LITERATURE AND ART. - M. Toulmin Smith writes a long letter to the Wimes, describing a book discovered somewhere on the borders of Wales, which he believes to be the "own prayer-book" of Shakspeare. Mr. Smith says: "We may expect other books belonging to Shakspeare to be yet found." — Mr. Boucleault, assisted by Mr. John Brougham and Mr. Emery, is to produce a new piece at the Dublin Theatre on the 7th, entitled, "Arrah na Pogue; or, the Wicklow Wedding," which, he altegs, has been specially written for the Dublin specials. — A communication from Flensburg has the following: "A huge block of granite, which is to form the juneral monument of the Danes who were killed during the assault on Duppel, was yesterday sent there from this place. It is a cube, on which is the following inscription: 'Here lie the bodies of 200 Danes.'" —A plaster model of the Elcho Challenge Shield was placed in the vestibule of the Parliament House, at Edinburgh, on the 1st, with a good/deal of ceremony. The shield itself has not yet been completed. It will be remembered that, at the last Wimbledon meeting, the Scottish eight beat their English opponents in the match for this trophy.

—John Leech earned a great amount of popularity by his sketches of Mr. Briggs; and it is a curious circumstance that he left town for Homburg on the day when Mr. Briggs, of Hackney, was murdered (the 9th of July), and died on the day when Muller was: convicted of the murder of Mr. Briggs. Briggs.

REMEMBRANCES TO THE EDITOR.—It used to be a custom in the country districts, with newly-married couples, to send on the eve of their union a cake, or a subscription, or something else of value, to the editor of their country paper. The custom has become nearly obsolete, but now and then we hear of instances which bring back our recollections of the "good old times." A contemporary, in Hollidaysburg, has been thus favored, and celebrates it in this strain:

Accompanying two marriage notices published to day were two delicious cakes. A wedding cake in a printing effice produces the most screne results. Its sacred associations, its suggestion of an unbroken dream of happiness, neutralize the rude diabolism of its gloomy walls, and almost humanize its young imps. It illumines its inky atmosphere, and sheds over all a hallowed light. It is the pure and beautiful amid blackness. In return for these delicious souvenirs of a wedding day, this office desires to rise above a mere question of distorties and view the world outside its dingy windows in the light of all that's beautiful and good. It summons up again its old feelings of kindness, and bespeaks for four—for her, for him, for them—the well-wishes of its well wishing heart, and the blessing that makes happy. It hopes that life may shed a milder and calmer beam upon these pairs that often falls upon many. It would give them ever the sunny bloom of hope, ending in the fruitton of joys and prosperity. It would send them out upon their happy lives girt and armed with heart-chains of love intervoven in pleasant bondage till the end—happy till the end. All this, this grimy old office would wish for these married twain, for this old office has always known

"There's nothing half so sweet in life office has always known

"There's nothing half so sweet in life As Love's young dream." As Love's young dream."

EDITOR RETIRED.—Joseph C. Hays, Esq., after spending more than a quarter of a century in the publishing business, at Meadville, Pa., has sold the Journal establishment and retired from its editorial management. During his long editorial career, Mr. Hays has been an earnest and persistent anti-slavery man, the prominent sentiment in his valedictory being that "Slavery was about the only cause of all our trouble as a nation." Mr. John D. Nicholas, a thorough Union Republican, succeeds Mr. Hays.

THE OPENING.

Mr. Simpson, on behalf of the Commonwealth, said: The case before you, Mr. Alderman, is in reterence to the election officers of the Eighth division of the Fourth ward, in which they are charged with misdemeanor, partly under the law of 1860 and partly under the law of 1860 provides for the appointment of watchers upon the petition of a certain number of citizens who may believe such appointment to be necessary to have an election conducted honestly. The law makes it a misdemeanor for any one, so appointed as a watcher, to refuse or neglect to do the duty enjoined upon him by the court. We will prove that the Court of Common Pleas appointed three med as watchers, who, upon the morning of the election, proceeded to the election division, found the door locked against the election division, found the door locked against them, and were refused admittance. For what purpose this was done will be for the defence to show. I am also advised that, in consequence of this refusal, the election officers put into the ballot box three hundred and more of illegal votes. The two principal points I will be able to prove by competent witnesses.

Cross-examined.—I am one of the persons appointed as a watcher; Joseph Lyndall handed the paper or certificate to me in the city executive committee room; I was not present in the Gourt of Common Pleas; Mr. Doran had the certificate when we applied for admission at the election poll; I don't remember having the certificate in my hand; I do not know where it is now; I don't know whether the seal of the Court was attached to it or not; I don't know whose name was signed to it; Joseph Lyndall wrote my hame in the certificate; I think he did, as he took the pen to write my name; this was not in the Court of Common Pleas room; Thos. Doran and Mr. Edwards went with me to the election poll; can't say who the election officer was, who was spoken to; suppose he was an election officer, as he was in the room; don't suppose that any one ought to be there unless legally authorized to be there; they looked at the paper; can't say who looked, as the window was small, and we could not see distinctly; I did not hear any conversation between the officers and Doran; I was appointed a day or two before the election; I did not give notice to any body that I had been appointed.

Mr. Simpson. I will withdraw the petition for the present, until I can have Mr. Doran here.

By the Alderman. When can you have him here?

Mr. Simpson. I have sent for him. If I am to be met with objections, I shall make a formal application to the court for the ballot-boxes and papers for substantial proof.

Mr. Brooke. I object to the holding over of any of the defendants on any such grounds as stated by the attorney for the prosecution. The Commonwealth should have had the case ready; but, instead of this, we are told that the ballot-boxes are to be obtained for the purpose of hunting evidence; this searching for evidence is a thing I don't see. I therefore ask for the discharge of the defendants.

A pause of five minutes ensued, and then the silence was broken as follows:

Mr. Brooke. If the counsel for the Commonwealth can prove by Mr. Doran that these defendants refused admittance, then I say this is good ground to ask for a continuance of the case.

Mr. Simpson. I will prove it.

A young man giving the name of William Cook, hailing from the state of Ohio, was arraigned yesterday morning on the charge of rebbing a store on Second street, above Race, at an early hour yesterday morning. Officer Ben. Shourds, while patrolling his beat, observed that the night light was darkened in the store. Upon making a closer investigation he observed that an umbrella had been placed over the hole, but under one corner, made by the folds he had a pretty clear view of the interior. He watched the thief for nearly two hours. The fellow took his own time in selecting goods. Choice articles he wrapped around his body; and then put on any number of shirts; then crammed his pockets with divers things, mostly handsome cravats, with breastpins. ets with divers things, mostly handsome cravats, with breastplus.

At first, the fellow looked long, lean and lank, as a half-starved rebel, but now with his outfit he was a sort of Daniel Lambert looking kind of a fellow, or Shakspeare's Falstaff. He had entered the store through a transom sash, but his artificial rotundity would not permit a ready egress through the same aperture. Besides this the front door was fastened on the outside by means of a paddock. His only means of egress was through the rear. Officer Shourds watched his movements like a cat watching a mouse, and finally confronted the thief on the public highway.

Official salutation was extended, and it was not long before the despoiler of the store was locked up

A man named Callahan was arraigned at the Central Station yesterday afternoon, on the charge of receiving bounty-money, and withholding the same. The evidence developed the fact that a man named Henry McFadden recently enlisted in the United States navy, under the name of Henry Randolph Lewis. He testified that he enlisted at the rendezvous on Front street, below Spruce, on the 2d inst.; he did not know who enlisted him. The witness gave a power of attorney to defendant to draw the money, with the understanding that it should be given to the wife of the enlisted man.

Mrs. McFadden testified that she had not received any money from the defendant; he offered her one hundred dollars, which she declined, unless he gave her the whole amount; he replied that he would give the balance when it suited him.

The defendant was required to enter bail in the sum of $2,000 to await a further hearing.

IARCENY OF A WATCH.

Frank McNamee was arraigned yesterday afternoon, on the charge of stealing a watch valued at twelve dollars, the property of John O'Hara. The evidence elicited the fact that Mr. O'Hara's brother had the watch; he went to a tavern, took a seat in a rocking chair; and fell asleep. When he awoke he missed his watch. The timepiece was found in the possession of Mr. J. Fox, the keeper of a coallyard in the upper part of the city. He in turn said he received it from McNamee for a ton of coal. McNamee was arrested, and at first denied all knowledge of the affair, that he had never seen the watch. He subsequently admitted that he purchased it for the sum of nine dollars. The case went over for another hearing. LARCENY OF A WATCH.
