continuance of the war in this country. make the enemy tenacious of their capital to the Mr. GLADSTONE ought to be in good To-day there have been-reports aflost that the 5th spirits, for, though he has reduced the Corps was about to return to its old camp, but the taxes every year since he became Chancellor of the Exchequer, he can report that the revenue exceeds the expenditure. In 1865 he will have a surplus of about $15,-000,000, and is supposed to entertain the idea of still further reducing such fiscal burthens as fall heaviest upon the mass of the population. This he will do in preference to reducing the Income Tax, an impost which, if levied upon just principles, is one of the fairest that can be imposed. Its great defect in England, as with us, is that it is levied without any distinction between incoms and property-between un-Mr. GLADSTONE have his own way, he would cheerfully have the naval and military expenditure reduced to that of 1850, and England would save $50,000,000 per annum by that reduction. But England's excellent ally and nearest neighbor, NAPOLEON, is supposed to sleep with one eye open, watching for the unprepared moment when he can pounce upon England with a terrible invading army and avenge the defeat of Waterloo and the personal insults to the Rodolph of his line at St. Helena. It seems absurd, to a degree, to bestow-serious consideration upon such an almost impossible contingency, but British statesmen seem to believe in it, and the British people have to pay largely for the credulity and the fears of their rulers. Besides, it gives an excuse for maintaining naval and military defences at vast cost, and of thereby providing for the cadets of the high aristocratic families. After all, a reduction of $15,-000,000 in the national expenditures is what Mr. GLADSTONE, as a financier, may well be proud of. Up to this time, the Palmerston Government have not indicated what their public policy is to be during the Session which commenced a week ago. Most probably, Lord PALMERSTON has no determined policy for 1865, but would be remarkably well pleased if Parliament were to confine its action to passing Mr. GLADSTONE's financial measures and voting the money-bills, without parley or delay. But that terrible JOHN BRIGHT, whose republicanism has obtained him the distinction of Queen VICTORIA's personal antipathy, threatens to disturb the Palmerstonian equanimity by commencing a grave agitation for Parliamentary Reform, which 'would give the right of voting to five millions instead of to the one million of electors as at present. He may not take much by his motion, but he can annoy and very effectually damage the Queen's Ministry. The present Parliament assembled in June, 1859. The Derby-Ministry had proposed Parliamentary Reform, were defeated by the Opposition, and had to resign, Lord PALMERETON and his friends, who succeeded them, publicly promising a Reform Bill. This promise has not been fulfilled to this day, though the measure has become more and more necessary, year after year. Let us see what the Ministerial strength is, in the House of Commons, at this moment. In 1859, the Tory Administration was overthrown by a majority of 13 - the votes being 323 to 310. In 1861, the Tories in the House of Commons numbered 303, the Peelites 14, the Whigs 240, and the Radicals 94. This gave the Whigs a decided majority. In 1862, there were 307 Conservatives, 12 Peelites, 238 Whigs, and 96 Radicals. In 1863, the numbers were 312 Conservatives, 11 Peelites, 234 Whigs, and 95 Radicals. In 1864, 318 Conservatives, 13 Peelites, 234 Whigs, and 96 Radicals. In 1865, the count runs thus: Conservatives 317, Peelites 13, Whigs 231, and Radicals 95. The result is that, since the present Parliament first met, the Conservatives have gained 30 and lost 12. making a net gain of 18, while the number of the Whigs has had a decline of 9, and the Radicals have remained stationary. Therefore, were a division to take place upon an important question, the Palmerston Administration must be defeated. We should be sorry if this defeat were to occur. for the new Derby Ministry would be far less fair and friendly to the United States than Lord PALMERSTON and his colleagues have latterly been. A rumor has crept into the English papers that a demand is to be made, during the present Session, for an increase of $150,000 per annum to the yearly allowance of $500,000 now paid for the support of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and that this augmentation will be justified on the ground of the expense thrown upon the Prince and his wife by being obliged to moins and give

Mr. SUMNER. O' Managacusetts, spoke at length in lavor of the bill, which he said was simed against the odious doctrine of State rights. It was designed to break up a monopoly which levied tribute on every passenger between the oties of New York and Wash-ington-between the political and the commercial capi-tals of the nation. The pretensions of the Canden and Amboy Railroad were menacing to the Union itself. It was a misance which should be abated, and a userpa-tion which should be overthrown. Mr. Snamer them sagued the question of the constitutionality of the mea-sure, helding that, under the Constitutionality of the mea-ting one to regulate commerce between the States, to establish post-outes, and to raise and support armites, under any one of which it could pass the bill under con-sider alors. · CITY POINT, VA., Feb. 12, 1865. From the reports of deserters, and from other sources of information equally reliable, it would seem that General Lee is contemplating an attack EMPLOYMENT OF NEGROES AS SOLDIERS. Mr. Barksdale, of Mississippi, offered a bill "to in-erease the military force of the Confederate States." The first section of the bill provides that in order to provide additional forces to repai invasion and to se-cure the independence of the Confederate States, the President be authorized to ask for and accept from the owners of slaves the services of such inmber of able-bedied negro mon as he may deem expedient to per-form military services in whatever capacity the General-in-chief may circet. The second section provides that the President be au-thorized to organize the raid slaves into companies, bat-talions, regiments and bigades, under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of War may preseribe, and to be commanded by such officers as the President may the first excitation of the raid the train the trainest may the trainest and bigades. on our centre, and is making, or has made, the necessary dispositions for such a movement. I wrote you yesterday that if the enemy ventured any of-fensive movement at all, it would be most likely directed against the centre of our lines. The tempta-tion to make the effort is very great, for, with our lines at present so extended, the centre would naturally seem to be the weakest point, and if the enemy could gain any advantage here he might claim a decisive vistory. We know from experience that it is a favorite species of tactics with Lee to mass upon our centre, and endeavor to pierce it. In the present campaign this seems to be the only plan of operations remaining to the rebel commander. The Army of the Potomac can no longer be fianked, and if it is to be dislodged it can only be by cutting it in two.

Accordingly, Lee is reported to be massing all his available troops around Petersburg, with the view of making an attack. The scream of the locomotive-whistles on the Southside road can be dis-Mr. Miles, of Fourth Carolina, moved that the bill be rejected. He wanted to test the sense of the Homes upon this subject of arming negroes. He wanted to have a vote upon it. Mr. Marshall, of Kentucky. Yes, let us have a vote on it. Let the country know where we stand. Mr. Bartridge, of Georgia, asred this the vote on the hejection of the bill be taken by ayes and noes. Mr. Bartridge, of Georgia, asred this the vote on the select committee of one from each State. After what had been said by the chairman of the Milliary Committee (Mr. Miles) it was syldent that he bad prejudges the question. All he (Mr. B) desired was a fair investigation of the bill, and such a report as its me: its and the deminds of the country absolutely require. He did not desire to enter puol fis discussion how, but would say that he had introduced the bill un-cer a solemn conviction of duty to his country. It raised no irritating issues. It provided simply that the President should accept the services of ileves to be used as the General in chief. There is evidently something astir. It is accepted here as a certainty that the enemy will speedily attack us. and, likely enough, the point of attack may be somewhere in the vicinity of Meade's Station, where the late feigned assault was made. Such an enterprise may seem rather bold and nazardous for the robel army, but Lee is in a critical position, and must make some such desperate push before long, unless he designs to evacuate Petersburg. Whatever his designs, he will discover that they have been anticipated and prepared for.

Smith, Sused, Swan, Triplett, Villere, The arrivals of deserters within our lines have been in nowise diminished, but have rather been increased by the recent developments of war and peace. A rebel lieutenant who came into our lines on Friday night, with twenty-three of his men, roports that the rebel loss in Monday's fight amounted to three thousand, and that fifteen hundred of their wounded men, who were left on the field, froze to death during Monday night. Of course, these figures largely exceed the truth, especially in regard to the number frozen to death, but it is probable that many met their death in this manner.
