THE CRAVEN. [From an unpublished poem by Alfred Audhison.] On that mighty day of battle, imid the booming and on that mighty day of osters, into the source the rattle,
Shouts of victory and of angulsh, wherewith
Malvern's hill did rour,
Did a general now quite fameless, who in these lines
shall be nameless,
Show himself as rather gameless, gameless on the James' shore:
Safely smcking on a gunboat, while the tempest
raged on shore!
Only this and nothing more. The Congressional Committee sat within the na tion's city,
And each Congressman so witty did the general implore:
"Tell us if thou at that battle, 'mid the booming and the rattle,
Wert on gunboat or in saddle while the tempest
raged ashore?"
Answer'd he: "I don't remember; might have been." What more? Only this, and nothing more. "By the truth, which is eternal, by the lies that are diurnal, By our Abraham paternal, General, we do thee implore.
Tell the truth and shame the devil, parent of Old Jeff and evil;
Give us no more of such drivel. Tell us, wert thou on the shore?"
"Don't remember—might have been," thus spoke he o'er and o'er— Only this, and nothing more. 44 On that day, sir, had you seen a gunboat of the name Galena.

In an anchorage to screen a man from danger on the shore? the shore?
Was a man about your inches, smoking with those two French princes,
With a caution which evinces care for such a garde de corps?
Were you that man on the gunboat?" "Don't remember, might have been." The bore. Only this, and nothing more. POLITICAL.

THE SOLDIERS' VOTE.

The vote of the soldiers, as received at the office of the Prothonotary of the Court of Common Pleas, is as follows:
For the Union candidates.

The Union majority.

The Opposition party were to have had a torchlight procession on Saturday evening, but, owing to the inclemency of the weather, the event was postponed. Much preparation had been made to make the display very attractive and as extensive as possible. It is said that a meeting and procession will take place on the Saturday evening previous to the Presidential election.

It was in contemplation by the Union party to its prisoner to the jail.

"Indeed, I can't. Why don't you make your doorgive a grand daylight procession some time before the coming Presidential election, but it is under-stood that this is likely to be postponed, at least the movers entertain different opinions in regard to the MILITARY. REBEL PRISONERS IN TOWN. Considerable sensation was excited on Saturday afternoon by the passage through the efreets of a party of sixty-nine rebel officers, under guard of a detachment of Federal troops. The prisoners were all officers, ranking from a lieutenant colonel down. They were taken by Cavaliry Sheridan, in the valley; but they were all captured prior to the 6th of the present month. The "rebs" generally-looked in good condition, although rough and rugged. Some of the inferior officers had on gray uniforms, which had the appearance of having once done service as the material of coffee or cotton bags. The rebels were followed by a squad of deserters and Considerable sensation was excited on Saturday role as the material of cones or cotton bags. The rebels were followed by a squad of deserters and bounty-jumpers, this portion of the party being linked together by means of handcuffs. The whole were on their way to Fort Delaware. On several occasions within the past week a number of Dunkards (properly Tunkers) arrived in this city, from the Shenandoah Valley, Virginia. They were fugitives from rebel tyranny and conscription. Several of these men called upon Mayor Henry for advice. They represented to his Honor that early in the rebellion the Dunkards in Virginia were assured by the rebel leaders that they should not, because of their peculiar conscientious views, ever be called upon to go into the "Southern army." They were to remain on their farms, and progress with cause of their peculiar conscientious views, ever be called upon to go into the "Southern army." They were to remain on their farms, and progress with agriculture. Until recently they were comparatively unmolested. Within the past six weeks the Southerners made a wholesale invasion of their farms, and stripped them of everything. Horses, cattle, sheep, wagons, forage were taken by force. Scarcely enough was left for home consumption. Within a week after these depredations, the conscripting officers, in the name of Jeff Davis and the Southern Confederacy, went among the Dunkards and forced some into their ranks under threats of death. For these reasons, many of the persuasion, with their wives and children, fied to the North for safety. The tales of horror briefly told by the fugitives awakened the heartfelt sympathy of his Honor. He gave them advice such as the nature of the circumstances seemed to require. They expressed their gratification and retired from the office. The Dunkards originated in Pennsylvania early in the eighteenth century. They are a peculiar class of people, of the Seventh-day Baptist order. Their proper name is Tunkers. They keep themselves entirely free from other persuasions, and never attempt to enforce their opinions on others. As a general thing they are loyal to the Union. HIGHWAYS STILL OBSTRUCTED.

The great caving in of the culvert at Third and Reed streets, that occurred several months since, remains open, and in a very dangerous condition. When first discovered the repairs could have been made at a trifling cost; but all the appropriation having been exhausted, the Highway Department could not go on with the work of repair. Since that time the surroundings have caved away day after day until the hole has reached an average diameter of forty or fifty feet. Of course public travel except by passenger cars is stopped at this point. The Second and Third streets company have sprung a BETWEEN BOARD. HIGHWAYS STILL OBSTRUCTED. There have been many rumors current for two days, commercial, financial, and prlitical; and attempts have been made to enhance the prices of both cotton and gold; no real ady vantages have resulted from the movements. Cotton may be held with more firmness, but the article is liable to so many contingencies, that the mass of buyers are redicent in their views and very offish about meating factors' pretensions. As to gold, the stock in market is reduced so low as hardly to be worthy of notice; holders were very firm to day. COLORED PERSONS AND THE CARS.

The driver on one of the passenger cars of the Lombard and South-street line, named Frank Lowry, was arraigned at the Central Station, on Saturday, on the charge of committing an assault and battery on Mrs. Elizabeth Derry, a respectable colored woman, residing on South Eleventhstreet. It appears from the evidence that the complainant had attended a meeting of the Colored Sanitary Commission, on Thursday evening last, and had assisted in making up many bundles or packages of articles to take to the Summit House Hospital on the following day. She was very tired. At quarter before eleven cyclock on Thursday hight she and several of the commission were standing at Fifth and South streets when a car came along. The conductor looking at the group standing at the corner held his hand up and complainant advanced. The car stoppend, and she got in and took her seat. There were besides her five other passengers—one male and four females—two of the latter being in company with the man. The complainant had other railway lines without objection, she being very light in the color of her skin. The conductor finally came to her, and in a rough manner said, "Don't you know that we don't allow any niggers to ride in these cars; you must get out." The cer was moving at the time. Complainant replied "that no passenger objected to her."

Conductor "did not cave, she must get out." COLORED PERSONS AND THE CARS. in Matamoros on London. were taken at 212% in small amounts. Other good bills were offered at 212.—Picaryume.

The N. Y. Herald of Saturday Bays:

"The recent decision in the Suprema Court in the case of Stillwell vs. Meigs, although in accordance with previous decisions, be attended the ire of the commission stock-houses, who regard the law relating to broker and customer as the reverse of equitable. In the present action in a plaintiff sued to recover $5.700 lost by the sale of the house tarded for him on a margin of soft, and which they sold during the panic of last spring without notifying him that they were about to sell. A similar case, with similar results, was tried at the general term of the Supreme Court in the Second district in 1853—amely, that of Brass vs. Worth & White—where the plaintiff not only recovered his original margin, but the difference in excess which his slock might have sold for when the market reached its highert point previous to the commencement of the action. Damages had previously been recovered under like circumstances, affecting pledger and pledges, in the following casses: Dykers vs. Alstyne, reported in 7 Hill, 497; Stearns, vs. Marsh, 4 Denio, 227; Wilson vs. Little, 2 Cometock, 448; Brown vs. Ward, 3 Deer, 650; Lewis vs. Graham, 4 abbott, 105. The law is that, when a mark in is wholly or partially exhausted, brokers are bound to make demand for fresh margin, and give formal notice to their customers that if this is not farnished, they will sell, at a given place and time the stock which they have hought on account of such customers; but the sale, in the event of default, cannot be made at the board of brokers unless there was a stipulation to that effect, for the reason that by the stipulations of the board of brokers of the law is to afford the pledgor we opportunity to redeem and to be present at the sale to see that it is fairly conducted. (Court of Appeals, 1837, Wheeler vs. Nowbold, 16, New York.) And even if a special agreement is made, by which the pledgor. "The New plainant replied "that no passenger objected to her."

Conductor "did not cave, she must get out."

The car reached Eleventh and South skreets, when it was stopped, and the driver was called by the conductor to put the woman out. The driver refused as he was not employed to do that work. Two young men standing at the corner were called in by the conductor to help put the passenger out. The conductor pulled off his coat and saying to the complainant, "now — you, you must go out," and then forced her from her seat. As she was thrust from the platform the conductor kicked her. She was compelled to stop at a drug store to get some liniment to rub herself where she had been injured by the kick." The New York Evening Post of Saturday says: The New York Evening Post of Saturday says:
The demand for money is moderately active from the brokers at 7 per cent. Mercantile paper continues dull, and the rates outside of bank are $6010 per cent. treasury certificates taking precedence with money-lenders. These pay about 1 per cent. a year at present discount of $605k per cent. from the face of the certificate. The stock market partakes of the dullness of the weather to-day. The business at the first and only regular board was comparatively light. The prices, however, were, on most descriptions, well supported, as compared with Friday morning, but not so good as at the evening exchange on Friday.
The price of gold is $603k per cent. firmer this forenoon than yesterday, finctuating between 209k/20204/. The export to-day is: By the Edinburgh, $227,000; by the Erin, $175,000, and by the Hansa, $5,000.— Total, $497,000
The following quotations were made at the board on some of the active stocks, as compared with Friday forenoon:

Sat. Fri. Adv. Dec. ment to rub herself where she had been injured by the kick."

These were the material points in the case.

The conductor, in his own defence, denied the statement of the witness. He did not use any harsh language, as is ascribed to him. He made a request that she should get out, but not until his attention had been called to the fact by the male passengers that she was colored. The conductor further said that the gentleman put his head out of the door of the car and asked "whether niggers were allowed to ride with white people."

The com plainant denied this statement and farther said that not a passenger objected, but on the contrary, that when she was being thrust from the car, one of the lady passengers suddenly jumped from the seat and asked to be let out, that she did not wish to see any female treated in such a brutal manner. | Torenoon: | Sat. | United States 6s, 1881, coup... 105½ |

She was willing to get in, but objected to any force; she did not wish to be bodily injured.

"Can't you squeeze in, Ann?" said the officer imploringly, because he saw a prospective walk with his prisoner to the jail.

"Indeed, I can't. Why don't you make your doorways larger?"

"Oh, well, try to squeeze in!"

"Oh, well, try to squeeze in!"

"I can't do it. You might as well try to get Jeff Davis to squeeze into heaven." [Roars of laughter by a hundred spectators.]

The officer tried to push her in, but she complained of being haft. Sympathy was now expressed by the crowd—

"Oh, don't hurt the lady!" "Don't take any of the fat off her!"

"You are so fat," said the officer, "that you ought to slip in."

Can't do it. Put me in if you can, but don't hurt me. The law don't allow an unresisting person to be hurt."

The officer was nonplussed; he knew not what to do. The spectators laughed, and added much to the interest of the scene by various odd sayings. The crowd augmented fast, until the street was blocked up and the van fairly besieged. All attempts to get the fat woman into the van being in yain, she once me. Court of Quarter Sessions-Judge Thomp-On Saturday the case of Bernard Murray, charged with the murder of William Kneass, in Carlton street, above Seventeenth, in the year 1858, was heard on babeas corpus. Upon the occasion when Kneass was killed, it seems that a fight had occurred between the parties, in which Kneass received injuries which caused his death. But one witness was examined as to the facts, viz: Dr. Brown, at that time physician for the coroner, and his evidence was only as to the nature of the wounds from which death ensued. He said that the deceased died from an effusion of blood upon the brain, caused by blows inflicted by some blunt instrument. The officers who arrested Murray testified that after diligent search they had been unable to find witnesses who were present at the commission of the killing. Under these circumstances Judge Thompson postponed the case until Saturday next.
