hang clothes to dry? No enemies ap-proach the great mouldering gates: only at morn and even the cows come lowing past them, the village maidens chatter mer-rily round the fountains, and babble like the ever voluble stream that flows under the old walls. The schoolboys, with book and satchel, in smart uniforms, march up to the gymnasium, and return thence at their stated time. There is one coffeehouse in the town, and I see one old gen-tleman goes to it. There are shops with no customers seemingly, and the lazy tradesmen look out of their little windows at the simple stranger sauntering by. There is a stall with baskets of queer little black grapes and apples, and a pretty brisk trade with half a dozen urchins standing round. But beyond this, there is scarce any talk or movement in the street.

There's nobody at the book-shop. "If you will have the goodness to come again in an hour," says the banker, with his mouth-ful of dinner at one o'clock, "you can
