SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1864.

UNITED STATES CENTRAL COMMITTEE ROOMS, No. 1105 CHESTNUT STREET, Philadelphia, Nov. 5, 1864.

Our friends in the different States are requested to telegraph the returns of the Presidential election, at the earliest possible moment, addressed to "GEORGE H. BOKER, Secy., Secretary Union League, Chestnut, above Twelfth street, Philadelphia."

Without impugning the loyalty or patriotism of many of his fellow-citizens, General Butler speaks wisely and truthfully when he says: "Only utter the fullest convictions of my judgment in declaring that the action of Congress in support of the Copperhead is more detestable to the rebellion than if they placed themselves actively in arms side by side with the rebels in the field!"

"COMPROMISE with the South" is again the cry of its Northern retainers. The people should understand what this means. It means that the cause of the South is falling, and that loyal men are about to give it their death-blow.

It is suggested that if our brave soldiers would escape from the clutches of the Copperhead, they would be glad to rejoin the ranks of the Union army, and to fight for the restoration of the Union.
