Grand Mass Meeting at Wilmington, Del. ADDRESS OF MR. JOHN W. FORNEY. The Canvass in Berks, Dauphin, Northampton, &c , &c. PRESAGE OF VICTORY.

WARE-SPEECHES OF COL. JOHN W. FORNEY AND OTHERS. A large and most enthusiastic meeting of the Tinion citizens of Wilmington and vicinity was held in that city last night. Washington Jones, Esq., resided, and introduced Col. Forney, who said: presided, and introduced Col. Forney, who said:

MY COUNTRYMEN: It affords me sincere pleasure to meet you on the night of the day before the re-election of Abraham Lincoin to the Presidency of the United States, [Cheers.] We are hore not to discuss issues or to dispute about probabilities. The issues are decided, and the probabilities have become certainties. ["That's so." "We mean that," and cheers.] Why, then, is it that we are here? It is merely to commemorate in advance the verdict which will be pronounced to-morrow of a conclusive and significant triumph. We are here to do what we shall do to morrow night and the mext night, and what our brothers in all parts of the Union—our loyal brothers—will continue to do with us—commemorate the downfall of treason and the victory of the friends of the Government of the United States. [Cheers.] This being our duty, let ted States. [Cheers.] This being our duty, let me ask why it is that here, in a State which has been rescued from treason, and which has been saved to the Government by the arms of served to the Government by the structure of the constructions, we have no party parading your streets and insisting upon voting against the Government? No one is disposed to deny to these men their full right to vote to-morrow, but it is a remarkable spectacle that an organizazation led by menwho, in the Congress of the United States, from the beginning of the rebeiling this hour pages gave a vota never United States, from the beginning of the rebellion to this hour, never gave a vote, never uttered a sentiment, and never contributed by any act to the support of the common cause, should now be rallying their forces against the old flag. One of these men, rather than take an oath to support the Federal Constitution, resigned his seat. One of these men, rather than say that he would sustain the Government in this its hour of deadliest peril, fled from his place and is now no doubt through husself or ment in this its hour of deadlies; peril, ned from his pince, and is now, no doubt, through himself or inistriends, alding and abetting that inside insurrection only second to the armed rebellion itself. When I contemplate the fact that Delaware, like Maryland, lies between the Federal capital and the afree States, that she is, as it were, the offspring of the loins of Pennsylvaria, and that all her astonishing and abundant prosperity is the result of the guardian care of the Government, it is a monstrous anomaly that those who are protected by that Government should still be laboring to plunge their own State into the threes of civil war, and to make her a Golgotha; a place of soulls, like Mississippi and Eastern Virginia. Why is this? The answer is as reasonable as it is ready. It is because, my countrymen, this virus of human slavery, which has poisoned every Southern society—even here, where the serpent is dying daily—has been so strong, or continues to be so strong, that the slaveholders control what is called the Democratic, but what is, in fact, the aristocratic party. These men would his place, and is now, no doubt, through himself or tinues to be so strong, that the siaveholders control what is called the Democratic, but what is, in fact, the aristocratic party. These men would rather see Delaware thrown back into the arms of treason than keep her where she is in the arms of irecdom [Cheers] I presume there are in the procession, or listening to the gentlemen whose hearts are palpitating with hope that the arms of Lee may triumph (as their hearts palpitate with despair when they hear that the arms of Grant and Sherman have triumphed), some citizens of foreign birth. Why, gentlemen, this whole war against our free institutions is a war against labor. It is a war, too, against the adopted citizen. When I look around, and behold an Irishman coming here and living prosperously under the flag of my country—when I see this Irishman, allowing himself to be led by men who have been the enemies of his party here, and who have sympathized with the enemies of his country in Europe, voting their ticket, I am constrained to doubt whether he is really fitted to enjoy the blessings so profusely and generously bestowed upon him. [Uheers.] Does not this Irishman know that in the Southern country one of the fundamental maxims of society and government there—I refer now to those who control both—is hostility to emigration? There is nothing that the Southern slave-holders and authors of this rebellion hate more than they do emigration, and hence it is that they have continually opposed every measure in the Congress of the United States looking to the cultivation of a sentiment by which the people of other mations, the down-trodden masses of Ireland, Germany, and France, should be called to this country. In connection with this hatred of emigration comes, logically and naturally, hatred of naturalization, and, therefore, opposition to the right of the adopted citizen to cast his vote. Do Irishmen and men born and, therefore, opposition to the right, of the analysed citizen to cast his vote. Do Irisimen and men born abroad recollect that there is not now in command of any Southern column a single adopted citizen? They do not trust them. It is not alone because they have a hatred and contempt of introducing this element into their society, but it is because of their innate aristocracy that they refuse to encourage the recognition of these citizens. And yet here we have this strange spectacle presented that probably the largest body of those who will vote against you to morrow is composed of men of foreign birth. I am not here to make any assault upon any man who may vote to morrow for the ticket representing the Southern sympathizers. I am not here, above all things, to quarrel with an adopted citizen who may vote the same way. For twenty years of my life I have been the friend of the Irishman. I have opposed all the organizations which opposed him. [Cheers.] I opposed the American party in 1841 when the riots originated in Philadelphia, and the other party called Know Nothings in 1854, and I have been the consistent opponent, until the rebellion broke out, of what is called the Whig party. I, claim the right, having borne this relation to these citizens, to say to them that the day will come—a day must come—when the seed that they are now sowing will produce a moral harvest. (Cheers.] I do not want to predict a harvest of violence, but such a harvest as may impel the American people to act upon the grand idea that the liberties of a great people are to be entrusted only to those who have either been born upon the soil, white-or-black, or who have fought for the old flag. [Cheers.] Now, if there is any curious indivioual in this crowded audience who wishes to contest what I am now saying by a personal visit to the place where this Copperhead nest is located tonight, I will wager with him that there is not a speaker who addresses that nest who will say a single strong word against the rebellion, or a single kind word i gregated around me, and who have been fighting, and will again fight, against the rebellion. [Oheers.] Here is a pregnantiact; a fact more complete in its convincing force than an argument of ten hours' length uttered to you by the lips of an angel. These men are asking your suffrages on the ground that they alone can restore the Union, and yet in their meetings they utter no word of at-tack upon the enemies of the Union, and no word of praise for the defenders of the Union. No, to such praise for the defenders of the Union. No, to such an extent have their prejudices been carried that I doubt whether to day their hatred of the soldier—of those men in line before me to-night—is not more intense and deadly than it is of the negro. ["That's so."] It is a fortunate thing for the Republic that these Copperheads should hate the soldier so bitterly, for their hate is paid back with compound interest by the brave delenders of the old flag. [Cheers] And observe—as if to prove not only the inconsistency but the whekedness of the men now boasting that because your laws less of the men now boasting that because your laws ienders of the old flag. [Uheers] And observe—as if to prove not only the inconsistency but the wickedness of the men now boasting that because your laws in this State allow traitors to vote to-morrow they may be able possibly to give almost the only three electoral votes that will be cast against Abraham Lincolm—observe. I say, the inconsistency and wickedness of these men, who, while charging that this is an abolition and negro war, are themselves preparing to organize the slaves of the South, thus setting an example to us that we ourselves should have done it long ago, and that we are right in doing it now. [Cheers.]

When I recur, as it is fitting for me to recur, to the history of the past four years and a half, I am amazed that in any free community there should be an intelligent man who hesitates as to the performance of his duty. Why, the men who are now shouting for George B. McClellan are the men who assassinated Stephen A. Douglas. ["True, true."] The men who are now raising their voices against Abraham Lincolm were the men that sent that illustrious patriot to his grave. I will not name them. Their names are not only familiar to you, but they are burnt into the historical records of our country in letters so black that all the multitudinous seas could not wash them clean. [Cheers] I was the intimate and confidential friend of Stephen A. Douglas, shared his innermost thoughts, and knew the man as I know the dearest friend I have now alive, and with this gallant Douglas Democrat, Col. Bowman, [cheers], who commands your military district, [cheers], and who, up to the period of the breaking out of the rebellion, stood with the old-line Democratic party, and only separated from it to join the Union party when he saw its organization had fallen into the hands of the enemies of the Republic. [Cheers.] On my left sits a young gentleman who is reporting the words that are talling from mylips (Major Sheridan), and if I needed his testimony it would be freely given. After the division of the Democratic part the most sublime heroism, one which a timid, or a corrupt, or a weak politician would have refused to undertake—he determined to traverse the South, to go through the very States which had sent men to these conventions to destroy him, and to tell the people that the election of Abraham Lincoln to the Presidency was not a cause for objection, was not a cause for revolution, was not a cause for civil war. [Great cheers.] It is well before this audience to refer to this fact, for I recollect in the days to which I allude there were many Douglas Democrats in the good State of Delaware, and to them as well as to those who have been Republicans, I now specially address myself. When Judge Douglas arrived at Norfolk, Ya., several questions were put to him by a somewhat distinguished politician, (Dr. Lambby name,) and among others he was asked whether, in the event of the election of Abraham Lincoln, he considered it the duty of the South to abide by that election. And there, surrounded by an infurtated crowd, this intrepid patriot, this immortal expounder of the great principle of popular sovereignty, which intended that the people of the Territories, like the people of the States, should be allowed crowd, this intreplat patriot, this immortal expounder of the great principle of popular sovereignty, which intended that the people of the Territories, like the people of the States, should be allowed to control their own institutions, slavery inclusive, in their own way, proclaimed that Abraham Lincoln, if elected, would be obeyed, and could not be resisted. [Cneers.] From that standpoint he proceeded, my young friend accompanying him through the entire South. At every step he was threatened by the myrmidons of slavery until he arrived at New Orleans, two days after the Presidential election, in November, 1860. If it were necessary I could read you the speech he made on his reception there. In it he enunciated the same sentiment, and among other things said: "Abraham Lincoln has been elected President of the United States. I call upon you to obey the verdict of the people—"tis the voice of the majority. If there is trouble, it has been produced by the leaders who have misguided you. None of your rights need suffer because Abraham Lincoln has been chosen President of the United States. Have not we, the Democratic party, a majority in the Senate of the United States, and cannot we, with that majority, prevent the Lincoln and the Republican party, if they determine upon extreme and unfriendly measures, from carrying those measures out? Nay, morecan we not prevent any member of his Oabinet that may be distasteful to us from being confirmed by the Senate? In fact, we still have the power of the Federal Government in our hands." This was true. They had the Senate and the Supreme Court, and as the result proved, they had a large, influential party in the army and the navy. Judge Douglas terminated his memorable canvaes with these sentiments. After leaving New Orleans he visited a friend in Mississippi, where he remained for some weeks, and contracted to the hall relected to the disasse which finally carried him to his prema-

[Applanes.] And I do not doubt that to-night, in whatever camp he may be found, and wherever the conspirators themselves, the chiefs of this satanic gang, are plotting, every pulsation of chiefs heart and theirs is in favor of the election of Geo. B. McClellan. It is these men who would make of his heart fistate another Flanders, where contending hosts should dispute the way to the Federal capital. Look at the delivered State of Maryland, right before you! See what this Government has done for her! [A voice: "Liberty." and cheers.] We talk of the prosperity of the free States, but nowhere is there such a testimony and such a trophy of the generosity and statesmanship of Abraham Lincoln as in the present condition of the State of Maryland. And well did that cheerful voice explain why this is So. It is because liberty has been given to her slaveholders an arrogant and distance and the construction of the state of Maryland, and well did that cheerful voice explain why this is So. It is because liberty has been given to her slaveholders an arrogant and distance and the constitution expression of President Libroch and the protecting of the Constitution everywhere, and insist that all who recognize its supremacy and submit to its oblivation became afree State. The black fiend of Slavery, which had made of her working men an interior and humiliated class—that light curse, that festering stain upon the osciuton of the State of Calvert and Carroll, original Abolition that same curse easing like a law and the first time at the contract party that they your many of the chief plotters are stated by the contract party of the contract party or faction, who stands became afree State. The black fiend of Slavery, which had made of her working men an interior and humiliated dass—that fell curse, that festering stain upon the osciuton of the State of Calvert and Carroll, original Abolition of the State of Calvert and Carroll, original Abolition of the State of Calvert and Carroll, original Abolition of the contract party that the fell curse, that festering stain upon the escutcheon of the State of Calvert and Carroll, original Abolitionists, has been forever brushed away, and now Maryland stands before you, Delaware—having still that same curse eating like a worm and canker into your heart—an example, an evangelist calling upon you to do your full duty to morrow. For I say to you that you did not do your duty in the last October election. Your vote on that day was unworthy of you. [A voice—"We will make it better to morrow."] I trust you will. Here in your midst to night are many of the chief plotters against the Union—men who tolled to dislocate and to destroy the Democratic party that they might more readily dislocate and destroy the Republic. Will you allow them to lead you into the yawning thell of [slavery, whon nearly every other border State is resolved to be free? ["No."] Why, gentlemen of Delaware, there is not a mechanic, or a poor man, or a man of property, or a man of religion within the sound of my voice, who should not feel to morrow when he awakes as if he had been summoned to the performance of a great task by the Archangel of God himself. [Applause.] What have you to gain by voting for this young, querulous, insufficient failure—for Goneral McCiellan? [Cheers.] What can he do for you? Or, is it so, that when your Legislature permits itself to be bought into conferring corrupt grants upon other traitors in the city of New York, that your suffrages are at the same time bought and sold? What can he co? Why, he can put you in the position of a people who, with all the lights before their eyes, were unworthy to be free! What other lessons do you need? Do you need to be told that there is not one of these men who would not, held by his own record, and judged by his own heart, be compelled, in the event-of the

would not, held by his own record, and judged by his own heart, be compelled, in the event-of the election of George B. McClellan, to repudiate your election of George B. McClellan, to repudlate your national dot, to assist in the depreciation of your currency, and to invite the intervention of foreign States? Nay, to make of your own city here a waste; because, whatever may occur, one thing is sure, if Abreham Lincoln is defeated there will be no more such industry and prosperity as I have referred to in the free States. You will have assisted to prenounce your own doom. You will have declared that you desire the subdivision, and more than the subdivision of the Republic. Do you suppose that France and England would regard the decice against Lincoln in any other sense than as an invitation to them to interpose in our quarrel? As an evidence of this let me call your attention te the fact which must have impressed itself upon the fact which must have impressed itself upon every intelligent mind. Our previous Presidential elections have never exerted any interest in the Old elections have never exerted any interest in the Old. World, saving possibly among the great journalists of England, and here and there a thinker in France and Germany, and a distinguished publicist, whose duty it is to watch the action of communities in all parts of the world. But since the outbreak of the rebellion the aristocracy of the whole civilized world regard Mr. Lincoln's defeat as essential to their safety. They are now more intimately acquainted with the workings of our Government than they ever have been before. our Government than they ever have been before. I am not here to say from what this intense auxiety and solicitude as to the result of this election flows, but it is clear that the hatred of free institutions is the primary cause, added to which is a desire to break the blockade and destroy the Republic, that they may resume their commerce with the South and regain the prosperity they have hereforce enjoyed. So it is; and the Irishman, if he forgets Ourran, Grattan, O'Connell, and Thos. Francis Meagher (the living here of the war, in favor of Abraham Lincoln), should at least have memory and braha the living hero of the war, in favor of Abraham Lincoln, should at least have memory and brains enough to know that the power which has for more than one hundred years, from the time that Castlereagh brought the bill by which Ireland was ucited with England, seeking to enslave him, is now as earnest and anxious to have Abraham Lincoln defeated as is Jefferson Davis himself. [Cheers.] It would, indeed, he a sorry spectacle to see any such sight as this at any other time, but it is a far sorrier sight, when, with these facts before them, we find any of our adopted citizens allowing themselves to be led against the flag of their country. But we shall succeed. There is nothing but the interposition of Divine Providence which can defeat there election of Abraham Lincoln. [Cheers.] Nothing short of some such catastrophe as that which submerged the cities of the Old World thousands of years ago can prevent it. And when he is re-elected, mark the prevent it. And when he is re-elected, mark the prophecy! I will not discuss the idea that there is to be resistance to Mr. Lincoln's election, for I have to be resistance to Mr. Lincoln's election, for I have never yet seen men who are too cowardly to go into the army brave enough to resist a great popular verdict at the polls. [Cheers.] I remember well that we had a similar threat prior to the election in our State on the 11th of October. That if this was done, and that was done, and this was not done and that was not dore, there would be an uprising the morning after the election, and yet, gentlemen, I have never seen a school boy, who, with his satchel under his arm, after having refused to go to school, and after having been soundly thrashed by his good mother—I have never seen him go more submissively to his arm, after having refused to go to school, and after having been soundly thrashed by his good mother—I have never seen him go more submissively to his task, than these men who were so vociferous and blatant before that election. So it will be again. The only thing we can proceed upon will be this—for we are the party, not only of war against the common enemy, but we are the party of peace among ourselves. We are for fighting those who are against our country, and we are for making peace with those who have the right to exercise the privilege of suffrage at home. But there is such a thing as waking the sleeping lion, and when these men, who have provoked all these troubles, who have plunged us into this sca of blood, who have put to use their own rhetoric, "a dead man or the memory of a dead man in every house"—when they attempt to array themselves against us, who are simply desirous of continuing the rule of the present Administration to save our Government—when they lay their hands upon the altar of American liberty, let them beware. But to my prophecy. I predict that those very men who have been arraigning Abraham Lincoln for unconstitutional and arbitrary acts; who have been charging that he desires to continue this war; that he is accumulating a debt never to be paid; that he and his friends have grown rich through the profits of this conflict—I predict that these weeks after his re-election is announced, there will not be an intelligent man who has voted against him who will not admit that he was deceived by the leaders who have gulled him with these assertions. I have no right to declare a policy, and if I had the right I would not declare it now. I have no right to mark out what Mr. Lincoln's Intentions will be when he is again chosen; but this I believe, and I say it in a conscientious spirit, bound by the connexion that will inspire me to-morrow to give him my vote, that so far from a policy of exciting the evil passions of those who may be disappointed in his election—so far from any personal purpose extermination against the Southern people—so far from a policy of exciting the evil passions of those who may be disappointed in his election—so far from any personal purpose to continue this war—so far from any desire to refuse terms of peace that may be offered by the misguided masses of the South—so far from doing any one of these things, he will astonish the people by the magnanimity, and the prudence, and the statesmanship of his conduct. [Cheers.] We are all radicals at times. We are all extreme men at times, especially those of us who have reason to believe that our cause is so entirely right, and that at times, especially those of us who have reason to believe that our cause is so entirely right, and that the action of our adversaries is so entirely wrong; but when a man is placed in power, surrounded by all the responsibilities of the imperial position occupied by the President of the United States, he is, or necessity, a real conservative. He must take responsibilities. As Mr. Lincoln said himself with a wisdom almost mapired: "What I am laboring for is the restoration of my country, If I can have the whole Union, with slavery or without slavery, I will have it; but I will have the Union." [Cheers.] Now, in saying this, recollect there are some things that never can be restored. You may restore the Union, but you cannot restore slavery; [Cheers.] You may restore the liberties of the derestore the Union, but you cannot restore slavery; [Cheers.] You may restore the liberties of the deluded white men of the South, but you cannot restore the black men to slavery, no more than you can lay your hands upon the sun and with polluted finger tarnish it. No more, my countrymen, than you can infuse into the reeking, putrescent corpse the breath of life. But we can have a restored people. We can bring back those deluded men who have been contending against the flag which in their hearts they have always loved, although their leaders have not. We can bring them back and banish the conspirators to the farthest regions of the earth, there to wander with the ineffaceable brand upon their brows; never again to be received into civilized communities, and only to be remembered as the baffled murderers of their country. [Cheers.] Having spoken more than my time, with my thanksfor the patience with which you have heard me, and awaiting your reply to-morrow evening, by telegraph, hoping to hear that you have given to Abraham Lincoln the electoral votes he is entitled to, I bid you a respectful good night.

Three cheers were called and given with a hearty good will for Col. Forney. Mr. Forney was followed by Col. Fitzgerald, in a brief, pointed, and able speech. After him came Colonel Montgomery, who was more than usually eloquent. As we left, Mr. Chase, of Mississippi, was speaking to the mighty throng. Rev. Mr. Coates of this city, and J. W. Baer, "the Buckeye Blacksmith," had just returned from the counties of Sussex and Kent, where they did great service by their masterly appeals. If Delaware don't go for Lincoln to-day, it will not be because the Union men have failed in their high duty. LARGE UNION MEETING AT JOHNSTOWN. JOHNSTOWN, PA., Nov. 4, 1864. Sin: We had a crowded meeting here last night at the new Union Hall; about 2,000 persons, principally working men, from the Cambria Iron Works, at this place. Brig. Gen. Klernan was the orator of the evening, and for two hours he chained the attention of the audience by a masterly oration. All will be right in this vicinity for the Union. "The triangular conspiracy of England, the rebel, and Copperhead," as Gen. Klernan expresses it, cannot prevail here. THE CAUSE IN OLD BERKS. SPARTLESVILLE, Pa., Nov. 6, 1864. GEORGE FRANCIS TRAIN AT THE STATE CAPITAL (Special Despatch to The Press.)

HARRISBURG, Nov. 7.—George Francis Train closed his tour through the interior counties of Pennsylvania here to-night. He addressed, in his characteristic style; the largest meeting that has assembled in the State capital during the present ding suit at the Brown Stone Clothing Hall o contest. Notwithstanding a Democratic meeting was called for to-night, Mr. Train's reputation as the champion of America at home and abroad Rockhill & Wilson. Nos. 603 and 605 Chestnut street above Sixth. brought together classes representing all parties. Telling arguments, bitter sarcasm, and amusing anecdotes followed in rapid succession from the lips of the gifted orator. If his numerous speeches throughout the State were as well received, and produced the same effect as in this city, he has rendered ncalculable service to the cause of his country. He ran hastily over the localities he had visited. addressing as many as four meetings a day; has gone through in his canvass the Lehigh, the Schuylkill, the Susquehanna, and the Allegheny Valleys, and in crossing from valley to valley spoke to masses who heard of his coming. A judge of public sentiment, as he has proved himself to be heretofore, he predicts a glorious success to the Union cause. While here he enjoys the hospitality of the Hon.

A STRAW. To the Editor of The Press: Sin: The vote was taken on the express train from Harrisburg to Pittsburg, on Friday evening, by one of each party, and it stood—383 for Lincoln and 119 for McClellan. ANOTHER STRAW. To the Editor of The Press: Sin: The following vote was taken on the early norning train from Washington on Saturday:

For Lincoln, 338; for McClellan, 83. M. I. WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, November 7.

FARRAGUT-IMPORTANT CAPTURES OF BLOCKADE RUNNERS. The Navy Department, yesterday, received de patches from Rear Admiral PORTER, commanding the North Atlantic Blockading Squadron, announcing the capture of two more steamers off Wilmington, running the blockade, namely, the Lucy and the Annie. The following particulars are now The Lucy was captured on the 2d inst., by the Santiago de Cuba, having a cargo of 414 bales of cotton and 25 tons of tobacco. She was built in Liverpool, by Jones, Guigan, & Co.; is an iron or steel side wheel steamer, of about 500 tons, and similar to the Banshee, captured some time ago, and now in the naval service. The Annie was captured on the 31st ult., by the Wilderness and Niphon, having a cargo of 518 bales of cotton, 30 tons of tobacco, and 15 barrels of turpentine. She was built by DALGEEN, of London; is a double screw s and of the same class as the Don, now in the naval service, and some eight others which have been captured or destroyed within a year, all built by the same party. The following captures are reported to the Navy Department by Admiral FARBAGUT: On the night of the 15th of October the Mexican schooner Louisa was captured four miles south of St. Louis Pass, with an assorted cargo, and on the 19th ult. the three-masted schooner Emily, while attempting to run out of St. Louis Pass, laden with about 130 bales of cotton. Both of these captures were made by the United States steamer Mobile, Acting Volunteer Lieutenant GIRAND. On the 12th of October the British schooner Louisa was captured by the United States steamer Chocura, Lieutenant Commanding R. W. MEADE, Jr., with a general cargo. She belonged to Nassau, and was ostensibly bound from Havana to Matamoros, but when discovered was making for Aransas Pass. FIFTY THOUSAND VOTERS GONE HOME. Hutchins, a lady of some prominence, residing at No. 182 North Charles street, was arrested to-day by the provost marshal, and confined in jail on the charge of procuring a sword to be presented to Harry Gilmor, the notorious raider. The arrest was made in consequence of intelligence gathered from a rebel mai captured in the hands of a rebel mail carrier who was about leaving the city. He had the sword in his possession, and the letters he carried pointed out the parties who were engaged in making this tribute of regard to Gilmor. A WORD TO ELECTION OFFICERS.

During the past ten days the courts have been busy naturalizing foreigners. Under a decision in the celebrated case of Mann v. Cassidy, no man has the right to vote unless he has been assessed ten days before the election, and of course a foreigner must have been, or should have been, naturalized ten days before the election, in order to be legally assessed. This decision does not apply to soldiers who are entitled to be naturalized after a term of service to the country. Election officers ought not to receive the votes of any civilian whose papers have been taken out within the ten days previous to the election; and they ought also to well scrutinize the naturalization papers bearing the date of the year 1856. It is a well established fact that in that year many thousand fraudulent natuhat in that year many thousand fraudulent natualization papers were issued in Philadelphia. KEYSTONE CLUB QUARTERS.
