THE ELECTIONS.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 12, 1864.

VICTORY IN THREE STATES.

REPUBLICANS IN PENNSYLVANIA, INDIANA, AND OHIO.

That a substantial victory was achieved in Pennsylvania yesterday by the Union forces, on the home vote, is beyond controversy. It is not forgotten that we have made all our calculations upon the vote of the election last year, when Governor Curtin was re-elected by a majority of 15,385, and when, on a reasonable estimate, from 15,000 to 20,000 soldiers voted Curtin. Yesterday we had few or none of these men voting in their respective election precincts. The thousands who did throw their ballots have not yet been counted. Under the law of the last Legislature, the return of the soldiers' vote must be made by the election officers in the various camps and hospitals to the Prothonotaries of the respective counties, which cannot be published for some days. This vote is estimated variously at from 30,000 to 40,000, of which at least two-thirds, judging by the intelligence already received, will go for the Union candidates. We think, therefore, the Union majority on the home and soldiers' vote will be at least 25,000. When it is recollected that we fought under the most dreadful disadvantages, it is indeed a substantial triumph. And this is more apparent when we remember that we are entitled both branches of the Legislature, and general elections to the members of Congress, to be supported if we gain one or two more. Wherever the Union vote has fallen off heavily, as in Lancaster, Erie, Chester, and so forth, this is to be attributed to the enormous proportion of Union men in the army. But frankness compels us to say that in all these counties, including some not necessary to name, our friends must at once recognize that they would be worthy of our ardent fans at the November election.

Both branches of the Legislature carried. A Union gain of three congressmen. A 10,000 majority on the home vote. Over seven thousand in the City. The soldiers to be heard from.
