Epgiand, Brazil, and the United States. The London journals which sympathize with the rebels here have fallen into paroxysms of rage at the seizure of the pirate Florida in Brazilian waters. The Times does not say very much (perhaps, like Col. O'KELLY'S famous parrot, it "thinks the more"), but the Morning Herald and the Standard, facetiously represented in Punch, over and over again, by the late John LEECH, as the Mrs. Harris and Mrs. Gamp of the London press, are very violent and terrifically abusive. "It is not to be tolerated," Mrs. Harris says, "that the law of nations shall thus be violated," and Mrs. Gamp shricks out, in an echo like the continent, it will monopolize the business of the PADDY BLAKE's at Killarney, "it is the duty of all maritime powers in Europe to help Brazil, which is weak, and interfere, with lone of the probabilities. But the subject cannon, if necessary, to recover the Florida from its American captors."

All this indignation is thrown away. so far as England is concerned, for, thanks to Earl RUSSELL'S fostering care, England and Brazil are not upon speaking terms, have not been since September, 1861, and are not likely to be while Lord RUSSELL continues in office. As usual, Lord Rus-SELL blundered and bullied into a misunderstanding (Brazil being a comparatively weak power,) and though the arbi-'trator to whom the case was referred has declared that Lord RUSSELL was the party to blame, no concession, no apology has yet been made. Truly did DRYDEN say : " Forgiveness to the injured doth belong,

They never pardon who commit the wrong." Chiefly because two officers and a chaplain of the British Navy, who misconducted themselves after dining and drinking in the suburbs of Rio Janeiro, were arrested as "drunk and disorderly," not being in uniform and declining to give their names and rank, a Brazilian vessel was seized by a British war-steamer, in retaliation, the British ambassador was recalled, and all diplomatic relations between the two countries suspended. The King of the ticket. Belgians, to whom the case was referred, gave his decision entirely in favor of Brazil (on 18th June, 1863), but Lord Rus-SELL, albeit condemned by the British Parliament also, has not made any effort to restore matters in statu quo, by apology or concession. Under these circumstances we do not distinctly see much chance of England's taking any steps to help Brazil in this matter of the Florida. It is said that Brazil is very much incensed at the capture of this pirate. Anger without sufficient cause, we think. The fact is, that as far back as May, 1863, a strong representation was made to the Foreign Secretary-of Brazil on continued and flagrant breaches of neutrality on the part of | A Convention to appoint delegates from the Brazilian officials in the ports of Bahia

THE "WORLD'S HEALTH ASSOCIATION" STOCKS, TURSDAY, NEXT.-See Thomas & Sons' ad has been holding meetings at Hope Chapel, possi bly with an eye to the conversion of all men to the theories of hydropathy. Thursday, Dr. Spaulder of Pennsylvania, delivered a long address pertinent to this subject, in which all unhydropathic quack eries were duly attended to. A peculiar feature of the meeting was a speech by a lady, who, not content with forcing cold water upon the world, stood boldly out for the rights of women, and fixed her eyes abstractedly on that future when the weaker sex will be allowed full freedom to dress, to act, to go and come, am and when they please.

ARRIVAL OF THE GOVERNOR ELECT. Mr. Fenton, the Governor elect, arrived at the Astor House, from Washington, last evening, He is in excellent spirits, and evidently bears well the fatigues of a political canvass. He is receiving the congratulations of his numerous personal and political friends. A deputation waited upon him this morning to tender a public reception, which it is understood that he will accept at an early day.

"CORIOLANUS."-Shakspeare, in his sublime tra gedy of "Coriolanus" adheres with historical fidelity o Plutarch's life of that haughty patrician warrior He opens the play in that early period of Rome's history when ber people were divided and her councils distracted by the bitter contests of the pa trinians and plebelans for power. Marcius sides, o course, with his class, and is presented as "chie enemy of the people."

After Marcius' capture of Corloli, and his accept ance of the name of Coriolanus, in honor of that victory, the poet shows the popular violence towards him to be unjust, and holds the hero up to genera admiration. First, through the widowed mother who guided him to honor and fame. What a giorious ploture of a Roman matron is presented in the exquisite scene where Volumnia, the mother, and Vir gilia, the wife, talk of him they love according to their several natures:

This is a noble preparation for the scenic exhibit NO NEW MOVEMENT TO REPORT-DOINGS OF THE tion of the deeds of the triumphant warrior. One more instance of the skill with which Shakspeare WASEINGTON, Nov. 18 -A letter from the Army wins to his hero the homage of all hearts. The scepe in the second act, where Coriolanus contemptuously solicits the suffrages of the Roman populace for the consulship, is one of thrilling power and beauty. The people have justice enough Rhinoceroses wear sole-leather clothes, and they do not follow the example of sensible humans by getting new suits at the Brown Stone Clothing Hall of Rockhill & Wilson, Nos. 603 and 605 Chestnut street, above Sixth.

VANDALISM .- The Washington Star says: Persons of both sexes have been guilty of clipping pieces from the window curtains, sofa, lounge, and chair covers at the President's house. They even go so far as to pull the papering from the walls. and steal the brackets from the windows, and tas sels from the curtains. This practice is indulged in to secure relics of visits to the Presidential mansion. Three ladies of high position have been canght in the act within a few days, one of whom fainted. Uncle Abe has to wear the tails of his ress coat he bought of Charles Stokes & Co., under the Continental, last summer, in his pockets, to keep the ladies from clipping them off.
