Workmen's Dwellings.—In some respects the most remarkable of the model lodging-houses in London are those which have been due to the liberality of Miss Burdett Coutts and Mr. Peabody. The munificence of the lady here named is well known to all who have interested themselves in the welfare of the people, especially in crowded localities. In a district about half-a mile northeast of Shoreditch Church is Columbia Square, a name given by Miss Burdett Coutts to the handsomest cluster of workmen's buildings litherto erected in the metropolis. Four clusters or blocks of buildings enclose the four sides of an open quadrangle, and have two frontages—one toward the quadrangle, and have two frontages—one toward the quadrangle, and contour blocks are known respectively as Columbia Square, east, west, north, and south. Each block is of great length, five stories high, and fitted with baths, wash-houses, club-rooms, and numerous appliances conductive to health, cleanliness, and comfort. There are 390 rooms for 133 families. In the centre of the quadrangle is an elegant cross or architectural tower, bearing a few inscriptions; and pliances conductive to health, cleanliness, and comiort. There are 300 rooms for 133 families. In the centre of the quadrangle is an elegant cross or architectural tower, bearing a few inscriptions; and northward of the cluster, separated from it only by a pleasant falsed terrace, is a commodition new church, with echool and parsonage. The rents average about two shillings (lifty cents) per room (a standard very extensively adopted in such buildings), and the tenements are eagerly sought for.

Still more recently another cluster has been built, somewhat southward of the last, and in the thickly-populated district of Spitalfields. The reader will remember that Wr. Peabody, an American morchant who had made as large fortune in England, some time ago made over the noble sum of ahundred and fifty thousand pounds sterling to trustees, to be applied as they might think best for the benefit of the poor of Londom. As the gift was a very unusual one, (the donor being still alive), so is the duty of the trustees a delicate one; for they have to choose between many conflicting modes of benefitting the poor of So great a metropolis; and are inundated with applications from committees and secretaries of institutions. The trustees determined that one of their first enterprises should be the erection of a group of loughing houses to assist in putting to the test of experience the problem of making such places self-paying. A site was purchased, at the junction of White Lion street with Commercial street, Spitalfields, and on this site a handsome structure has lately been opened. The building has two main fronts, of two hundred and fifteen and one hundred and forty feet respectively, domestic Gothic in their architecture; and decidedly an ornament in a neighborhood where handsome buildings are "few and far between." A peculiarity in this structure is that the basement ground floor and first floor are built as shops, store-rooms, and dwelling-rooms for the shopkeepers; irrespective of the tenements (of two or three rooms each) o

AND TAKES REFUGE ON AN ISLAND—HIS DEATH FROM STARVATION ALMOST INEVITABLE.

It has been known that Farini, the funambulist, who several years ago was Blöndin's rival on the tight rope at Nisgara Falls, was making preparations to ford the rapids above the American Fall on a pair of iron stilts, contrived for the purpose. The exhibition was to have come off on the 15th. Early-yesterday morning, we learn, the fool-hardy man went out to rehearse the dangerous feat. He succeeded in getting more than half way across, at a point between the falls and the Goat Island bridge, when one of his stilts broke or gave way, and he was instantly in the rapids. Fortunately the place of his accident was directly above Robinson's Island, a small piece of wooded land which lies to the right of Luna-Island and very near the brink of the American fall. He succeeded in struggling to the shore, of this Island, and dragged himself from the water. He had apparently sustained a painful injury in one of his limbs. The poor man was soon discovered sitting very composedly on a log at the edge of the island. A large and not very sympathizing crowd collected on the Goat Island bridge and elsewhere, but up to yesterdey afternoon not an effort had been made to rescue the unfortunale man. In face, our informant tells us that in a few hours public curiosity seemed to have sated itself, and scarcely any excitement was yesterdsy afternoon not an effort had been made to rescue the unfortunate man. In face, our informant tells us that in a few hours public curiosity seemed to have sated itself, and scarcely any excitement was visible. Farin'rs frightful perch is about 800 or 1,000 feet below the bridge before spoken of, and undoubtedly a pope could be floated to him, and thereby a cable perhaps be swung, by which, if the man is not too much examined of injured he might be able to effect an escape. It is, feared, however, that before anything is done he will be incapable, from lack of flood and nerveus excitement, to help himself. At present he can be distinctly descried, cool enough apparently, but making not the slightest effort to attract attention or signal for relief. He is in tights and bareheaded, and is seen frequently to rub and press his wounded limb. A more frightful predicament than he is in could not easily be conceived. We understand that some persons suppose Farint to be playing a practical joke, or to be practicing an advertising dodge. It is scarcely possible that this can be the case, or that any such felicitous results can come from such a desperate koking state of things.—Bullialo Courier, 9th.

The END OF A PIONIC.—The Baltimore Sun, of Monday, says:

"It has heretofore been stated that a 'pienic', party, numbering twenty-six persons, were arrosted by the military-authorities in Delaware some days ago, and brought to this city and contined in Fort McHenry. The pienic was held in McCrone's Woods, a grove near Hare's Corner, New Castle county, for the purpose of obtaining means to procure comforts for the rebel prisonors in Fort Delaware. It is alleged that the names of many of the managers of the pienic party had been placed on the cards of invitation without their knowledge or consent, and also that application had been made to the military authorities of Delaware for permission to hold the pienic, but assent had neither been given nor withheld. Presuming, therefore, there would be no objection, the party was gotten up. A number of Delaware ladies were also actively engaged in it—and wore really, it is said, the projectors thereof.

"The names of the 'pieniclans' arrested and im-it—and were really, it is said, the projectors thereof.

"The names of the 'picnicians' arrested and imprisoned in Fort McHenry are as follows: John Cochran, Charles Ash, John Smalley, Joseph L. Baldwin, Charles Cannon, R. B. Cochran, E. B. Jefferson, John Rochey, Douglas McCoy, George White, Fieldner Price, Isaac Grubb, George P. McCrone, E. P. Cochran, R. Rankin, Jas. McCrone, Charles A. Jum, J. Frank Hazel, Samuel Danforth, W. L. Weir, 'Wm. H. Cann, W. W. Stroup, Philip Marvel, Thomas M. Ogle, Delaware Davis, Dr. Merritt. One of them was released soon after the arrest, leaving twenty-five in custody. They are mostly wealthy farmers, including one physician, and several of other professions.

"The agreeable intelligence was communicated to the, party on Saturday morning that their release had been procured, and they were ascording: Liberated by General Wallace unconditionally. They all dined at Barnum's Hotel, had a particularly good time of it, and went home in the afterneon with more cheering anticipations than when coming to Baltimore under military surveillance. John Wills was engaged as counsel for the entire party, together with some influential friends of theirs from Delaware." were not allowed to have a private burying ground

LIBERTY OF CONSCIENCE IN ALGERIA.-A judgment of considerable importance has just been given in a trial before the Disciplinary Council of Tiemcon, in Algeria. "The question was whether Jewish and Protestant national guards in the colony could be forced to take part in Oatholic religious ceremonies. Sixty men belonging to the National Guard or militia of Tiemcen, among whom were a Protestant and some Jews, were recently ordered to ioin in the some Jews, were recently ordered to join in the procession of the Fete Dieu. The Protestant and several of the Jews refused to obey, considering the command an outrage on their liberty of conscience; the others less scrupulous, attended, but declined to kneel at the moment of the raising of the host. The officer in command drove the latter from the ranks, but the Protestants and the Jews, who had not responded to the summens were brought before a military court and condemned, notwitustanding their protests. One, however, a lew, named Haim Ganancia, obtained a new trial, and this time confided his defence to an advocate. The latter showed that in the decree of the 9th of November, 1855, in which the duties of the scort of processions, and that, besides; out ofdoor religious celebrations in Algerian town are illegal, according to article 45 of the Concordat, which declares that "no ceremony shall take place outside the edifices consecrated to Oatholic worship in towns where there are buildings consecrated to other sects." The trimpal—after deliberating, de-

The tripunal after deliberating, declared that the service of following the procession not being necessary for the maintenance of order and public safety, the Jew, Haim Ganancia, was not bound to take part in it, and consequently quished the judgment previously given against alm.

CENERAL NEWS.

A CHINESE WEDDING IN HIGH LIPE.—Sacramento street, about Kearney, has just been all agog at night. Old John, young John, and Johne, were round and lively; crackers were blazing like Fourth of July, or Chinese New Year's, and to the most cursory observer it was evident that something unusual was goine on among the representatives of the Celestial Empire in San Francisco. On inquiry; we learned that the cause of all this unwonted rejoicing and excitement was the marriage of Mr. Tom Quan, of the firm of Hong, Quan, & Co.; to Miss Lay, Nine, a little footed daugnter of one of the first families of China, who arrived by the Corneligad aday or two since. The bride was sent out by her parents, who, as it is usual in such cases, negotiated the match, and never saw her present liege lord until last night, or even caught a glimpse of the outside barbarian city in which she is hereafter to reside, having been brought ashore in a covered chair, and conveyed to her apartments with the greatest precautions against her seeing or being; seen by anybody. The wedding ceremony was performed according to the Chinese custom, and also by a magistrate according to the statutes of the State of California. The Chinese merchants of the city furnished a sumptunes emerchants of the city furnished as sumptunes emerchants of the city furnished as sumptunes of guests sat down, and the couple were the recipients of numerous presents from the friends of the bridegroom. The ceremonies terminated in a fire-crecker blow-out, a la mode de Chine. This is said to be the second or third marriage of the higher mercantile class of Chinese which has ever taken place in California. The bride has artificially dwarfed feet; and is said to be a beauty, according to the definition of the term generally accepted in Mongolian lands.—San Francisco Allo.

dwarfed feet, and is said to be a beauty, according to the definition of the term generally accepted in Mongolian lands.—San Francisco Alla.

An Awkward Predicament,—We understand that a well-known citizen of Boston. recently found himself in tather an awkward predicament, the circimstances of which were as follows: It seems that he went up to Tremont Temple to see Norwood the Fakir, and, as he was chiefly interested in the distribution of presents, and was also somewhat fatigued by the labors of the day, he stretched himself on a back seat and was soon in the land of Nod, probably enjoying visions of household utensits, pigs, jewelry, and articles of virtu, created in a twinkling by the happy Fakir to be presented to the audience. The entertainment proceeded, the Eakir distributed his presents, and still the prominent citizen slept on, and, the audience having departed, the lights were extinguished and the Temple was closed. In the silent watches of the night, a peaceful and harmonious couple occupying a room in the Parker House, adjacent to the Temple, were startled from their virtuons slumber by the voice of one in desperate circumstances, which sounded very near their window. They peered out between the ourtains, when they saw across a narrow chasm of cimmerian darkness, and against a window in the building opposite—the Temple—the outlines of a human form. It was a strange spectacle for the hour, and might well suggest the idea that the ghost of some defunct lecturer, or showman, or preacher, had revisited the glimpses of the moon. But the astonished couple soon found that if a ghest at all, it was disposed to be frank and communicative, being entirely lacking in that reticence usually ascribed to disembodied spirits. They asked what was the trouble, and the voice was again.—I am a citizen of Boston—I know the circumstances are suspicious, but I am honest. I have been locked into Tremont Temple, where I came last evening to attend the entertaimment of the Fakir." His declarations were allowed, and as it was departed, vehemently expressing his gratitude, and earnestly declaring that he was an honest man and a gentleman.

A MADMAN:—Quite a commotion was created in the office of.—Colonel Woolley; in Baltimore, on Monday, caused by a soldier named Johnson, a member of the lat Regiment Connecticut Cavalry, it appears that about one year ago, while at Fairfax Court-House, he was bitten by a dog suffering from hydrophobie, but by skilful treatment he was in a few weeks thought cured. Yesterday Johnson was arrested by a guard on the street, clarged with being drunk. He was taken to the military head-quarters, and while in a room occupied by the clerks he began foaming at the mouth, and uttered sounds resembling the barking of a dog. The clerks and several officers, who were in the room at the time, instantly vacated the place, and succeeded in locking the madman in the room. His paroxysms were frightful to behold, and it was with great difficulty that he could be secured. After being bound, he was removed to the Camden-street Hospital, where he was again seized with a fit. During his struggles, a sergeant of the guard was bit on the small finger of the left hand by Johnson, and to prevent serious consequences the finger was immediately amputated by the surgeon in attendance at the hospital.

A SUBSTITUTE BROKER SOLD.—The employees and habitues of the provost marshal's office, says the Troy Whig, were considerably amused a day of two since at the manner in which a substitute broker was victimized by his intended victim. Broker became acquainted with a countryman who has some notion about enlistment: "Oh, you're my man—I can pocket $200 or $300 on you," muttered the joyous broker, at the same time inviting Greeny to "take a walk and see the town." Greeny accepted, and off the two started. They imbibed freely, in inct, very freely. Broker was anxious to have Greeny was prowing sober. Result: Greeny and while Greeny was prowing sober. Serunt office, had him examined, was accepted and sworn in as a substitute I Greeny pocketed

A LITTLE Bir of History.—By reference, says the Troy Times, to the Constitutions of New York, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, formed before the date of the Constitution of the United States and in force at its adoption, and also to the Constitutions of Georgia and Pennsylvania, formed soon afterwards, it appears that in respect to the qualification of electors for the most numerous branches of the State Legislatures, there was no destinction on account of color in those nine States. Connecticut and Rhode Island, being under the old royal charters, could have none. South Carolina, by its Constitution of 1776, allowed negroes to vote, but in 1778 the privilege was restricted to every "white man," &c. In Delaware, by act of February 3, 1787, smancipated slaves and their issue were debarred "the privilege of voting avelections or being elected." And even this seems to have been a violation of the letter of the Constitution of the State. It is well known; among intelligent men, that the practice of admitting free men of color to vote obtained universally at first among all of the original "old thirteen." In Virginia negroes woted side by side with white men until 1830!

THE FRENCH ACADEMY.—The Paris corresponent of the London Daily News says: ent of the London Daily News says:

"Yesterday (July 21) was one of the annual field days at the French Academy. It was the day of the distribution of the prizes of virtue, and Prince Albert de Broglie was charged with presenting the report. It is a long document, justifying the gifts delivered in compliance with the bequest of M. de Montyon, once a subject of pleasantry, but which the prince shows is now recognized as a useful institution. He ingeniously reminds his hearers that if publicity is now the condition of all life, too often lighting up the darkest features of human nature, it is well also that there should be a bedy whose honorable task is to say out and prolife, too oiten lighting up the darkest features of human nature, its well also that there should be a body whose honorable task is to spy out and proclaim to the world the not rare acts of virtue which are the fair-side of humanity.

"M. de' Villemain, the greatest authority in French literature, and perpetual secretary of the Academy, had opened the sitting with his report on the works offered for the concursus, of which the Subject was the 'Eulogium of Chateaubriand.' He took occasion to explain the reason for which the Bordin prize was not awarded to M. Taine's 'History of English Literature,' a decision which caused at the time a sensation of general dissatisfaction among literary men. It is rarely that the Academy thus condescends to excuse itself to public opinion. Perhaps in future years it may learn to take it into consideration before pronouncing its decision. The sudience, as is natural at this season, and with a temperature above ninety degrees, was limited in number, and the academicians themselves were for the most part absent. The Compte de Flanders, second son of King Leopold, was present."

— The character of that Duke of Normandy, styled Robert the Devil, the subject of the celebrated Robert the Devil, the subject of the c opera, is rescued from much obloquy by Sir Francis Palgrave, in a late history. Though exuberantly hilerious, he was humane, generous, and kind-

A Romantic Story—A Private Fails Heir to a Fortune.

The Detroit Free Press tells the following giory:

"At the first battle of Buil Rep there was a soldler by the name of Wilson, who, the many others on that memorable occasion, straggled a way from his semmand. After walking, or rather, running for several hours, he became very much fatigued, and, after taking good precautions that there were now-bels either within sound or sight, he lay down to sleep by the side of a fence, and slopt sweetly axis soundly during the night. Liste in the morning, when the sun was near midmon he woke to find himself in a strange land, and perhaps among the butterest enember of the country. But the demand of hunger from silenced the voice of grudence and caution. Seeing a mansion on the hill in the detrance, surrounded by parks and meadows; orchards and evergreens, artificial fountains, and natural streams of clear running water; in fact, everything to show that it was one of the first class old Virginia; planter, tired, with a wear step and a fainting, famishing heart, knocked at the door of the mansion. He was cordially received, for the old Virginia planter, was faithful among, the fatthful few. He remained long enough to recruit his washed energies and get information as to the most direct, route to Washington: But the name of the young soldier was not forgotten by the planter, may his manly bearing and genial temperament. A letter from Cairo of the 14th May gives the fol lowing account of the departure from that city of the caravan which annually carries to Mecca the carpet intended to cover the tomb of the Prophet:
At eight in the morning of the 12th the Viceroy, attended by all his chief functionaries, repaired to far-a-Meidan, whence the procession was to start. At a signal given by his Highners, the citadel fired a salute and the caravan began its march. All the streets through which it was to pass were strewn with palm branches, the houses decorated with rich carpets, and fings and streamers of all kinds. The crowd was immense. The procession was headed by a numerous band of musicians, followed by the trade corporations, represented by their schieks in green or red turbans, such carrying the banner distinctive of his profession.

Next came a number of athletes, naked to the waiet, and abundantly anoluted with oil; then a host of jugglers, some of whom executed all sorts of feats with swords and pites, while others brandished snakes about their heads, pretending to eat them. Next came two regiments of infantry and two squadrons of cavairy. After a short interval, a number of camels followed, bearing the litter of the commandant of the caravan and the coffer containing the money to pay the expenses of the journey. Behind these advanced another camel carrying carpet intended to cover the tomb of the Prophet:

commandant of the caravan and the coffer containing the money to pay the expenses of the journey. Behind these advanced another camel carrying a santon, or Mussulman frier, well known to every resident in Cairo, who always accompanies the caravan naked to the waist and with no covering on his head except his long black hair. In this state he every year takes this long journey across the Desert without any change of costume.

After him came a number of camels, bearing water and provisions; then a multitude of schieks, repeating verses from the Koran, and scattering copies of them to be serambled for by the crowd. Next followed the Prefector Police, Hassein Pacha, peating verses from the Koran, and scattering copies of them to be scrambled for by the crowd. Next followed the Prefectof Police, Hassein Pacha, with the two chiefs of the caravan on each side of him, preceding the dromedary which bore the holy carpet, made of green velvet, almost covered with texts of the Koran embroidered in gold and silver. It was supported at the four corners by staves with gilt pite heads; while the middle, which was in the shape of a dome, was surmounted by a gold croscent. The dromedary was gorgeously caparisoned, being almost covered with rich India shawls, and bearing a plume of ostrich feathers on his head.

Nothing could exceed the anxiety of the crowd to kiss or even touch the carpet. The procession was closed by camels loaded with presents for Meca. The davalcade, which was two hours in passing, left the city by the Bai-el-Nasr gate and proceeded to Abassieh, where an escort of one hundred Bachibacouks and twenty Bedouin chiefs were waiting to Abassieh, where an escort of one hundred Bachibacouks and twenty Bedouin chiefs were waiting to show the proceeded for the Hassewah; and thence in the direction of Suez, to Birketel-Hagge, or the Luke of Pilgrims, where it will remain two days to collect the pligrims who may wish to join it, and then resume the march.
