ANOTHER SWINDLE. On the 23d of July, a woman giving the name of Anna Maria Kelfer borrowed the sum of $260 from Mrs. Eliza Kirstine, residing near St. John and Callowhill streets. As coilateral security Anna de-posited a box with Mrs. K., representing that it contained one thousand seven hundred dollars worth of valuables that she had received from her hus-band in California. Some time slapsed, had Mrs. Keffer not appearing, Mrs. Kirstine opened the box. Instead of finding it full of valuables she discovered nothing but salt and sand. The detec-tives took the subject in hand, and yesterday Mrs. Keffer was traced to Washington, D. C., where she was employed in a hotel. Last evening a telegram was received from Chief Baker, at Washington, stating that the fugitive had, been arrested, and would be forthwith taken to Philadelphia. It is probable that she will be arraigned this atternoon. his city to-day. A delegation of one member from each company will receive the regiment at the Baltimore depot, together with the City Councils and the Committee of Firemen on Arrangements, and escort the men to the Hefreshment Saloors. David M. Lyle, chief engineer, has been chosen ohief marshal of the procession. Other companies wishing to take part in the re-ception will be assigned positions in the rear of the divisions to which they belong.

A MILITARY EXECUTION. William H. Howe, of Co. A, 116th Pennsylvania. Volunteers, is to be excluded to-morrow morning, at Fort Millin. At the time of the enrolment, having described from the army, and being at his home in Perklomes township, Montgomery county, Howe, who is described as a perfect desporado, vowed that he would resist the draft. To his great present sor-row, he did resist the draft. And the manner he did it was this : He armed himself, and, taking advan-tage of a favorable opporunity, he waylaid and shot the enrolling officer of his district, who was quietly pursuing his duty. Information of this being conveyed to this city, Doputy Marshals Jonkins, Sharkey, and Schuyler started out in fact little short of a walking armory. He roamed at large in the forests and wilds of Western Penn-sylvania, committing numerous depredations upon their inhabitants, who became in dread of his ap-proach for nearly ayear. Finally, however, about three or four months ago, he was entrapped and made prisoner. Trial and conviction by court mating son followed, and if the Presidential mercy des not intervene, this double criminal will soon suffer the fate which his acts have courted. EECRUITING. A MILITARY EXECUTION.

RECRUITING. RECRUITING. We are glad to learn that the mustering lieu-tenants, who were appointed to aid and superlatend recruiting in the five wards which have the greatest deficiency to overcome, have commenced their work, and have already obtained some recruits. Thes wards, if they wish to be freed from the draft, should aid the lieutenants in their enterprise by subsoribing to enlarge the bounty given to enlisted men.

Philip Morris, a returned veteran soldier, was robbed of the sum of $300 and a watch, on Tues-day. He took boarding at a house near Twenty-third and Market atreets, and wishing to have his effects conveyed to that piace employed the ser-vices of a baker with a horse and wagon. On riding with the goods to his boarding-house he stopped at a tavern near Eleventh and Locust streets, where he ireated several. In doing so he schibited his pile of money, and taking therefrom a five-dollar note he paid the bill of refreshments. The soldier be-came drunk, and so remained for some time... Upon being restored to sober though the found that he had been robbed of all his money, and a watch./ He had the baker arrested, but there being no evidence to implicate him in the robbery he was discharged. The cases tried in this court were of trifling mo-ment. Catharine Sinclair, alias Scotch Mary, was con-victed of larceny in stealing a piece of slik from a store in Eighth street. She entered the store, as it appeared from the svidence, with the simulated de-sign of purchasing, and availed herself of an oppor-tunity, when she thought she was unobserved, to se-orete the piece of slik under her under clothing. A young lady, clerk in the store, saw the act, and gave information which led to the arrest of the de-ion and the discovery of the goods upon her per-son. Sentenced to an imprisonment of one year in the county prison. The two or three other cases tried were for assault and battery.

HUMBLE GRAVES FOR GRMAT MEN.-We have already spoken of the plain mound that covers Stonewall Jackson, who was great, though mis-guided. Havelock, the hero of India, rests under a plain tomb in Alumbah, province of Oude, India. But, to the disgrace of the nation for the preserva-tion of whose rule he died, the grave is treated like that of a common dog. Cover, sheep, and horses, says a writer, stray at will over it; a large quantity of seemingly rotten timber lying about does not im-prove its appearance; the walks are almost lost in weeds and jungle, and it bears altogether a deserted look. The country that so fully recognized the claims of Havelock, after he died in its service, surely would not grudge to keep the garden in order, put a railing round his tomb, and evince those marks of respect for his memory, and for those who fell there, to which they are as justly entitled.

An EAST INDIAN SECT.—About sixteen years ago, and not long before the English became masters of the Punjaub, in India, one Baluk Singh started a new Sikh sect, near the town of Rawal Pindee, called "Juggeassees." After making a large num-ber of converts, he died in 1683. Of his three lavorite pupils, Ram Singh, a carpenter, was chosen to suc-ceed him. In many respects the doctrines of the new sect are an improvement on the Sikh treed. Ram Singh condemns caste, and preaches against adultery. He enjoins the marriage of widows, and advocates the intermarriage of all castes. He takes no alme, nor allows his followers to do so. He con-demns drunkenness, and urge's cleanliness of person and truthtelling. He, however, allows too free an intercourse betware the average more the fulle
