, achieved that rarest of all victories, a mastery over himself and his desires—and who. (a virtue not often possessed by the military celebrities of the United States) is still modest and unassuming. Nor has he yet in any way compromised the reputation which he worthily earned, alike by honorable service in the field and by exemplary civic conduct. A man of merely ordinary calibre would scarcely have dared to accept the glorious but terrible responsibility which Grant has quietly taken upon himself, as became a good soldier who was bound to fear no peril, olther material or moral, in his country's cause. He was prudent as well as bold; the mere splender of the office did not seduce him; and only on his own terms, which were wise and well considered, would he consent to assume supreme command. He would submit to no dictation from the amateur Aulic councillors of Washington; holding himself responsible for the issue of the campaign, he would not allow it to be prejudiced by any undue publicity being given to his plans; he kept his own counsel, allowed the gossips to tak as they liked, and at length, strong in the confidence of his troops, and with the whole enthusiasm of the North to back him, he set forth upon the great march from which he had determined never to return except in triumph.

Nor can it be dealed that already he has done much. Pushing doggedly onwards, with the fierce resolution of a man who is intensely in earnest, he has fought his way inch by inch into the very heart of Virginia; and a victory, so close is now his army to Richmond, would probably place that capital in his hands. It is impossible to read the account of his opera o the Federal Government, speaks as follows of General Grant, whom the writer a year ago con-garts, is with this stern and vallant captain some-thing more; it means something not to be morely talked about, but to be done; and if the whole strength of the North, entrusted to strong and ca-pable hands, can do it, that purpose will be

NORVOLK PREFERS GENERAL BUTLER'S GO-NORFOLK PREFERS GENERAL BUTLER'S GOVERNMENT TO GOVERNOR PIERFORT'S.—"Novor before has a commander of a department been been so honered as was General Butler yesterday, by the citizens of Norfolk. In the face of the written standers of Pierpont, the verbal back-biting of civil office-holders, and the perjury and conspiracy of whisky-smugglers, the people went to the polls, and decided by a vote of 314 to 16 that they preferred the military government, as administered by General Butler and General Subpley, to that of the dishonest and corrupt so-called 'restored Government' of Pierpont and Brooks. This soems to us a most thorough vindication of General Butler and his administration in the Department of Virginia and North Carolina."—Norfolk Regime, Saturday. WATER ON FIRE.—The following exciting event, according to a correspondent, took place recently in Baltimore harbor: Our harbor has been on fire for the last twenty-four hours, literally on fire. The surface of the water for thousands of square yards has been a perfect flame, caused by the destruction of the Italian ship Juliana, which took fire will lying at the wharf and loading with petroleum. She lad on board one thousand eight hundred barrels, and had to be towed over to the opposite side of the basin to save the surrounding property. As the barrels would burst, the oil spread over the water in a flame.

REEL PRISONERS AT POINT LOOKOUT.—Over two thousand rebell prisoners have arrived at the Point during the pust ten days. Among the lot area large number captured at Petersturg and belonging to Beauregard's command. These men, previous to their entering the camp, are closely examined, and all extra clothing, watches, and money are taken from them by the provost marshal, who keeps an exact account, and when they depart the money, watches, &c., ard returned. Some rather singular eases present themselves to be examined. Some have gold and notes hidden under their hair; some sewed up under the lining of their clothing; some in the bottom of their specie in the lining of their boot-tops, but the vigilant eye of Lieut. Phillips and his corps of detectives soon show its existence, and the gold comes forth. One knapsack lately examined contained two full suits of female apparel and some baby clothing, and when the same was brought to light it caused some merriment among his comrales, who had quite a laugh at his expense. FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL.

The committee of the Chamber of Commerce of New The committee of the Chamber of Commerce of New York, who were appointed at the recent meeting of merchants in that city to visit Washington for the purpose of securing a repeal of the Gold Bill, have returned. The Journal of Commerce says that the committee were assured by the Secretary of the Treasury that there was no intention on the part of the Government to embarrass the operations of legitimate business. The Government had been told that it could check peculation without restricting or interfering with deavor to accomplish that object. What effect the visit of the committee will have it is impossible to tell. If the act were now introduced it would not secure, the committee report, a majority vote in both houses. The act, remarks the journal above quoted, will doubtless be either modified or repealed, and doubtiess he either modified or repeated, and that is all which can be safely affirmed. In the meantime, there was a wide difference of opinion as to the extent of the prohibition as the act now stands. Mr. Chase was decided in his opinion that foreign exchange could be sold for gold or a certified bank cheek, and that it was legal under the act to stell any merchandise for gold. Mr. Hooper hesitated in regard to these points, and thought that certified checks could not be taken for exchange without vio-lating the law. The decision of Mr. Chase in the particulars above quoted, if generally accepted as the law, will afford a great relief to the public mind. The rapid fluctuations in currency, as represented by the change in quotations for gold, made it difficult for merchants and others to sell produce or merchandise for paper, and they were afraid to sell for gold. It is now decided, as Mr. Chase asserts, that any and all mercantile transactions may be made on a gold basis, and the coin be taken in payment, a serious obstacle in the way of business will be at once removed.
