MONDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1864. In accordance with custom, and to enable all the persons employed in this office to keep the Christmas holiday, no paper will be issued from this office to morrow. THE FALL OF SAVANNAH.

To day is doubly a holiday. Observed throughout the North as the anniversary of peace, it will be given new joy by the bloodless triumph of war. The flag will float more proudly to-day everywhere, because it once more waves over Savannah. That city is SHERMAN'S Christmas gift to the nation.

We cannot yet appreciate the greatness of its value. Its capture shows the colossal strides of the war in this year, and nobly closes the series of grand, decisive victories that crown it. No point on the Atlantic coast is worth so much as a base of future operations, and though HARDEE with his fifteen thousand men has probably escaped, this loss is of the slightest comparative importance. Though we have taken one hundred and fifty guns, and thirty-three thousand bales of cotton, with vast quantities of other material, which will swell the pecuniary value of the prize to the Government at least an hundred millions of dollars, even this is a trifle to its inestimable worth as a new basis of the war. It is ours beyond danger of loss. We can hold it with ease, and establish it as a base in the heart of the rebellion, influencing the whole war. From that point all our armies in the Cotton States, and all that are to go to them, will be easily supplied, with speed and safety. SHERMAN at Atlanta threatened the interior, but he had his lines of communication to protect all the way to Nashville; but rebel cavalry, bad roads. and distance are embarrassments removed by the capture of Savannah. It has no rear to be protected. It is a fortress seaward and landward, commanding' the entrance to the productive States of the rebellion, and the railroad lines along the coast. It solves the problem of coast attack. Charleston, defying bombardment, must fall now. SHERMAN will speedily attack it. Thence we strike at all the railroads leading north and west, and break down the Atlantic entrenchments of the rebellion. When Atlanta was taken, September 23d, we pointed out that Savannah would be the next city SHERMAN would attack. We now predict that he will in a few months restore us the whole coast.

The capture of Savannah is probably the most valuable of all our victories. Others have had far greater immediate results, as Gettysburg which saved Pennsylvania, and Nashville which crushed a whole army at a blow; but from Savannah we shall make another war. We do not see how the military power of the rebellion can survive this terrible defeat one year.

The Poor of Philadelphia.

It is in very great measure owing to our charitable societies that beggars are so seldom seen in the streets of Philadelphia. It is true that this city possesses an almshouse in which about three thousand of the destitute can be accommodated, and that the proportion of the poor to the whole population is not as large as in other cities. But there is far more poverty than the prosperous citizen, in the festivity of his Christmas, is likely to believe. There is much confessed and undisguised destitution, too great to be concealed or to be ashamed, which is yet scarcely known to those who live in the wealthy sections of the city. One must go to the by-streets and suburbs to find how extreme is its suffering, and to the courts and prisons to realize how easily it is transformed into crime. But this open poverty is undoubtedly exceeded in extent by that which shrinks from confessing its existence We have thousands of working men and women who cannot obtain work sufficient to support their families; thousands who earn so little that the loss of a few weeks' salary by sickness is sufficient to cause great suffering. It is impossible that private charity should reach an evil which has so many causes and forms, and it is indeed beyond the power of organized benevolence to do more than relieve what cannot be prevented. The almshouse receives the worst cases, and for the poor who cannot, and should not seek that public shelter, the prosperous portion of the community are bound to care. The poor American should not go to the almshouse; it is not wholesale charity that he needs, but special help. It is fortunate that we have many societies which not only supply food and clothing, but give the unfortunate man a new start in life-an opportunity of sustaining himself. The appeal we print to day gives a general exhibition of the organized benevolence of Philadelphia. These societies are an honor to the city; they are managed by our best people; each of them is entitled to thorough confidence and aid; and though we do not give a full list, it is so nearly complete that our readers cannot fail to see how inextricably the dark threads of poverty are woven into the whole fabric of our society. Among the organizations for the employment of the poor, the relief of the sick and the widows, wives, and families of soldiers, the support of foundlings and orphans, incurables, the aged and infirm, the reform of street-children, criminals, and the rescue of those who are on the road to crime, it may be hard to choose which to assist, but the choice cannot be wrong. There is much to do, both in private and public charity, but for fifty persons who will gladly relieve suffering that appeals directly to their sympathy, there is probably but one who will search out poverty in its retreat. Through the instrumentality of these societies benevolence may reach countless deserving cases, and we are confident that the mere presentation of their purposes will be sufficient to largely diminish the suffering of the poor of Philadelphia in this season of general fes-United States Sanitary Commission.

Out of this the buildings and fitting-up in Logan Square cost nearly $86,000, and other expenses came to $58,500 more. It will be remarked by all who observe the facts that the expenditure has been very small indeed. This is mainly attributable to two circumstancesfirst, that economy was adhered to throughout the whole affair, and next, that the ladies and gentlemen who acted as managers bore their own expenses, day by day, re-- fusing to draw on the funds of the concern in the slightest degree. Large as is the sum realized, it will yet be augmented by returns from several committees. "Charity never faileth," was one of St. PAUL's most emphatic declarations to the Corinthians, and it never can fail when it is applied, with honest Christian feeling, to the holy purposes of humanity. The success of the Great Central Fair was chiefly owing, under God, to the admirable organization, the untiring energy, and the wide liberality of the persons, male and female, who devoted themselves to getting it up and working it through. These efficiently represented the three States of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and Delaware: but the ladies and gentlemen of Philadelphia—then, more than ever, the City of Brotherly Love-more especially dedicated their minds and hands, their intellect and their money, to making this Fair the most successful enterprise ever undertaken and completed, in any country, solely with a humanitarian purpose. It was most desirable that some permanent record of a noble undertaking such as this should be made, and we are happy to say that the United States Sanitary Commission, in Philadelphia, have brought out, in a handsome volume, small quarto, a "Memorial of the Great Central Fair," illustrated with photographs executed by Mr. R. NEWELL. The typography of this book has been executed at the Caxton Press of SHERMAN & Co., and Mr. CHAS. J. STILLE, at the request of the Executive Committee. has drawn up the Memorial, which, indeed is a true history of the origin and progress of the whole undertaking. Out of a vast accumulation of material he has compiled an account of the Fair which is reliable. without the slightest deviation into exaggeration. The newspapers of the day, upon which he has largely drawn, have supplied him with abundance of datahe has the credit of educing order out of their chaos. WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25. THE POTOMAC ICE BLOCKADE. The ice blockade on the Potomac still continues but the mail-steamer Matilda, from City Point, with the mail and passengers, succeeded in cutting her way up to Alexandria on Friday. Below Alexandria, near Indian Head, the ice is quite thick, and the Matilda was compelled to push through under a full head of steam. The blockade between Washington and Alexandria is complete, and for the present the passengers and mails for City Point will o forwarded from here to Alexandria by rail, from which place they will take the boats. The mailsteamer Daniel Webster, and the transports Morris, Orgood, and Seneca remain ice bound off Giesboro Point. Some fifteen barges and schooners, laden with forage for the Quartermaster's Department, are securely fastened in the ico on the river between Washington and Alexandria, and are unable to reach the city. The ice-boat Atlantic, from Philadelphia, arrived here on Friday night, and is engaged to-day in endeavoring to open the channels. AN EXPEDITION AGAINST MOSEBY. The scouting party, consisting of detachments of he 8th, 13th, and 16th Illinois Cavalry, under the command of Light. spatch has been received this evening by the President from Gen. Sherman. It is dated at Savannah, on Thursday, the 22d inst., and announces his occupation of the city of Savannah and the capture of 150 heavy guns, plenty of ammunition, and about 25,000 bales of cotton. No other particulars are given.

An official despatch from General Foster to General Grant, dated on the 22d inst.. at 7 P. M., states that the city of Savannah was occupied by General Sherman on the morning of the 21st inst., and that on the preceding afternoon and night Hardee escaped with the main body of his infantry and light artillery, blowing up the ironclads and the navy yard. He enumerates as captured soo prisoners, 150 guns, 13 locomotives in good order, 190 cars, a large supply of ammunition and materials of war, 3 steamers, and 33,000 bales of cotton. No mention is made of the present position of Hardee's force, which had been estimated at about 15,000. The despatches of General Sherman and General Foster are as follows: "SAVANNAH, GA., Dec. 22, 1864.

He was subjected to a sworn examination by General Grant, and stated that intelligence of the fall of Savannah and of the capture of the entire force of 18,000 men, under Hardee had reached Richmond a few hours before he left. There was a report prevailing at the same time that Fort Fisher, commanding the entrance to Wilmington, had also fallen, through a combined attack by Butler's and Porter's forces, but this could not be traced to any reliable source.

> Chambersburg and Philadelphia. To the Editor of The Press: SIR: It may have appeared strange, if not up grateful, that no public acknowledgment has as yet een made of the generous ald which citizens of Philadelphia have so liberally bestowed upon the elpless and suffering ones in our midst after the burning of our town by the rebels on the 30th of July last. Without troubling your readers with the reason for this seeming dereliction, of one thing they may rest assured-namely, that the feeling of sincer gratitude on the part of our people has been un abated from the day of that terrible calamity until now; and not without good reason. It is true, the community around us, the neigh boring towns—the cities of Harrisburg and Lancaster and osher places-all had manifested towards us their sympathy and invaluable aid amid the ruin and desolation and helplessness of hundreds of our ellow-beings of all ages. But then these were, in a manner, our neighbors, and although, in many re spects, the more acceptable on that account, it was nevertheless, more natural to look for and expect the pulsations of generous hearts and the noble deeds of charity from those who were comparatively near than from those more remote. When, therefore, your city came forward with its spontaneous outflow of beneficence, as well in money as in the various necessaries of life, we all felt most deenly that Philadelphia had drawn us nearer to

friend indeed." I may remark, also, as matter of personal observation on my part, that some of the merchants of your city, (I allude now chiefly to grocers,) who were kind enough to send on various articles, and with most liberal hands, too, to private individuals, to be by them distributed among the needy, sent the very best of articles, thus ovincing the very best state of mind and heart on their part. And to this very day your merchants and dealers, of nearly every description, have continued to show forth a most kind and generous spirit towards our people, by cheerfully tendering their merchandise to them at reduced prices, or at cost. Now, for all this, we can only, in this general way, offer our sincere gratitude to the numerous denors of your city, many of whom we may in no other way be able to approach. Allow me, also, to add that, so far as my own knowledge and that of respectable and disinterested citizens of our town extends, the distribution of your gifts, by the Genetal Relief Committee, as well as those entrusted to private hands, was faithfully and judiciously attended to. The people of Philadelphia may rest assured that they have had a most intelligent, prudent, and worthy band of almoners in the distribu tion of their bounty. A better selection could scarcely have been made. I conclude by giving expression to what I am sure libankful for the liberal support we have received, and believe the expending of no similar sum has added so much to the comfort of our solders; in addition to which we have been compelled by circumstances to ascume temporary care of thousands of refugees, freedmen, and rebel deserters, nearly all of whom would have been forced to seek charity at your doors, and, domiciled in the lowest haunts of the city, would have caused much arnoyance and disturbance. They have remained with us generally but a few days, and places have been found for them away from the city, where their Is bor was in great request.

The arrangements for the care of the solders in our
