We have known of many instances in which a substitute broker has re-ceived the largest part of the bounty money. A few days ago, a gentleman told us that, in anticipation of the draft, he had got a substitute from a broker, and for which he paid him $900. Of this amount the broker paid the substitute, an ignorant colored map, but $900, retaining the $900 himself. After the bro-ker had paid the money to the substitute, he sug-gested to him that they had a fund which kept the money for men who wished to leave it with them, and that he could get it back again when he came home. The poor fellow gave the thief, we can call him nothing else, the $300 hack. Whether the broker also retained the city and ward bounties our informant was not aware. Whether the boy-murderer enticed his companion to enter the house with the deliberate intention of killing him, or whether they were en-gaged in play and quarrelled, must-remain un-mown, unless it shall be disclosed by a confession of the only one who can disclose it. However that may be, the two boys went into the garree of the house, and while there, Johnson, catching up a fire-arm, flot and instantly killed his ritue, dragged the body into an alley leading into the yard of the house, and placed it upon a pile of shavings, to which he set fire with the intention of destroying the evi-of burning flesh alarmed the neighbors, who rushed in, and, after extinguishing the flames, discovered the based it, box gave no reason for his atrocious con-duct. South Carolina seemed stronger still, and the paper I have noted was bristling all over with blatant treason. Saturday came; there was news of the decisive military assault of the rebel scoundrels upon the devoted fort, and its-capture ! . That night feeling of New York was in a transition state New Yorkers were ashamed to take side with the rebels after what had just been done, and did not know what to think. All day Sunday the scale

find itself repeated. Well, the Convention has met and adjourned ; there has been no "split," and speculation is almost as much at fault as ever as to what course it has pursued. The only great fact standing forth prominently in the record of the proceedings is harmony. It was fearfully harmonious. Men who knocked each other down, men who bandied such epithets as "tyrant," "traitor," "assassin," yet struck hands, and stood shoulder to shoulder when the ballot came to be taken. There cannot be a question that they were all agreed. Agreed as to what? It would not be politic for the gentlemen of the Convention to be candid upon this point. Premising that a political platform should embrace. firstly, a declaration of principles, and secondly, a declaration of purposes, we cannot resist the conviction that as yet no platform has been adopted by the Opposition ; and this conviction is confirmed by the fact that the Chicago Convention did not adjourn sine die, but is a permanent affair; and, according to HORATIO SEY-MOUR, will be reconvened, as frequently, | between this and election day, as contingencies may require. That is to say, whenever we shall meet with any important victory or any decided reverse, the platform will be tinkered up to suit the public mood, It is a beautiful arrangement. In the first place a platform (so called) is adopted which means nothing; and in the second place it is to be altered, whenever necessary, to mean nothing else! At the same time, it will occur to any reasoning mind that | rebels should be taken by the Government the finesse thus exhibited is of the order and employed for its defence. Gen. Principles have any blow aimed at the Administration, and not the quality of elasticity; and, when all the war measures of the Administration the attempt is made to stretch them to are justified in his nomination. cover too comprehensive a ground, they must either break off at the ends or else split across the middle. Nobody need fancy that this terrible contest between North and South is to be smoothed down with fine words. The gulf is too broad to be bridged over with "glittering generalities: But does the Chicago platform embrace nothing more than these? Yes. It sets forth with the declaration that the Union must be preserved; and even if the Convention were insincere in saying so, the concession to popular sentiment is as gratifying as it was necessary. We do not take this to be an especial plank in the Democratic platform ; it is a common basis upon which all platforms must rest, as long as we have a country and political contests are to be fought. It is a universal preamble for political resolutions of all kinds. Leaving it out of view, we cannot but perceive the significant fact that there is but one otherplank of any moment in the platform---that in which an immediate cessation of hostilities is demanded. Here only is anything proposed to be done ; here only is any broad, comprehensive, national purpose enunciated. All the other resolutions are such as any town or county meeting might with equal appropriateness adopt. As a whole, day evening; there was a wonderful lack the platform is not such a one as the crisis of that fire and determination which, from demands, or as the country had a right to ex- | what had been promised, might have been pect, little as could be hoped for from such a anticipated. TON, Sept. 8 .- A salute of a hundred guns

It is dated twenty-six miles south of Atlanta, at six o'clock yesterday morning, but was detained by the breaking of the telegraph lines mentioned in my despatch of last night, "As already reported, the army drew from about Atlanta, and on the 30th had made a break of the West Point road, and reached a good position from which to strike the Macon road, the right (Gen. Howard) near Jonesboro, the left (Gen. Finding strong opposition on the road, I advanced the centre and left rapidly to the railroad, made a good lodgment, and broke it all the way from Rough and Ready down to Howard's left, near Jonesboro, and by the same movement I interposed my whole army between Atlanta and the part of the enemy entrenched in and round Jonesboro.
