sanctified; with the whole land a temple, and every home a tabernacle, and every heart an altar, and every breath praise, would come the ancient chant of HALLEUJAH! and the brotherly challenge—Now let us unite for the conversion of the world!

Oh, what a witnessifor Jasus is there! Maintaks the vision opens. I see—I see, at least the property of the Lord! Where are the glory of the Lord! Where is the Bedonin Arab—the wandering Shelk with his plundering horde? And where is the Latin monk, and the Greek anchorite, and the Armenian, the Druss, the Copt, with theft ignorance and supersition—where are they all? All gone, and the promised kingdom of "Priests and Levites," the great missionary nation of Christian Israel, established in their stead! And where are Jerusalem, and Rethany, and Bethlehem, and Mezareth? And where are Genessareth and the Jordan? And where are Gethsemans, and Calvary, and Olivet? All these, where their fathers rejected, and deepised Him; derided and mocked Him; buffeted and smote Him; disrobed; and scourged, and crucified Him. But, lo! now, wherever they go, they worship Him! Wherever they go they seem to see "Him whom they pierced?" and, with wonder ever fresh, and gratitude ever fervent, they say, "He was wounded for our transgressions; He was bruised for our iniquities; the obastlement of our peace was upon Him; and by His stripes we are heade! Oh, bleesed be he that comet in the name of the Lord!" We are here only because Jesus was here! We are one with each other, and one with all His people, only because Jesus keill here! Hossanna to the Son of David! Hallelujah to the Son of God! Wherever His sufferings were endured, there we confess Him our Messiah—the Saviour and So voices in the ears of all classes of its people, and inspire its own lovers and champions of Freedom with ambition energy, and hope. This is the great reason why foreign courts and aristocracies are so much opposed to us in our present struggle with rebellion. They are afraid of our example, and have reason to be afraid. They would rejoice to divide us, in order to impair, if not destroy, the force of our example. But, according to the anticipations in view of which I am thus speaking, this example, instead of being impaired, is destined to become, in the future, more perfect in form and more mighty in influence, by far, than it ever hat been in the past. England cannot act thus. Neither can France act thus.

They have no basis for such action. Visitors from all-parts of the world may throng their chief cities, but they go as fast as they come. They do not pass from the cities into the rural districts to settle there, and then report to their friends at home. If they did, what would, they gain by such settlements, and what news could they send to their old associates to attract them to the same places? No, no; our advantages are peculiar. No other country has a record of such varied nativities, or holds such vital relations to other realms. With us, immigration, already so great, is sure to become still greater. One can scarcely be extravagant in imaging the millions yet to come for a share in our splendid heritage. And, fast as they come, unting with their predecessors, they will make our example more and more complete, impressive, and decisive. According to the ciculation of our recent consus, by the close of this century—that is, within the next thirty-six years—our population will amount to a hundred millions! Many here to day may live to see that number—all republican and all Protestant. And what then? Why, then; if not before, the Promessaring and urging the rights of the people, must be to the spirit of reform, and the power of the people, asserting and urging the rights of the people, must be to the spi Church and State. And what next? Gan any hesitate for the answer? Surely it is fixed as fate. Then the Carrhollo Powers must yield. Vast and mighty as their armies may be—armies of priests and armies of soldiers combined—they shall no longer be able to shut out the light of truth. It will not approach them then as torches held in human hands. Like sunshine, surmounting all earthly obstructions, it will break from heaven upon their mountains, and spread abroad over all their vales. It will fiash upon every payonet, and blaze upon every crucifix. It will penetrate the windows of every palace, and of every cathedral, and gleam, like an angel of deliverance, in every dungeon, and every cell, and every home. It will dazle into blindness the eyes that dare affront it, and burn like fire into the hearts that harden themselves against it. If need be, it will condense teelf into lightning, and turn its rays into thunderbolts to smite the Pope upon his throne, and the cardinais and bishops, the emperors and kings, that bow at his feet and offer him worship, overwhelming them with wrath for the honor of God and in mercy to the with wrath for the honor of God and in mercy to the people. In a word, the truth of the Highest must and will have "free course and be glorified."

Resides the two peculiar qualifications thus not ticed—our combination of Republicanism and Protestantism, and our current relationship to all other Christien countries—I might mention several more, perhaps of equal importance. One other, however, may be sufficient:

In the third place, therefore, it may be remarked that there is no other country in Christiendom in which Evangelical Christiantly is so commonly accepted as the only true Christiantly; or where Evangelical Christiantly is so commonly accepted as the two permarked that there is no other country in Christiendom in which Evangelical Christiantly is so commonly accepted as the only true Christiently; or where Evangelical Christians are so prominently active and influential.

Why, to speak only of the fighting material—alas for the necessity—one of our Evangelical denominations alone, as declared in my hearing by its chief presiding officer to its highest ascembly, has zent to the field a hundred thousand of its members! Amazing statement! A hundred thousand of the professed disciples of the meek and lowly Jasus, constrained by their consciences, as probably every man of them would say, to draw the sword; not, indeed, malignantly or offensively, but in dutiful subjection to the powers ordained of God on purpose to wield the sword in defence of good and for the deliverance of the people from the impositions and oppressions of evil. And how has all this come to pass? Do P praise the Churches for it? Not much! I grant that our Churches were always loyel, and to their sentiment of loyalty, under God, is to be attributed their present position. But, except some of the smallest, they were not always Abolitionists. They were hardly anti-slavery. If not pro-slavery, they were hardly anti-slavery. If not pro-slavery, they were hardly anti-slavery. If not pro-slavery, they were conservative; and, if it were not for reversione decided-abolitionism might be treated as ludicrous in the extreme. They regarded slavery as loyal, and the Southern Churches as loyal, and the Southern Churches as loyal, and the content of states as loyal, and the Southern Churches as loyal, and decarding it from their communition with notly horror. When, at last, the dreadfultruth was revealed to them by the bloody outerest of treason, then, so far to their credit they dilections from their communition of the general progress of Ohristianity, and especially for the reformation of Christendom itself. RELIGIOUS.

Is Ruence of the United States on Chris

A SERMON DELIVERED BY REV. THOMAS H. STOCK-TON, AT THE CHURCH OF THE NEW TESTAMENT.

Thour last discourse, we considered the subject of kentle Progress in connection with our own country, which, if its Christian example were perioded as it ought to be and might be, would become no greatest social regenerator in the world—at last until the grand missionary developments of the laws.

the greatest social regenerator in the world—at least until the grand missionary developments of the Jews.

Now, let us proceed to a contemplation of similar progress among other nations, especially those within the present limits of Chaisterdom.

I confess, with prolound sensibility, that I do not advance to this contemplation without the pressure of very grave discouragements. It seems shoots as much as our faith can venture to anticipate the thorough conversion and sanctification of these United States; although, as soon as peace shall be made and the Union restored, the Gospel of Christ, the Church of Christ, and the Sprit of Ohrist will possess an entirely unobstructed range of the whole national territory for the joint exertion of their utmost power. No Roman Catholic hierarchy-controls our civil Government to make it exclusive of Protestant operations. No High Church Protestant Establishment exists here to domineer over Evangelical dissenters and disable their movements. Here, the more spiritual, zealous; and self-denying the professors of our holy religion may be, the better is their opportunity for doing good, the greater is the confidence of the people, the more earnest their approbation, and the warmer their welcome. And yet even here, when we think of the common and mighty force of natural corruption, and the rage for wealth, sand the pride of selfshness, and the prevalence of sensual indulgence and fashionable dishay, and the origination of Mormonism, Spritmalism, and other importures and fashionable dishay, and the origination of Mormonism, Spritmalism, and other importures and fashionable dishay, and the origination of Mormonism, Spritmalism, and other importures and fashionable dishay, and the origination of Mormonism, Spritmalism, and other importures and fashionable dishay, and plunderings of political parties, and the mean and cruel conspiracies of Treason, and the demoralizations and desolutions of war, and all the other difficulties in the way of realizing complete national and Christian re redemption ever can be consummated among us. And were it not that the Gospel is a Divine Revela-tion, and the true Church a Divine Institution, and thing." Was not Onrist the presiding agent in the primitive conquests of Pentecost? What said St. Petact to the amazed multitude gathered in doubt, and inquiring one of snotner: "What meaneth this?" First, he declared to them the resurrection and ascension of the Lord Jesus; and then he added these words: "Therefore, being by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Ghost He—that is, Christ, He—hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear." The question, therefore, between the two classes of interpreters, is not whether the triumph of Ohristianity is to be achieved with or without the presence of Ohrist; but is simply and only this: Whether Ohrist is to come down from Heaven, personally and visibly, as He will at the last day, for the attainment of this object, or merely shed forth His Spirit, in adequate power and glory, as He did on the day of Pentecost? The pre-millennialists say He must come personally and visibly. Their orthodox opponents say is is enough that He come spiritually and invisibly. Without opposing spiritually and invisibly. Without opposing stitus agreement of both parties on the main point, and not doubting the propriety of God's plan, let it prove to be what it may, I say for myself, and as many as are of the same mind, either way or any way, personally or spiritually, only "Come, Lord Jesus!" and, if this be the appointed time, "Come quickly!" For vain is the help of man! vain are even Divine instrumentalities in human hands without Divine aid in the use of them! Even the Gospel must fail, and the Church must fail, without Thy constant superintendence and all-controlless providence and grace!

Our special subject opens to me in this way. I cannot affirm that it is the correct view, but it is plausible and pleasant, and will reward attention: I mean that our own country is destined to be the chief national instrumentality in the reformation of Christendom; and then that converted Christendom in whole, in connection, with the converted Jews, by that time re-established in their own land, splendidly developed in all their resources, and spirit of Christ an essentially divine, confipre-
